IUPUI PROGRAM TO HELP SOCIAL STUDIES TEACHERS

Central Indiana social studies teachers will attend a three-day training program at IUPUI this summer, which will focus on subjects recently included in the official Indiana textbook adoption list.

The program, from July 30 to August 1, is sponsored by the Social Studies Development Center of Indiana University in co-operation with the Indiana Association for Junior and Senior High School Principals, the Indiana Council for Social Studies and the Indiana Department of Public Instruction, and is supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation.

Subjects considered will include "American Political Behavior," "Patterns in Human History (Anthropology Curriculum Study Project)," "Geography in an Urban Age (High School Geography Project)" and "Sociological Resources for the Social Studies."

Workshops will focus on the use of new materials in classroom projects. Lessons in each subject will be demonstrated by a classroom teacher who has taught the project at least two years. The teacher also will assist in practice-teaching lessons, discuss evaluation of student achievement and consider ways of adapting materials to local conditions.

Designed for high school teachers who will be using (or wish to use) the four projects, the workshops will be offered at no fee with no credit or participant stipend. A one day follow-up session will be scheduled in the fall.

Host for the program is Dr. Leslie A. Wood, professor of education at IUPUI.
