RILEY TOURS COMING UP

All employees who wish to see the new addition to Riley Hospital will have their chance Friday when tours will be conducted from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Hospital staff will be stationed at various points of interest to explain the function or concept of the area. Department heads and supervisors are encouraged to schedule their employees, where possible, so that all who want to visit the new Riley may do so. Twenty minutes should be allowed for each tour.

An unusual collection of old and foreign dolls made by Mrs. Beatrice Dailey, director of the print shop, now are on display in the cases in the west entrance to the Union Building. The display, part of a continuing program of art and hobby exhibits sponsored by the Student Union Board, will continue for the rest of June and part of July.

Mrs. Dailey's collection began with some of her own childhood dolls, which she kept. She has made a practice throughout the years of making Christmas articles for sale and using the proceeds to help needy families at Christmas time.

In this project, she acquired and dressed many dolls to give and sell, but only recently has she intentionally collected them.

The Indiana Chapter of Inhalation Therapists held a one-day seminar recently in the Medical Science Building on continuous ventilation and blood gases. Approximately 130 therapists, physicians and nurses from throughout Indiana attended the seminar.

PARK DEPARTMENT NEEDS HELP

If you'd like a healthy, outdoorsy job this summer -- or if you know any teen-agers who would -- there will be a volunteer training session for about an hour Tuesday starting at 1:30 p.m. at the Park Department, 1426 West 29th Street. Sixteen is the minimum age for volunteers to work this summer at 77 different park locations. Summer activities may include dramatics, arts and crafts, regular playground and pool supervision, and many others. If interested, call the Volunteer Bureau, 634-4311, or just appear for the Tuesday meeting.

PUT IT IN WRITING

Edmund F. Byrne, assistant professor in the Department of Philosophy, has been informed that his article, "The Drama of Realtime Complementarity," an analysis of societal evolution and revolution, is one of a set of articles on related topics that will be published by Gordon and Breach. Aided by a Summer Faculty Fellowship, Byrne will be continuing his research into, and developing audio-visual materials regarding man-machine relations. This project is related to a new interdisciplinary area concentration that Byrne has developed within the Department of Philosophy under the title of Technology and Human Values.

WAYS TO LOOK BUSY WHEN YOU'RE REALLY NOT

1. Crumple up 34 sheets of paper and throw them on the floor.
2. Hold a clipboard, and tap your pen on your lip.
3. Tell your spouse or beau to call you every 57 minutes, disguising his or her voice.
4. Write down fake appointments on your desk calendar.
5. Have your receptionist or secretary page you at regular intervals.
6. Call the weather information number and say "uh-huh" after every statistic.
7. Guess how many paper towels are left in the container in the office bathroom. Then go find out how close you are.
8. Proofread the phone book and update the information.
9. Call the medical records department, and ask them to look up a file on a fictitious person.
10. Don't shove; come in 10 minutes early; bring in cigarette butts and fill up your ashtray; lay your head on your desk feigning sleep and when your boss walks into your office, say, "Oh, is it morning already?"
11. Count the number of lines in the palm of your left hand.

(The above advice was stolen from the Medicovan, publication of the Medical College of Virginia.)
