New Nursing Program--Marian College and IUPUI have entered into a cooperative program to train students for the bachelor of science degree in nursing beginning next September.

Under the agreement, approved by the faculties of both institutions, students may enroll at Marian College where they will study the liberal arts and sciences for two years, after which time the participants will automatically transfer to the School of Nursing at the Medical Center.

"One of the new features of this nursing program," according to Sister Mary Norma Rocklage, academic dean at Marian, "is that the actual grades the nursing students earn at Marian will transfer with them. Customarily transfer students only have their credit hours transferred to another institution, and they lose the grade-point standing and class rank achieved at the first college or university."

The Bachelor of Science in Nursing program requires four years of college and training. In the past, Indianapolis-area residents wishing to earn the degree from I.U. have had to live on the Bloomington or other I.U. regional campus for at least the first year of work in the liberal arts and sciences.

Under the cooperative program, nursing students in the Indianapolis area may either live at home and attend Marian or live on Marian's campus. "Their final degree, however, will be from I.U. and housing at the Medical Center will be available during the last two years," Sister Norma said.

During the second year of training at Marian, nursing students will take two courses under the direction of Indiana University. In addition, Nursing School Dean Emily Holmquist anticipates that the freshmen and sophomore students will be able to conduct some hospital field work, a feature which often is lacking during those years on the other campuses.

I.U. also has agreed that Marian students eligible for and receiving financial aid during the first two years will have that aid continued, as long as their economic and scholastic conditions do not change.
