CANCER RESEARCH CENTER ORGANIZED

Hub of a new basic clinical cancer research center being put together by the School of Medicine will be housed in a wing on the third floor of the Clinical Building now being renovated. The center, a cooperative project of the Richard L. Roudebush Veterans Administration Medical Center and I.U., will be known as the Elks Cancer Research Center in recognition of the support given to clinical research at the school for many years by the Indiana Benevolent and Protective Order of the Elks.

In making the announcement, Dr. Steven C. Beering, medical school dean, said that Dr. Ronald Hoffman of the Yale University School of Medicine will head the new center, which will be part of the Department of Medicine. Dr. Hoffman, who already is in Indianapolis, anticipates a Jan. 1 opening date for the center.

The cancer research team, which now is being organized by Dr. Hoffman, will occupy quarters in the V.A. Medical Center and Wishard Memorial Hospital as well as the Clinical Building. "This center will do research on basic aspects of human cancer in order to facilitate treatment of cancers and will afford the most modern therapy of these diseases available," said Dr. Walter Daly, Department of Medicine chairman. "We are fortunate," he said, "to have obtained the services of Dr. Hoffman to add this scientific basis to our strong clinical programs in cancer therapy."

A member of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity, Dr. Hoffman is a graduate of New York University (B.A., M.D.). He has received several awards, among them a research career development award from the National Institutes of Health. He is chairman of the Erythropoietin and Cell Proliferation Subcommittee (his major research interest) of the American Society of Hematology. He is active in several professional organizations and is the author or co-author of 47 scholarly papers published in various medical and scientific journals.

The Elks Cancer Research Center will focus the various efforts already being mounted by the I.U. School of Medicine in search of an understanding of the mechanisms that cause the many different kinds of cancer already identified. Although underwritten in part by the Elks, it will need additional support through grants and donations from the private sector. It joins 10 other specialized centers operated by the School of Medicine, most with grants awarded in national competition from various sources.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS DISCUSSED

Students, staff and faculty members are invited to a free lecture at noon Wednesday which will deal with yet another "hot area" in U.S. foreign relations -- the Indian Ocean -- where the United States is planning to build a huge military installation. Speaker will Marcus Franda from the Universities Field Staff International.

Entitled "The Geo-Politics of the Indian Ocean," the lecture will be in the Lilly Room at the Union Building from noon until 1:30 p.m. Wednesday (Oct. 20). A question-answer period is planned.

Franda, who has written many books and articles on Africa, the Gulf States and Iran, South Asia and the Indian Ocean area, is considered an outstanding authority on India and other developing nations. He has spent nearly 20 years on the subcontinent and joined the Field Staff in 1971. He currently is in Salisbury, Conn., where he is academic director of the Field Staff's Institute of World Affairs. He is being brought to campus by the International Affairs Committee of IUPUI.

PEIRCE SYMPOSIUM MEETS

A symposium on the works of Charles S. Peirce sponsored by the IUPUI Center for American Studies last Friday drew distinguished scholars from places like Texas Tech University, Fordham University, University of Waterloo, Canada, University of Chicago, even the University of Hamburg, West Germany. The symposium commemorated publication of the first volume of the "Writings of Charles S. Peirce -- A Chronological Edition," published last month by the Indiana University Press.

This is the first of a projected 20-volume series being compiled and edited by a small group that has been working at IUPUI for several years under the direction of Edward C. Moore, professor of philosophy and former IUPUI executive dean, and Max H. Fisch, general editor. Other members of the editorial staff are Christian J. W. Kloesel and Don D. Roberts, associate editors, and Lynn A. Zeigler, textual editor.

Born in 1839 and graduated from Harvard University, Peirce made valuable contributions in chemistry, logic, mathematics, psychology, astronomy, philosophy, linquistics and other scientific fields. His inquiries have shed light on fields now "in vogue," such as work in mind/brain research using "artificial intelligence" (computers) and the study of signs, known as semiotics. Peirce died in 1914, leaving behind an enormous mass of unpublished manuscripts as well as his published work.
