Nursing prof honored by Aussie committee

Beverly C. Flynn, professor and chairman, department of community health nursing at IUPUI, has been invited by the Australian Council of Community Nursing to present three papers at the National Community Nursing Congress in Melbourne, Australia.

The congress will convene March 13-15 in Melbourne, Australia. Following the Congress she has also been invited to consult with community nursing institutions service institutions on community health nursing.

Civil rights activist will speak at convention here

Vincent Hardy, a scholar who served on the front lines in the civil rights movement of the 1960s and now a professor of religion in Denver, will speak at IUPUI in March to give the keynote address at a major national conference.

Harding will open the March 28-30 public conference on "Re-Visioning America: Religion in American Life," sponsored by the Center for American Studies and the Department of Religious studies at IUPUI.

Wishard closes 26-bed in-patient unit

by Tammy Cecil

Due to a decline in in-patient services, Wishard Memorial Hospital has taken a 26-bed unit out of service as of Feb. 25.

In a letter to hospital staff,

Alan H. Channing, a hospital administrator, said the situation was not unique to Wishard as many other hospitals are experiencing in-patient declines.

Wishard has had 518 beds available for the past several years, but since September 1984 the hospital has not exceeded 342 patients at one time.

Unit A5 was closed in order to bring expenses in line with the hospital's activities. Patients were placed on other units and staff members were offered alternative employment.

Biochemistry prof wins third teaching award

Robert A. Harris, voted "Outstanding Professor in Basic Sciences" for three consecutive years, has received the 1985 Edward C. Moore award for outstanding teaching at IUPUI.

"In spite of his great accomplishments," one student wrote, "he maintains a humility which yields an impeccable integrity to his work and creates an environment where new ideas are readily born."

Absentee ballots upset medical, dental students

by Roslyn Dillard

A larger turnout at the polls is expected this year for student government elections, according to Mark Preston, chairman of the Election Committee.

"Last year only 1,000 students voted," he said.

John L. Sullivan, an election committee member, however, said complaints raised by medical and dental students will figure prominently in election issues.

"The Student Court will be confronted by the concerns placed by the medical and dental schools about polling times. They fear they won't be able to vote," Sullivan said.

Bill Varelzdis, a Medical student and election committee member, summed up the problem.

"We have 600 students involved in clinical activities who don't have access to the polling places. We requested absentee ballots for students in the medical and dental schools, but they gave us only 600," Varelzdis said.

With a total enrollment of 1,200 in the IU Med School, Varelzdis said the school needs more ballots. "It isn't probable, we'll receive them due to the uproar raised by undergrads."

Twelve students from the Medical school are running for office, a first, Varelzdis said.

"We, the south side of Michigan St. are finally becoming interested in what's going on," he said.

Dorms, Fitness Center slated for campus

Will be used during Pan Am Games

by Mark Goff

The future of two multi-million dollar development projects planned by the city for the IUPUI campus will be decided within the next 45 days. Meanwhile, those opposing the $45.7 million "Pan Am" bond are trying to gather enough signatures to defeat it.

They will have 45 days, beginning March 11, to gather enough signatures to defeat the proposal. Only one more signature than those gathered by city officials in support of the petition is needed to cancel the entire bond.

According to preliminary estimates from the city's Department of Metropolitan Development, $18 million from the bond issuance will be used to construct athlete housing, and another $3 million to build the U.S. Fitness Center.

The proposed housing would include the renovated Lockefield Gardens complex, on the campus' north side, and an additional 250 new units. The new housing will be constructed in a triangular shaped parcel of land bordered by Indiana Avenue, Blake Street and Walnut Street.

Plans call for the apartments to be used by athletes during the games, then placed on the market afterwards.

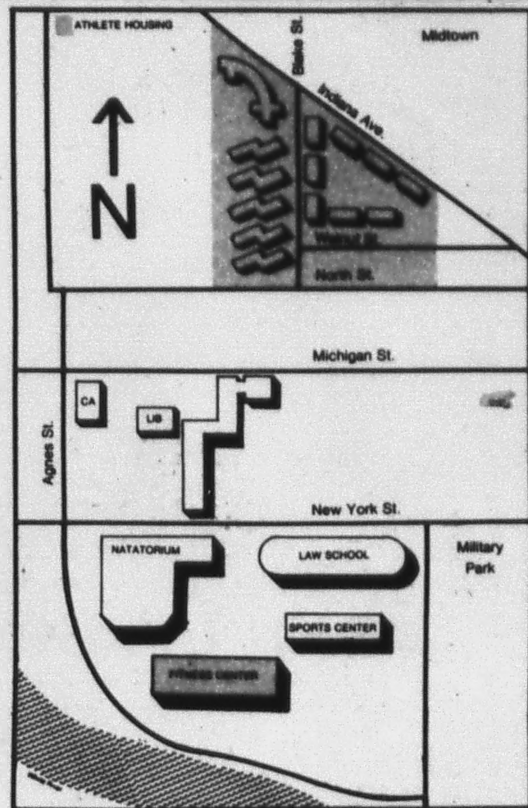

The U.S. Fitness Center is also hoping for bond support to pay part of its $9 million construction costs.

The center is planned for a seven-acre site situated south of the Natatorium and the Indianapolis Sports Center. Approximately $3 million from the bond will help finance the center, which will be supported by the President's Council on Physical Fitness.

City officials are hoping that with the fitness center Indianapolis will be named as one of three U.S. Olympic training sites.

Construction of this center is separate from another similar project once planned by The National Fitness Foundation.

Turner strives to help others as counselor

Landon Turner

by Bret Paul Williams

If you want to forget the gloomy season the IU basketball team is having, try remembering the great 1981 season.

That was the year IU went through opposing teams the way Bobby Knight now goes through starting players.

The '81 team included the likes of Landon Turner and Isiah Thomas. After IU had won the NCAA tourney fans set their sights on the '82 season.

Even though Thomas was leaving, Turner was only a junior. His dynamic play in the '81 season seemed to indicate that chances for a repeat performance were likely.

However, any hopes consecutive championships were shattered in the summer of '81. On a trip to King's Island, Turner's car left the road resulting in an accident that left him paralyzed from the waist down.

"All I remember is waking up five days later. I saw all the lights in the hospital and I

It's up to you

What is the Student Assembly and why does it exist?

Those are two questions many IUPUI students are unable to answer. And with student elections coming up next week it is time they were resolved.

First of all, according to Steve J. Akard, current president of the Student Assembly (SA), the assembly's purpose is to represent students at administrative meetings and to provide services for them.

One of the services Akard mentioned is the SA's typing room.

Janet Lowe, a transient student from Notre Dame, said she knows "nothing about the assembly except that they're the people who have the key to the typing room."

She is not alone. The sum of knowledge many students have of the assembly is based on their experiences in using the typing room, which the SA provides for students free of charge in Cavanaugh 001D.

The assembly is composed of the president and vice-president, 18 senators representing IUPUI's schools and divisions, and 18 other senators at-large. The senators keep the president and vice-president in touch with the needs of the student body.

Akard said this representation is very important, because he and Gary Messplay, the vice-president, rely on the senators' observations when they present their findings to any one of the administration's numerous committees.

Among the listed committees are Parking, Financial Aid, Library, Affirmative Action and the Student Affairs Advisory Council. Akard noted that the Student Affairs Advisory Council is now making decisions about the allocation of the Activity Fee.

This is one example of where the senators come in handy, he said, because they can relate to him what areas students feel are in need of more Activity Fee funding.

Last year, Akard added, the University Faculty Council attempted to dispose of the FX policy, a regulation which allows students who receive an 'F' in any given class to take the course over to raise their G.P.A.

"The FX policy was going to be done away with but the assembly representatives protested and it was retained," Akard said.

Gary Messplay, added that the assembly also is lobbying at the General Assembly this semester to present IUPUI's student body's needs to state legislators.

Presumably, the above services are useful and in the interest of IUPUI's student body. So why, then, do so few students turn out every spring to vote?

Last year only .04 percent of IUPUI's 23,000 registered students participated in the Student Assembly elections.

Mark Preston, chairman of the Election Committee, blames the low turnout on "voter apathy." However, Preston said he believes there will be a larger voter response this year because the major issue of the election is the Activity Fee.

Messplay attributed the lack of student response to the candidates themselves.

"In the past they haven't motivated the students and informed them of the issues at stake," he said. "There are a lot of things that are going to affect them that they never find out about."

From March 25-30, students will have a chance to cast their votes at various sites around campus to decide who will succeed Akard, Messplay, and the current senator.

This semester, as usual, it's up to the students to find the real issues and take time to decide whether it's worth voting on or not.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Veronica Needler's letter in which she responded to Justin Walsh, who questioned whether The Sagamore should print advertisements for abortion clinics. First, I want to make it very clear that I am a WOMAN who agrees with Mr. Walsh about this issue.

I believe the entire issue of abortion has been clouded with statements such as Ms. Needler's, which ask whether the life of the woman is being considered. Of course, nobody wants to see a woman suffer or be burdened with a baby that she doesn't want. The fact is, though, that women have choices. Women may choose from a number of birth control methods—such as the pill, or simply to abstain from sexual intercourse until she is ready to face the possibility of becoming pregnant.

Once a woman has become pregnant, the life inside her has no choice. It is completely at the mercy of the woman. I think that is what most anti-abortionists are concerned about. Although people debate the issue about when life begins, the fact of the matter is that the being inside the pregnant woman is a human life—or, to those who question this, will be if allowed to be born. While we are debating women's rights, we are neglecting to the rights of the human being in the pregnant woman's body. Doesn't that life deserve to have his/her life protected, too?

Turner

thought it was a dream, a nightmare," said Turner. "Then the doctors came in and told me I had been in an accident."

"Landon has never let his handicap get him down," said Ida Turner, Landon's mother. "He has always been cheerful and in high spirits, even during the months of therapy that he endured."

Indeed, when you meet Turner you can feel the confidence in the 24-year-old man. His confinement to a wheelchair does little to hide 6'8", 230 pound frame.

Turner just recently accepted the position of acting coordinator of minority affairs at IUPUI. He seems motivated to fulfill the job requirements.

"I can already see things that need attention," Turner said. "Through my experiences in school I feel I can be a positive factor here."

"I plan to visit area high schools and possibly arrange for high school students to visit the campus."

Turner said the support he received after his accident has made him eager to help others.

"So many people have helped me since the accident that I want to return the favor. The love that all those people showed me has made me a better person."

"If any good came from the accident, it's that it has made me mature. I am now in a position where I can help others."

Turner worked briefly as a guidance counselor in the athletics department on the Bloomington campus.

He still maintains close ties with IU coach Bobby Knight. Prior to coming to IUPUI, Turner was in Bloomington helping with the IU basketball team. Though he enjoys working with the players, Turner has no ambition to coach.

That is one desire I have never had," Turner said. "I just wanted to play and do my best on the court."

"I do like to talk to the players and give them pointers. I've been through what they're going through now and I can give them the benefit of my experience."

When Turner saw one of the IUPUI Metro players on campus, the pair wasted no time in getting around to the subject of basketball. The young player was concerned about an upcoming game and Turner helped to reassure him with technical advice.

Turner laughed about Bobby Knight's latest antics during the IU-Purdue game last month.

"It didn't really surprise me when he threw the chair," said Turner. "I have seen him do worse things in practice. I just think he's tired and frustrated at some of the referees."

Turner enjoys an independent life-style. He owns his own vehicle specially equipped with hand controls and has his own apartment.

"After I got out of the hospital my father helped me quite a bit," Turner said. "One day I told him to quit helping and I have been on my own since."

Turner complains that some facilities are poorly equipped for handicapped persons, particularly in the case of a wheelchair," he said.

Turner holds a positive outlook on life, a quality he would like to instill in students.

"I want to help prepare them for life after school," he said.

The NFF decided to locate its fitness academy in Orange County, California, because they could not secure enough vacant land from a local university or the city.

In a recent news conference, Mayor William H. Hudnut III said the bond projects will "contribute to the ongoing progress and revitalization of our city."

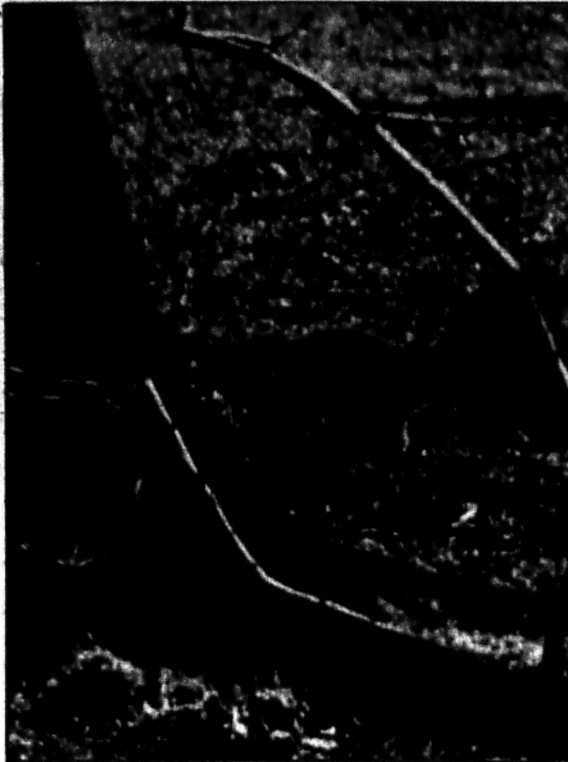

Carl Moldthan of the Indiana Taxpayers' Association is opposing the bond. Moldthan feels the bond would place a burden on local taxpayers. While he has said that the projects are worthwhile, he favors an increase in the restaurant and beverage tax, as a financing mechanism.

Mayor Hudnut said, if the bond is defeated, "We (the city) will be saying that we're committed to a policy of no growth." Hudnut added that defeat of the bond would give the U.S. Olympic Committee a bad impression of our city.

The Olympic Committee has requested that the athlete housing be centralized, to create a secure environment, and minimize transportation problems.

Hudnut said if the bond is defeated, and the housing is not constructed on campus, the athletes would be spread out from Bloomington to Lafayette.

City officials claim in the long run the projects will contribute substantially to the tax base. They estimate the 1,547 permanent jobs, with an annual payroll of approximately $24 million would be created if all of the bonds projects are completed.

Symposium to discuss principles of children's theatre

by Robert M. Aull

When the IUPUI Children's Theatre Playwriting Competition opened last July at a luncheon in the Marriott Hotel, Bob Keeshan spoke about children's theater and the importance of standards in children's entertainment. Few in the audience had ever listened so seriously to Captain Kangaroo.

Now, ten months later, IUPUI University Theatre has a winning play cast for production and is still talking about standards. As a result, the play Hallelujah Hopscotch will open March 22 at 8 p.m. as part of a Children's Theatre Symposium entitled "Setting Critical Standards."

The symposium will run

March 22 and 23, and will also include staged readings of the five semi-finalist plays selected during the competition.

The Great Lakes Region Children's Theatre Association of America (CTAA) will conduct its annual conference in conjunction with IUPUI's symposium, and will perform staged productions of five plays selected from each of its member states.

CTAA members will be addressed by Aurand Harris, the most prolific children's playwright in America. Mr. Harris is currently in residence at IUPUI teaching a children's playwriting course. He has also been commissioned to write an original children's drama for the White River State Park Arts Festival to be held this summer.

Also speaking at the symposium will be Mr. Orlin Corey, editor of the largest children's dramatic literature press in America; Dr. Roger Bedard, editor of Dramatic Literature for Children: A Century in Review; and Dr. Rachel Fordyce, a board member of the Children's Literature Foundation.

The winner, Hallelujah Hopscotch by Rachael Burckhard, will receive a $1000 award towards production, and opens following the banquet in the Mary Cable Building.

Hallelujah Hopscotch uses as its title the name of a fairy sprite who must convince an unbelieving child that fairies do, in fact, exist. Highlighted by music, poetry, and dance, the play is a vivid reminder of the power of the imagination. It will be staged on Saturday, March 23 at 2:30 p.m. for the general public. The play will then tour local elementary schools as this year's selection for the IUPUI Children's Theatre Touring Company.

Tickets for Hallelujah Hopscotch are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children, and may be purchased from University Theatre at 264-2094, or Ticket-Master outlets. Those attending the symposium must make separate reservations for the play. The symposium is offered free of charge to those who preregister before March 20. A $25 registration fee will be charged at the door.

On Saturday, the CTAA will also present Charlotte's Web in the Mary Cable Building at 10:30.

Art League attracts both amateurs and pros

by Susan Mattox

The Indianapolis Art League is a growing thoroughfare for amateur and professional artists. Joyce Sommers, the executive director, said "We want people to know that Indianapolis is not just sports. We feel that art goes hand-in-hand with the other important elements of the city."

The Art League's primary objective is visual art and Sommers feels that this objective encompasses three main goals. The first is to promote and stimulate the visual arts through classes for adults and children. Another goal is to exhibit and highlight regional Indiana artists, from beginners to professionals. The third is to serve as a visual arts resource center, with an art registry for area artists that provides competitive and work-related opportunities.

The Art League offers 65 classes and employs 50 professional artists. Sommers stressed, "All classes are open to the public. Anybody is welcome — from children and students to senior citizens." Course offerings include traditional art forms such as painting and drawing, and craft forms such as weaving, jewelry making and calligraphy. The Art League also offers seasonal and event-oriented workshops such as kite making in the spring and egg painting at Easter.

Classes allow students to work at their own potential without the pressure of grades and testing. This is an ideal situation, Sommers said, for those who want to start "a new segment in their lives and who want to expand creativity." She added that this drive towards creativity has become a national trend and accounts in large part of the Art League's rapid growth.

Student Kathryn Clem, for instance, has always had an interest in calligraphy. Her aunt, a local painter and Art League member, encouraged her to enroll in a calligraphy class. After only three weeks, Clem is confident that joining the class was a step in the right direction. She said, "Because you get to meet with other people in a classroom type atmosphere, there is a greater exchange of ideas, which is really helpful to a beginner. I suppose calligraphy is the kind of art that people could teach themselves, but I'm glad I took this class because I would have missed out on so much."

Sommers feels that IUPUI's Herron School of Art and the Art League complement each other. Herron is degree-oriented, whereas the Art League is not. They do encourage students to take part in their two-year diploma program, however, which resembles an associate degree. And Arthur Weber, the dean of Herron School of Art, is a member of the Art League's advisory board.

The Art League aims to show all types of artists and their work in both a local and national context. In a recent workshop, for instance, the work of New York artists was shown in conjunction with that of local artists.

The League also wants to collaborate with the community to, as Sommers said, "Promote the cultural vitality of the city. We want the leaders of the city to be aware of this vital link." The Art League has a prominent seat on the Arts Committee for the Pan-Am games that will be held here.

To take classes or join the Art League, call 255-2464 or stop by at 820 E. 67th St. in Broad Ripple. Open studio space is available for low rental rates. Admission to exhibits is free.

Metros
take District

by Abby Marmion

IUPUI's men's basketball history hit the record books March 6 when they upset no. 1 Tri-State University 71-68 at Angola to take their first District 21 crown.

The win brought the Metros to a 21-14 standing, their 12th straight win and a spot in the NAIA National Championships.

The first 10 minutes of the game looked to be a close thing for the Trojans as they acquired a 10-point lead over IUPUI.

After a time out and a chance to get their composure, the Metros came back to score 16 unanswered points and pull them to a 5-point lead. They held on and went to the locker room with a 34-29 margin over Tri-State.

The Trojans weren't about to give up easily and the second half proved to be a final struggle. IUPUI kept their lead until the 34:40 mark and eventually went down by 3. But with 10:00 to go it was tied up at 48. From then on it was a Metro ballgame.

When the final buzzer sounded the players rejoiced, the nets were cut down, the trophy was awarded and the players left with memories of a long-awaited dream come true.

Women win racquetball title

by Abby Marmion

IUPUI is quickly becoming a name to be reckoned with. The school's athletic program boasts national-caliber teams in men's basketball and women's softball, and now the trophy case has an intercollegiate regional racquetball crown to add to its collection.

Despite the fact that IUPUI does not have an official team or club, three students entered the Intercollegiate Regional Racquetball Championships sponsored by Purdue last month and took the women's overall team title hands down.

Schools from four states were represented including IU, Purdue, Illinois and Illinois State.

IUPUI's Annemarie Gavalos collected three wins in the singles category to take first place in the no. 2 division. She ousted two opponents from the Big Ten's Illinois and Purdue.

Michelle LaBonne, defending intercollegiate state champion, took three firsts in the no. 1 singles division, earning her a first place trophy. She clinched the title when she defeated teammate and doubles partner Kelly Cremeans in the final round of play. Cremeans had a second place overall standing in division no. 1.

The icing on the cake came on the last day of competition when LaBonne and Cremeans combined for their third consecutive doubles win, sewing up the overall title for IUPUI.

Not bad for three girls without a team or coach.

"We really want to organize a racquetball club for IUPUI."

Since it's a commuter college I'm sure there are people from all around the area playing in tournaments at different clubs.

There could be a lot of unknowns who might contribute," LaBonne said.

The girls train at various racquetball clubs in Indianapolis and coach each other as well as receiving help from other players at the clubs.

"I practice a lot with an open player at my club," LaBonne said. "We play doubles together in the open division and he's the closest thing I've had to a coach."

LaBonne and Cremeans are also ranked no. 4 and 5 respectively in the Indiana women's open category while Gavalos stands at no. 14 in the A Division.

LaBonne and Cremeans will advance to the Intercollegiate National Championships in Memphis, Tenn. this April. Both are eligible to compete at singles but will probably concentrate solely on doubles competitions.

"I think we have a good chance to come out on top. Kelly and I are at an advantage to most doubles partners. We know each other's game and thinking, which makes it easier to overcome two singles partners playing doubles," LaBonne said.
