

Schlafly, DeCrow face off at IUPUI

by Laura Burris

The Progressive Student Union and the Women's Student Caucus presented last Thursday evening a debate between Karen DeCrow and Phyllis Schlafly on the topic of "Women on the Role of Women."

JauNae Hanger, of the PSU, first introduced Karen DeCrow, a New York constitutional lawyer who has worked for many years to achieve equality between the sexes and who is a past national president for the National Organization for Women (NOW).

Hanger then introduced Phyllis Schlafly, a member of the Illinois Bar, national chairman of "Stop ERA," the author of The Power of the Positive Woman, author of a syndicated column, and the mother of six children.

Lori Wolner moderated the debate. Wolner is the recipient of many academic awards, an experienced debater, and a member of both PSU and WSC.

Both speakers answered, in a ten minute opening statement, "What is woman's role in society today?"

Schlafly outlined the development of women's roles throughout history, which proved the adage, she said, "... a woman's work is never done." She also mentioned the burdens of hard labor women have always shared with men.

"And then, something wonderful happened!" Schlafly continued. "The great American enterprise system became so productive that by the time of World War I, an average American worker — in a forty-hour week — was able to make enough not only to support himself but to support his wife and his children. And he was able to take his wife out of the factories and the fields and the sweatshops and the mines ... and allow her to have a better quality of life in the home ...

That trend has reversed, Schlafly continued, and women's return to the drudgery that is the reality of most paid jobs is called "liberation" by the women's movement.

Schlafly further advocated the idea of a woman having two careers: one at home with her family and one in the work force. She feels it is a privilege of women to be able to do different things at different times of their lives. She drew laughter from the crowd when she mentioned a woman being "queen of her home."

DeCrow began her opening statement by saying that Schlafly's comments were very difficult to argue, but that the privileges Schlafly advocated for women are deserved just as much by men.

"Men should not be the wallet for women," DeCrow stated, receiving immediate applause from the audience.

"A woman's place is: everywhere," she said, receiving more applause.

DeCrow said there was an implication from her opponent that the reversal to the need for two wage earners was the fault of the women's movement. "I think that's absolutely true," replied DeCrow. "As a matter of fact, it could be that we'll have to go into menage-a-trois just to be see Debate, page 6

Computerized registration system in the works

by Michael W. Meiring

"If things continue satisfactorily we should be able to offer the new system in April, 1983," states Richard E. Slocum, IUPUI registrar, concerning the new registration system that will feature "mail-in fee payment" and promises to alleviate the problem of long waiting lines.

According to Slocum, discussion of a new system took place in May, 1979. At the same time IUPUI was re-evaluating its course reservation system, IU-Bloomington was reconsidering theirs also. It was then the Indiana University administration decided it would be advantageous to have the two core campuses on the same system.

After meetings with the offices of the bursar, registrar, financial aids and admissions, a computerized registration system was designed. Slocum says by the end of this month, the complete detailed design will be completed for both campuses.

Under the new system, there will no longer be course registration, so to speak.

Basically, students will receive a notice through the mail of the classes they are enrolled in and the total cost of their fees. They will be able to mail their fees in or, if they wish, pay in person.

There will still be a need for personal contact with the registrar's office. For example, students will still need to come to school to enroll in their courses. The difference is this will be handled by appointment only.

The registrar will send out the appointment cards to the students. Slocum says his office has not yet determined how the appointments will be determined, however, students will have the opportunity to call and schedule another appointment if the first one is inconvenient.

Once the system is implemented, the month of November will be used to enroll for spring courses and April will be used to enroll for summer and fall courses. Students will no longer reserve courses. They will be enrolling in courses.

Financial aid students

The Bursar's office is developing a Student Accounts Receivable system (SAR). When this is completed, the registrar will be able to send out a "net due" bill. Completion of the SAR system will come some time after the registration system is under way.

Immediate benefits will not be noticed by financial aid students. Unfortunately, students receiving financial aid will have to pay their fees in person.

"Our goal is for the student to have to make only one trip to school for enrolling in classes," explains Slocum.

"The second trip will be the first day of classes; sort of a one-stop shopping system."

The projected cost for the whole project is not readily available, according to Slocum. One question still to be answered which will help determine the cost is whether to purchase or lease the equipment needed. "I'm hoping we can implement this system without any significant increase in cost," adds Slocum.

Of course, the registrar will save some on labor costs but the remaining personnel will need to be trained to run the computers. Slocum also expresses concern that faculty and students understand the system and how it will work.

(Editor's note: As information becomes available, the Sagamore will be explaining the new system in more detail.)

Advisory Committee announces guidelines

SPAC Chairman, George Carter, announced today that the revised guidelines are now available to all groups interested in the activity fee.

All student groups are advised to obtain a copy of the new documents as soon as possible. The guidelines will be available in the Student Activities Office, CA322; the Student Services Office in the Library, LY002; the Student Assembly Office, CA001C; and the Student Group Room, CA001D.

The deadline for receiving budget proposals and letters of intent has been set for Friday, April 30, 1982.

For further information contact: Mike Wagoner in the Student Activities Office, 264-3931, or George Carter at the Student Assembly Office, 264-3907. Or, you may also call Jean Hight at 264-4531 for information about the Activity Fee Budget Cycle.

Observations

Schlafly, DeCrow debate: congratulations PSU, WSC

It was almost too good to be true.

Phyllis Schlafly and Karen DeCrow came to IUPUI last week and the students, faculty and general public turned out in droves. The crowd was estimated from 1000 to 1200, depending on who you talked to.

To some people, this might not seem unusual when you consider both Schlafly and DeCrow are leaders in their respective organizations. Consider also their debates have drawn large crowds wherever they go.

Then consider they were at IUPUI; a commuter campus with no social life to speak of and a campus not known for drawing large crowds for any kind of debate or speech. It took two more rooms to handle the overflow from Lecture Hall Room 101.

Much of the credit for the success of the debate should be given to the Progressive Student Union and the Women's Student Caucus. They sponsored the event and worked long and hard hours to insure a successful debate.

This debate was an excellent example of good use of the student activity fee money. We tip our hat to these two student groups.

Issues not covered

To Editor:

I have to write in support of the letter to the editor concerning the Washington march. This isn't the first time that this has happened. I know of others who have been interviewed by your staff just to have their words twisted around to fit the stance your paper backed. I believe that it is your job to make sure that students are given unbiased news concerning issues that effect us, the students. Often your information during the past year has not been accurate. Also, there have been many events which were important that have gone unreported or that have received very little coverage.

David Toben

Dorm life lacking

As a follow up to last year's Sag article on the high life at Ball Residence, here's the current news.

Room and board (board?) increases 16 percent this summer. We have had some improvements. No more paper towels to litter the bathrooms — we have new hand blowers. (Check it out!) The first floor and stairways are painted once a semester. (The painter must get a bloody nose above first floor unless he's in the stairway.)

Bathrooms are dirty, faucets drip, drains are clogged.

Morale is diving. Groups roam the halls till wee hours shouting and giggling. Those of us who pay less to "live" here sometimes have to wake the guard to ask if she can bring order. That has proved a difficult task for campus police. The best way to study or sleep at Ball Residence is to visit a friend's campus. Racial remarks are becoming common.

Life in the dorm is hitting an all-time low. (Did you ever try living in a dorm on a commuter campus?)

There goes another of those critters! As one of the maids said, "It's just a waterbug."

Teacher failing student

To the Editor:

I have been graded down from a B to a D for writing on the test copy in my Beginning Typing class. I have tried to talk, one on one, with my teacher who continues to walk away from me.

When I have tried to ask about the possibility of a personality conflict, which may be affecting my grade and preventing me from learning, she says, "I resent you for saying that."

When I offer to discuss the test, she says, "We have nothing to talk about." Several other things make me feel as though there is something wrong, such as lack of eye contact.

If she really wanted a student to learn, she would test for knowledge, not try to prove what a strict disciplinarian she is. She would suggest homework assignments when the student expresses a desire to improve. She would talk to each student and give them their progress in class and how to improve. She would want a student to learn.

This represents another failure by the system. She fails to learn the art of positive stroking and better teaching and the student fails to fulfill his potential.

Bookstore careless with pricing

To the Editor:

This letter is basically written for the people who run the bookstore in Cavanaugh Hall. I bought a folder for 39¢ there and was charged 49¢.

I know this may not seem like a lot of money, but if a price is printed on an item then that is the price that should be charged for it. The man ringing the register said the folder had gone up in price, but the old price (39¢) was still listed.

At the time I needed the folder, so I didn't raise a stink about it. But what happens when the bookstore people decide to raise something a couple of dollars and still list the old price but charge the customer the new raised price?

I would advise the bookstore to charge the customer for the price listed not the new raised one or their libel [sic] to find themselves in hot water with someone who is a lot more pissed off than I am.

Louisville hosts local Tae Kwon Do club

Members of the IUPUI Tae Kwon Do Club recently participated in the 21st Mid-West World Tae Kwon Do Association Championships at Louisville, Kentucky.

Held in the Holiday City Convention Center on March 13, the tournament was co-sponsored by the Louisville Karate School and hosted nearly 300 participants from throughout the middle states. This was the second year that IUPUI has been represented.

Participants were expected to show excellence in two events: freestyle fighting and various form drills based on an individual's accomplished belt level. Members found freestyle fighting a bit bruising with only one, purple belt Mickey Howard, advancing beyond the first round. Two members proved outstanding and received trophies for their respective levels, yellow belt Rosemary English (in 4th place) and green belt Jesse Cotheman (in 2nd place).

In addition to the contests, nine international karate masters were present to act as judges and demonstrate impressive advanced techniques such as board and brick breaking.

The most enjoyable demonstrations were given by headmaster Duk Sung Son who holds a ninth degree black belt and sits as president of the World Tae Kwon Do Association. Master Son portrayed the spirit of the art with a self-defense display and his marvelous sense of humor and showmanship. He has come to IUPUI from his home in New York to judge belt tests and an exhibition, and there are hopes of his returning to oversee future contests.

The IUPUI club is affiliated with the World Tae Kwon Do Association and all belts are official. The group is instructed by Chris Hagerty, a 1st degree black belt and graduate of Cornell University, where he first began karate. Chris has had the opportunity to practice under headmaster Son in the past.

Any student or faculty member interested in the club is encouraged to attend practice sessions to review the procedures. All new members begin at the white belt level. Further information is available through the Student Activities Office in Room 322 of Cavanaugh Hall.

able to survive." Her sentence was drowned out by the laughter and applause.

Having early established their favorite, the estimated 1200-member, predominantly female audience continued to support Karen DeCrow, and to laugh and hiss at Phyllis Schlafly often throughout the debate.

DeCrow read from Schlafly's book, The Power of the Positive Woman, "Women don't take naturally to the search for the intangible and abstract. Where men are discursive, logical and abstract and philosophical, women tend to be emotional, personal, practical or mystical." DeCrow cited herself, the moderator and even Schlafly as immediate examples to refute that statement.

Following the opening statements, questions formulated prior to the debate by students were presented to each debator. Discussed were concepts of equality, women's earning power as compared to men's, childhood acculturation which alienates men and women, marriage and physical abuse, sexual harassment in the workplace, and connections between the New Right and the anti-feminist movement.

Schlafly and DeCrow each voiced strong opinions on the draft, a topic of vigorous controversy. Schlafly cited the Soviet Union and Israel as examples of countries which tried and failed to successfully include women in combat. DeCrow's stance was the death of either a young brother or sister in a war would be equally tragic, therefore, men and women should be equally treated in regard to the draft.

A reception in the faculty lounge and a live broadcast on Channel 8's Nightbeat completed the event.

Stiffer fines and fees subject of new library policy

(Editor's note: The Sagamore will be featuring a monthly article on events and programs at the University Library. The library would also like to invite letters from anyone that has a question about the library. Replies will be printed with next month's article.)

by Michael W. Meiring

In an effort to encourage students to return library material more promptly, University Library has adopted a change in policy regarding overdue material from the libraries at the 38th Street campus, Michigan Street campus and the Herron School of Art. The new policy is scheduled to take effect at the beginning of Summer Session I classes.

Current policy calls for an overdue notice to be sent when the material is overdue. If the material has not been returned within the allotted time, a bill for the book is sent out by the library. Within a few days after this, the Bursar's office checklists the student.

The new policy will combine the actions of the library and the Bursar.

According to Barbara

Fischler, head of public services, the new policy will combine the billing process and the checklist notice. Both will be handled by the Bursar.

In addition, a non-refundable $5 processing fee will be sent with the bill. The total bill will have to be paid before the person can be taken off the checklist.

Persons with more than five unreturned items will be subjected to a maximum processing fee of $25.00.

"I'm against a fine policy but we haven't been able to get our books back," commented Ms. Fischler.

Ms. Fischler was pleased to announce the second floor door leading to the Business/SPEA Building is now open. The second floor door is open through Thursday, 10 a.m.-8 p.m. and Friday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
