

Student group room topic of discussion at leadership conference

by Laura Barris

More than 60 leaders of student groups met Sunday, Dec. 6, at the Essex House to get acquainted, discuss common goals and problems and to elect a committee to staff the newly acquired student organizations office in Cavanaugh Hall, Room 001D.

According to David Craig, student body president, Dr. Gary G. Kreps, acting chairman of the department of Theater and Communication, has contributed three months planning, coordinating and making arrangements for this meeting. Lana Allen and Jeannice Hight, of the Student Assembly worked with Kreps. Meetings of this type, Craig said, have been planned before but the last one was cancelled because only three student leaders attended.

Following lunch and an introductory talk by Kreps to explain the purpose of the meeting, six small discussion groups shared goals, gripes and information.

Communication ranked a top concern. Publicity for meetings and events is a universal problem. Suggested solutions included a regular calendar of events published in the Sagamore and the acquisition of bulletin boards (possibly outdoors) solely for the use of student organization notices.

Another topic of intense interest was the Student Program Advisory Committee. The current SPAC chairman, George Carter, explained that SPAC guidelines are being rewritten. There was a consensus that before the new guidelines become official they will be presented to the student leaders for review.

"SPAC is working to refine specific procedures to facilitate the processing of requests," Carter added.

In response to student complaints that the Student Services Advisory Committee consists of only three students to 25 faculty and administration members Carter said, "It has been recommended that SSAC as it currently be abolished. Dean Golan Mannan of Student Services will be taking the place of SSAC in the near future.

Other topics of discussion were the administration's perceived resistance to growth, promoting the image of IUPUI in the community, student apathy, special problems of non-traditional students, transportation to school for handicapped students and the building of a natatorium when it was expressed by the students that a library is needed.

After general discussion, the student groups nominated representatives to form the Student Organizations Board. The five elected members and their group affiliations are: Rich Waples, Progressive Student Union; Pat Jones, Alpha Phi Omega; Randy Snyder, Phi Theta, junior class vice-president; Sheryl Langford, NAACP; and Marta Cruz, Universitarios Hispanos. The two alternates are Jau nae Hanger, Progressive Student Union and Paul Spellman, Delta Sigma Phi.

Their duties will include the organization of the student organizations room and the formulation and administration of the budget for the room.

According to student groups represented at the meetings, this office for the fast-growing roster of student organizations has long been needed. Officially available for use on Monday, Dec. 7, the office will include mailboxes for all recognized organizations, desks and work tables (as soon as funds are received), and a receptionist-secretary. The office will provide an official focal point for communication between student organizations.

"The meeting was a success," said Jinna Kuyahte, president of the Black Student Union. "It has enhanced future relationships between student groups on campus, and BSU thanks the Student Assembly for the opportunity to participate.

David Craig agreed that the meeting was a success and "A large percent of student organizations were represented and relationships between the groups were established. Problems were discussed, but more importantly we set up channels of communication between the groups—and found that problems were similar and that solutions are attainable.

"I want to stress the fact that the Student Assembly will take steps to implement solutions discussed and that we look forward to working with the various student groups toward our common goals."

Work nearly done on natatorium for sports festival

by Matt Shrum

In less than eight months, Indianapolis will be hosting the National Sports Festival on the IUPUI campus.

The new physical education complex is running slightly ahead of schedule, with workers attempting to complete the roof before winter really sets in. The workers have also sodded the soccer field and are laying the track surface.

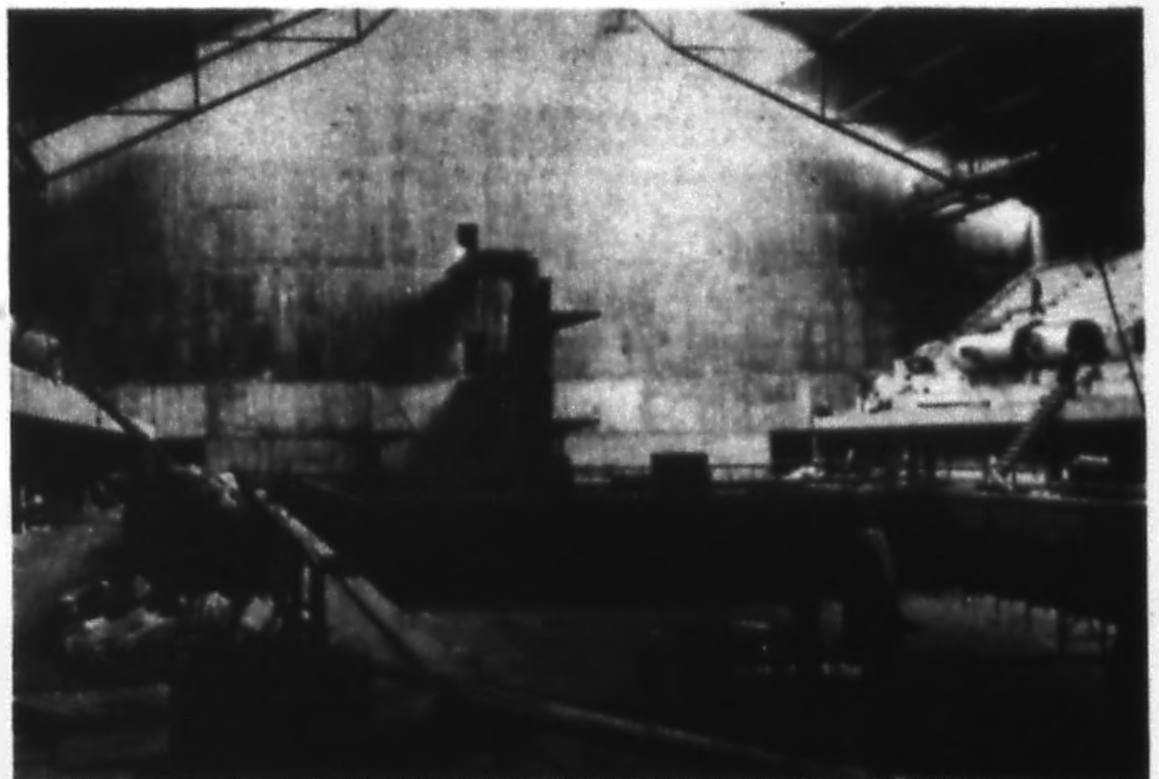

Driving on New York Street, one can also see the outlines of the new softball diamonds and see the foundations for bleachers around the track stadium, which is designed to hold 1500 spectators.

Inside the I.U. Natatorium, the pools have already been filled with water to discover any problem areas. Diving platforms are built into the walls of the diving pool.

The complex is designed to be not only the best in the United States, but also in the world.

IUPUI's School of Physical Education is planning to move into the new building in June. The new complex is expected to cost slightly over $23 million dollars.

Diving platforms and pool are now distinguishable as construction continues on the IU Natatorium. (Photo by Matt Shrum)

Opinion column for students

by Bruce D. Barnett

I am writing this week to say, "thank you," to several groups on campus. The opinion column allows students the opportunity to speak out on issues and events important to them. Personally, I would like to thank all the students on campus who have told me how they feel about my writing and the areas I have discussed. Not everyone agrees with me, and that is the way it should be. It is important that as students we have different voices and ideas. On occasions this column has pointed to the administration and the city government as the object of commentary. Although the comments have always covered serious topics, they may not have read that way.

It is important to realize that we, as students, have the ability to speak out on issues that concern us and ask for some type of change or answers. Part of the semester's commentary was focused on the lack of student participation in campus activities. This may possibly be the most important issue on campus. The active students on campus must find a way to get others involved. We are growing and improving with every semester. We have to insure that this growth is maintained. The Student Assembly, the Sagamore, and other major student groups on campus can only do so much. Students are the most important aspect of any college campus. It is not too late to get involved and help the growth process.

My last "thank you" goes to the administration, staff and faculty of IUPUI. They realize the fact that students are the key to their functions. The university realizes the importance of a student newspaper to the student body. They have done nothing to hamper the free flow of sensitive ideas and concerns for issues on this campus. Writing in the opinion column has been a great education.

Bursar explains fee deferment

The Bursar Office, in an attempt to clarify changes in procedures and policies which were made effective during the fall semester, has released information to assist students registering for the spring semester.

Eligibility for use of the fee deferment option is based on prior payment history. If students have defaulted in the past, they are not eligible for the option. There is a $5 charge for obtaining the personal deferment. Forty percent of total fees (including parking, activity fee, and deferment service charge) must be paid at the time of registration. The balance of the fee is due no later than Feb. 17, 1982 for the spring semester.

If payment is not received in the Bursar Office by Feb. 17, students' enrollments will be cancelled. A cancelled enrollment blocks the recording of grades on academic transcripts. According to university policy, effective August 1981, all fees remain due. The only way to reduce this obligation is to officially withdraw during the refund period. Students will be notified by mail that he or she has been cancelled.

Students may be reinstated by remitting the outstanding balance, plus a $45 reinstatement fee, within 10 days of notification. If students do not reinstate themselves within the 10-day period, an appeal will be required. This appeal will be reviewed by a committee, consisting of administrative personnel and student representatives, which decides whether or not the reinstatement is allowed. If reinstatement is granted by the committee, students have five days to make final payment, including the $45 reinstatement fee.

Any student who is considering the use of this deferment option and has questions concerning the policies or procedures is urged to contact the Bursar Office for clarification before applying for personal deferment.

Riteris Award Committee seeks nominees

The John M. Riteris Award Committee invites present and former students of IUPUI to apply for or to nominate another student or students for the award in biomedical ethics. Last year's award of $100 went to Jo Neighbours for her historical and philosophical analysis of the problem of abortion. The award was made at the Awards Convocation of the School of Liberal Arts.

Contributions which may be considered for receipt of the award include research reports, formal or creative writing, documented accounts of projects, films, videotapes or other creative works. Such contributions may, but need not, have been submitted for credit to a university course.

The two factors which govern eligibility for the award are:

(1) that its author be presently or formerly enrolled at IUPUI; and (2) that the contribution address some biomedical issue or issues.

For further information, contact Professor Mary Mahowald at 264-8926 or 264-8082. The deadline for receipt of applications or nominations is February 1, 1982.

BSU says 'thank you'

November 20 signaled the end of the Black Student Union's Canned Food Drive. We wish to thank each and everyone who contributed. Through your efforts, a vast number of packaged foods and canned goods were donated to the Metropolitan Center.

The Metro Center, 1505 N. Delaware, assists in coordinating 20 emergency crisis pantries in the Indianapolis area. The average number of families served each month by these pantries is greater than 500, or approximately 2,000 individuals per month.

It is important to note that those being served are not the same each month because no family can be assisted more than three times per year.

The Center also provides individuals with homemaking counseling and nutritional tips. The Center encourages donations throughout the year as their project is an ongoing one, twelve months long.

Please contact the Metro Center at 637-3386 for further information about the program or to make donations.

Joy in sharing always surpasses barriers which may exist among people. It is the Black Student Union's hope that the food collected will bring an element of joy to those less fortunate than us. Again, IUPUI students and professionals, thank you.

Student says read financial aid form

To the editor:

This is being written in response to R. W.'s letter published in your December 2, 1981, issue.

I have been attending IUPUI since 1977 and have been a recipient of financial aid throughout my college years. In all my experiences with the financial aids office, never have I once encountered "lack of cooperation, impersonal treatment, or uninformed personnel".

Considering the pressures and federal regulations that employees of the financial aids office have to deal with, I think they do an excellent job of helping students. They do the best job they can to meet their obligations. What I have observed as a problem is student's inability to live up to theirs.

If students requesting aid would take the time to read applications and forms provided by the office, most of their questions would be answered. On numerous occasions I have heard questions asked by students which I know for a fact are explained in detail in the applications.

The financial aids office is guided by very strict federal regulations which I personally feel many of my fellow students do not bother to familiarize themselves with. If time was taken to acquaint oneself with these regulations many people would better understand the actions taken by personnel of the financial aids office. Explanations for actions taken can, and will be, thoroughly explained by a counselor if so requested.

The 17 full-time employees of the financial aids office have approximately 10,000 students to serve and it is my opinion that they do a superb job of helping to meet the financial needs of those who have one!

— Sincerely, Beth M. Sullivan

Satisfied with registration

Dear editor:

Two weeks ago I too went through the registration process here at IUPUI and I am pleased with the procedure. I get tired of reading about the complaints at registration time. I don't mind waiting in line to get the classes I want at the times I want them.

At other schools such as Purdue, they do register class by a computer but for the most part one has no say in the time of the class, what days, or the professor. Your class is randomly chose. IUPUI's system does have a few problems but, over all, I think the system works well.

With a school as large as IUPUI, there are bound to be a few problems. If standing in line is your major complaint, you could always try Butler, Indiana Central or, even better, Purdue.

Don't change the registration process. I LIKE IT.

B.D.T.

Dean Mannan responds to R. W.

To the editor:

This is in response to the letter written by R.W. and observations made by S.L.H. regarding the inadequacies of the IUPUI Financial aids Office.

The staff of the Financial Aids Office strives very hard to serve the needs of the students. Needless to say, human beings as they are, they are apt to make mistakes. If those mistakes are pointed out, efforts are always made to correct them.

R.W. mentioned that he was given erroneous information again and again. I would be curious to find out what kind of erroneous information he received. Sometimes correct information from the Financial Aids Office depends on the questions asked by the student or the amount of information the student gives about himself.

Since you have printed a letter without name and address, I would appreciate it if R.W. would contact me about the nature of the problem. We, the IUPUI administration, are always willing to listen and solve a problem if it is brought to our attention. We always encourage our students to do so.

I would also appreciate it if, in the future, the Sagamore adheres to the standard journalistic policy of not printing a letter that does not have the name and address of the writer.

Sincerely,
Golam Mannan
Dean for Student Services
University Library 002

*Editors note: Although it is standard journalistic policy to obtain the name and address of the authors of letters-to-the-editor, it is not required that this information be published. The right to divulge that information, even upon request, is up to the author of the letters and not the Sagamore.*

Metros win three in a row, increase record to 4-2

by Ann Miller

With six games already under their belts, and currently riding a three game winning streak, the IUPUI Metros now stand at 4-2 prior to tonight's battle with Tri-State at Indiana Central (7:30 p.m.).

Millikin College was the team's most recent victim in a 71-70 squeaker at ICU Dec. 3. Starting out slowly, the Metros soon gained their poise and were up by two, 32-30, at the break. The Metros stormed out to a 38-32 margin early in the second half, but Millikin steadily whittled the gap, finally taking a 56-54 lead with 5:58 to go in the game.

The Metros refused to buckle. Rallying behind Eric McKay's 3-point play, Tony Hawkins' two free throws, and a breakaway bucket by Ron Angevine from Kim King, they claimed the lead for good, 63-62, at the 2:21 mark. King ultimately iced the game by sinking two charities with six seconds left, giving coach Mel Garland's netters a three-point edge, 71-68. Millikin's Eddie Taylor scored at the buzzer for the 71-70 final.

Taylor and Wayne Dunning were high point men for Millikin with 18 apiece. Hawkins' 20 points won game honors, while the other four IUPUI starters — King (16), Angevine (14), McKay (11), and Scott Boles (10), who replaces the sidelined Reggie Butler — also cracked double figures.

Considering that the team has been laboring without the services of 3-year letterman and starting center Reggie Butler since the Hanover contest, Garland is pleased with his team's efforts so far, with perhaps, one exception. The Metros started with a dissatisfying loss to Purdue-Calumet on Nov. 20, a game Garland contends his netters should have won. Unhappy with the Metros' lack of intensity and seemingly overconfident attitude in their first outing, he said later, "They (Purdue-Calumet) caught us flat-footed. We played as poorly as we could have, yet they only beat us by one point."

Afterwards, the coach must have had a lengthy talk with his charges. The next night, Nov. 21, the Metros annihilated IU-Fort Wayne, host of the round-robin meet, 105-69. All the Metros got in some much-needed playing time in this first win, with Hawkins' 25 points leading the way. Butler connected for 16, Angevine dropped in 13 and King netted 10.

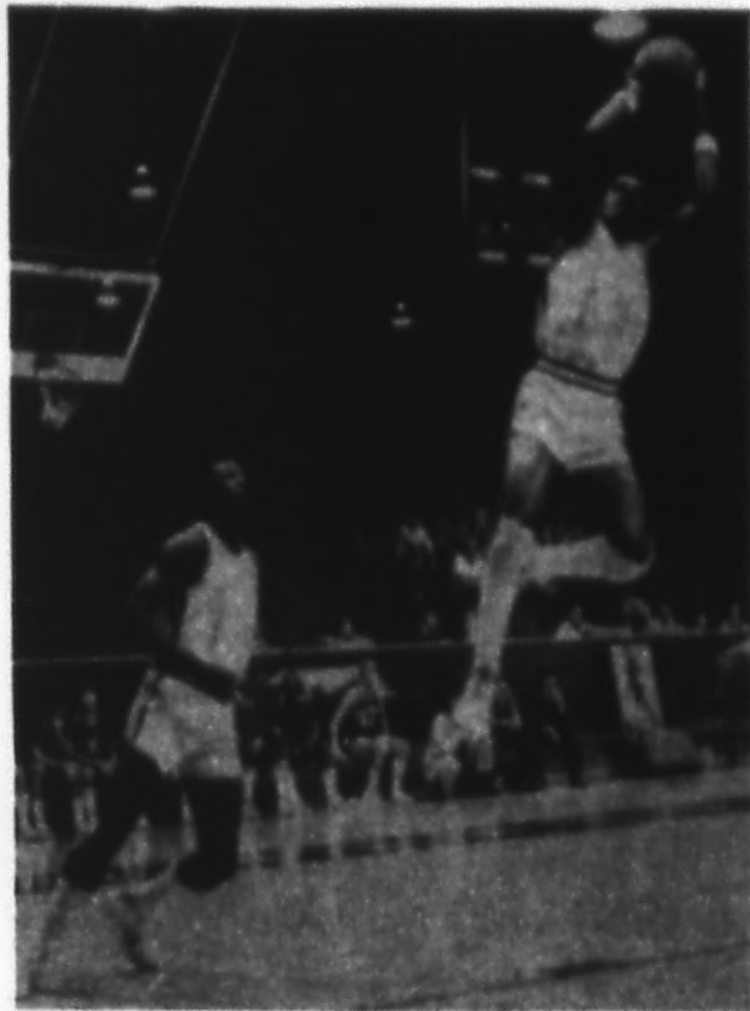

The defending NAIA District 21 champion, Hanover, spoiled the team's home opener at Market Square Arena Nov. 24. The game began on a sour note for the Metros as Butler, who had averaged 14 ppg. in the early going, injured a knee on a drive to the basket in the initial minutes of the contest. He went to the lockerroom, unassisted but limping badly, and later emerged heavily taped. He re-entered the game, but lasted only a minute before sitting down. He is undergoing orthoscopy to determine the extent of the injury and will be out of action at least three more weeks.

Tied 37-all at the half, the lead continued to see-saw throughout the second stanza until a critical traveling call was whistled against the Metros. Hanover was able to extend their lead to four, and went on to win, 71-67. Joe Brunk's 25 led Hanover, and Ron Angevine's 18 topped the IUPUI scoring. McKay had 16 and King added 12.

The following Friday, the Metros evened their record at 2-2 by handing Cedarville (3-0) their first defeat, 83-70. Firepower from the Metro backcourt did the trick, with King (23) and Angevine (22) combining for 45 points. Hawkins swished 15 and McKay contributed 14 in the victory.

After traveling to Northern Kentucky Dec. 16 and Heidelberg Dec. 19, Garland's crew returns to Market Square Arena, challenging IU-Southeast the 22nd (4:45 p.m.) The team then takes a swing through the south, visiting Nicholls State on the 29th and Xavier University on the 30th. Indiana Tech comes to Market Square Arena on Jan. 5th (4:45 p.m.) The last Christmas break game is Jan. 12 at Marion College.

Women lose tournament—Cummings injured

by Matt Shrum

IUPUI's womens basketball team not only lost to Butler, 86-43 in the finals of the Indy Classic Saturday but they also lost the services of Judy Cummings the night before in the opening game of the tournament. Cummings was the leading Metro scorer last year.

The Metros defeated host Marian in Friday's game, 73-54, as four starters scored in double figures. Late in the second half, Cummings, going for a fast break pass, collided with a Marian player. Cummings slid back-first into an unpadded wall and had to be helped off the floor and taken to Methodist Hospital for examination. How seriously Cummings was hurt will not be known until this week, with a slight possibility that she will see playing time Friday against St. Joseph.

Against Marian, Spears scored 15 points to lead the way, with Baas scoring 14 and Cummings and Kim Galyan scoring 10 points each.

The Metros lead hovered around 20 points throughout the game with Marian, although Marian was able to cut the lead to 12 twice in the second half. With about seven minutes left in the game, Marian was threatening to get back into the game so Coach Tucker put Cummings in. Cummings had sat out all but the first couple of minutes of the second half with foul trouble, but Coach Tucker brought her back in to squelch this final Marian rally and give Cummings playing time with the newcomers. With about two minutes left, Cummings suffered the injury that kept her at home during the championship game.

Two minutes into the Butler game, IUPUI had the ball and was trailing only 6-4. Nobody took up the scoring slack caused by Cummings' absence, and Butler pulled out to a 49-16 lead.

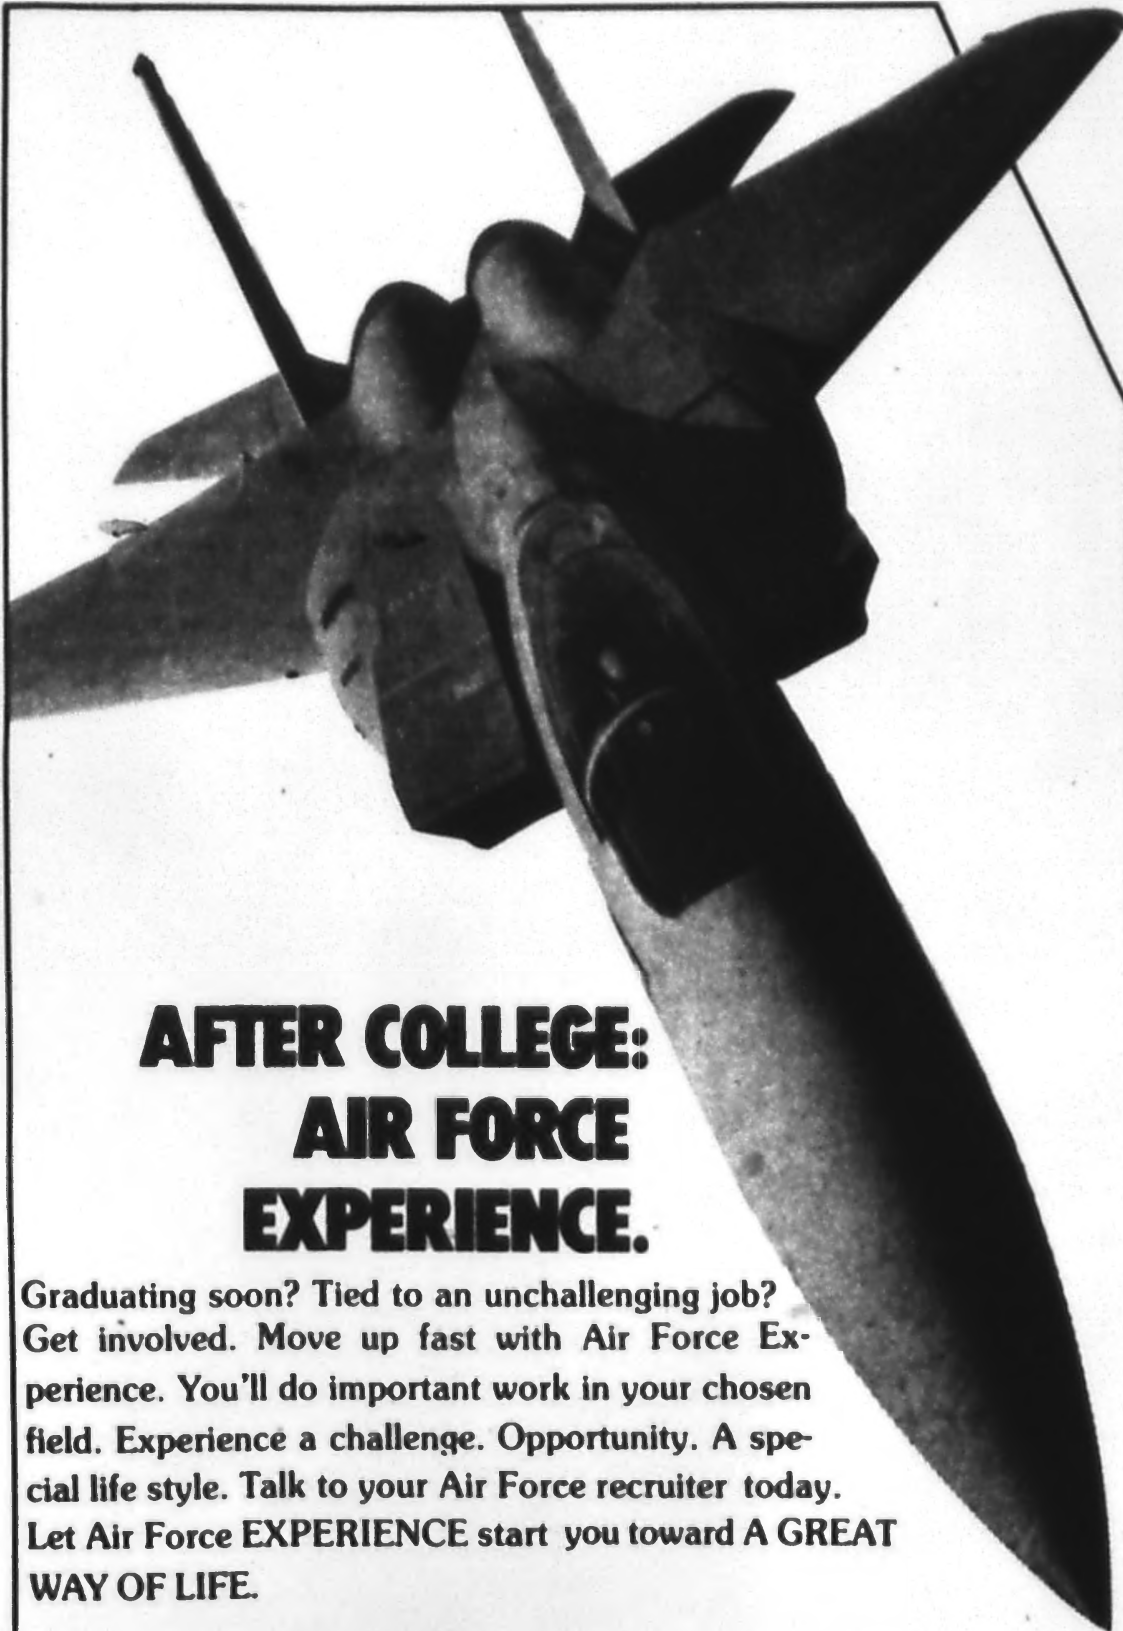

Butler hit 19 of 36 first-half shots while the Metros shot just 20 times, hitting only seven.

Barb Spears managed to hit five of nine first-half shots, but foul trouble put Sue Baas, a transfer from Indiana University, on the bench during most of the first half.

Sheila Smith was brought off the bench to start at center and hit two of three shots and pulled down five rebounds. Smith could become a starter for coach Kathy Tucker before the end of the season, which would allow Cummings to move to forward.

Other impressive performances turned in by freshmen included Kris Ewoldt and Lisa Baker. Ewoldt, a guard from Speedway, hit four of six shots all coming from 15-20 feet out. Baker finished third in scoring, with seven points on three field goals and one free throw. Spears, with 10 points, led the Metro scoring attack for the second straight game.

Friday's game at St. Joseph will be the Metros' last before the Christmas break.

Friman to present reading

by Laura Burris

Alice Friman, a former IUPUI faculty member and published poet will present a reading of her work December 11, at 8 p.m. as a part of the Free University Writers' Center "Indiana Poets Series" at the International Center, 1050 West 42nd Street. A reception will immediately follow the reading. A workshop will be held Saturday, December 12, at the Free University, 6360 North Guilford.

"The Writers' Center is the central motivating factor for the literary arts here," Friman said. "Writers need a community."

Friman has published poetry in Bitterroot, The Blue Unicorn, Indiana Writes, Indianapolis Broadsheet, Inprint and Ion, and she has published two books of poetry.

In her very New York accent, Alice Friman explained that her poetry deals with, "coming to terms with the past, the mythical past, art, death and personal relationships."

Admission for reading, $2.00, workshop $6.00. For further information, call 283-8660 or the Writers' Center director, Jim Powell, 263-FREE.

Casebeer featured poet

Dr. Edwin F. Casebeer, head of the English Department of IUPUI, is the featured poet in the current issue of the Free University Writers' Center publication, Inprint.

To balance his nine to five life as a university administrator, Casebeer said, "I keep alive the creative right side of my brain with various artistic pursuits—drawing, acting and poetry."

Casebeer has been an active Indianapolis poet for many years, dating back to the sixties and the Hummingbird

Cafe on Talbot Street when he was, he said, "somewhat of a hippie professor."

"I'm still more at home in jeans than this..." he said, gesturing toward his three-piece suit.

Former theatre student plays lead role

by Sharon L. Hall

A one-act dialogue entitled, "Medal of Honor Rag," is a play which features only three performers. The lead role of Dwight Johnson, a Vietnam War veteran and winner of the nation's highest award, the Congressional Medal of Honor, is portrayed by former IUPUI theater student Steve Jones.

The play is based on the true story of veteran Dwight Johnson. His experiences and emotions are revealed in the form of a counseling session between Johnson and his psychiatrist, played by Sandy Monroe. The drama was written by Tom Cole.

The play, which attempts to delve into the severe problems encountered by returning Vietnam veterans will be presented at the Fall Creek YMCA, 860 West 10th Street, Dec. 11-14 at 8 p.m. Admission is $3.50.

Cardinal Society picks student members

The Indiana Cardinal Society, a group of Hoosier college and university scholars who display a potential for leadership, recently announced the selection of two IUPUI students to its membership.

Pamela J. Moes, of Plainfield, and Gary M. Apter, of Whitestown were chosen to join the society which was founded last year by a group of Indiana bankers and businessmen who select 100 students each year and encourage them to become involved in public and private finance.

Moes is a student in the department of geology, majoring in political science. She is carrying a 3.89 GPA and plans to enter graduate school upon graduation and to later work in international geology.

Apter is a senior in the school of business, an honors program student with a 3.7 GPA. He is a member of the Alpha Lambda Delta and Phi Eta Phi honoraries at IUPUI. He is also a merit scholar and is on the dean's list.

Emergency book loan program debated by Student Assembly

by Bruce Barnett

A heated floor debate characterized the Dec. 2 meeting of the Student Assembly. The conflict surrounded the issue of funding for an emergency book loan program for students next spring. The original proposal called for a $500 limit for the spring semester. Sen. Jeanice Hight made a motion to change the amount by eliminating a "ceiling" figure. The author of the bill, Sen. Darrell Pieczko, informed the SA that Financial Aids said they have experienced a 2/3 default rate on emergency loans. Student Body President David Craig informed the SA that a figure of $1200 had been discussed with Dr. Golan Mannan, dean of Student Services. This higher figure could, "better serve the students," according to several members of the SA.

Pieczko charged that Craig has, "gone beyond his scope of responsibility," by setting up a larger dollar figure with Dr. Mannan. Craig responded by saying, "There is a need for the emergency book loan program. I pushed for more money because we wanted to make a big step forward." Sen. Paul Fort questioned the possibility of tighter control of SA money if the book loan money is defaulted on by the students. Craig said the risk of losing the money would not be that high because the bill requires the dean of Student Services to screen the applicants. A vote on the motion to leave the amount of the funding unlimited was defeated.

The original bill, with the $500 funding limit, was approved by a vote of six to five. The money for this program comes from the profits of the SA's game room in the basement of Cavanaugh Hall.

Another issue discussed at the meeting was a committee report concerning the security at the Herron School of Art. Several areas were discussed, including the need for an additional security guard and the security problems involved in having the art school's photo lab four blocks from the main area of Herron. Sen. Stuart Keefer stated that a further study would be made and a final report would be issued soon. Pieczko told the SA he felt the Herron situation should be taken to the Board of Trustees because rapes, assaults and break-ins are serious problems.

The Student Affairs Committee Chairperson, Lisa Koehler, gave the SA a list of areas which students were concerned about. These areas included the students' desires to know more about campus activities, security needs for night students in the parking lots, more information about class offerings with more advanced notice and better organization for registration.

Also included on this list were problems with cost and availability of parking and the need for longer hours for the library.

Plans were discussed for several events to be held in the spring. A Spring Festival and Ice Sculpture Contest are two projects that are being researched. President Craig informed the SA that several meetings next semester will be devoted to hearing comments and discussions concerning the proposed Student Center building. He also informed the members that the ski trip to Colorado was cancelled due to lack of participation. He stated that all money would be refunded to those people who signed up. Craig also told the SA that, next semester, the game room would be on the token system and he was trying to increase the availability of games and trying for five balls on the pinball machines. So far this semester the game room has made about $6,000 for the SA for use on student programs.

Many of the issues discussed at this SA meeting will appear again at future meetings. All IUPUI Students are invited and encouraged to participate in SA meetings.

'D. B. Cooper' just another 'chase film'

by Roger K. Bechtel

It all started in 1971. A man boarded a Boeing 727 under the alias "D.B. Cooper." Once on board, he persuaded the airline to give him $200,000 and four parachutes by threatening to disturb the friendly skys with a homemade bomb. The bomb turned out to be nothing more than innocuous lumps of play-dough and stereo wire. D.B. bailed out somewhere over the great Pacific Northwest, and to this day neither he nor the money has been seen again.

But good old D.B. has been all but forgotten. This American folk hero has been glorified on T-shirts, has had several bars named after him, and was even the source for a novel entitled "Freefall," from whence comes the new movie "The Pursuit of D.B. Cooper."

The movie starts where the real story leaves off. The opening shot shows D.B. crawling out onto the luggage hatch, letting out a whoop, and taking the plunge. Then the pursuit begins.

An ex-army sergeant turned insurance investigator goes after D.B. with all the fury of Robert Duvall going after an academy award nomination.

The investigator chases D.B. and his wife up mountains, down raging rivers, across deserts, and through junkyards. They encounter burly lumberjacks, drug-dealing ex-army comrades, the national guard, and rip-off auto mechanics.

Just when you think D.B. is safe, he isn't, and when the investigator is about to catch him, he doesn't.

Finally, D.B. ends up in a bi-plane chasing the sergeant in a dinosaur Ford Galaxy and ...well, good guys always win in adventure movies, don't they? Sometimes it's just hard to figure out who the good guys and bad guys really are.

Number one good guy is Treat Williams, who plays D.B. Cooper. Williams is quickly becoming one of America's most versatile and talented young actors, evidenced by his impressive work in the films "Prince of the City," "Hair," and currently on the Broadway stage in "The Pirates of Penzance."

This film doesn't provide Williams with a showcase for his talents, but his free-spirited portrayal of Cooper causes the audience to cheer for him from start to finish.

Robert Duvall plays the investigator in his usual tough fashion, but he manages to escape becoming the villain. It's an effective performance, but again we don't see what Duvall is really capable of — like the depth he created in "The Great Santini" and "True Confessions."

Duvall is joined in the chase by Ed Flanders, who plays D.B.'s old army acquaintance. Time and time again they both end up looking like the coyote in a Roadrunner cartoon.

Finally, Kathryn Harrold

gives a nice rugged quality to Cooper's wife without losing her femininity beneath the work boots and flannel shirt. This is her first big film role, but you can expect her to start winning more and more parts.

The original title of the screenplay was simply "Pursuit." That one word is probably more appropriate for a movie that has almost nothing to do with the real D.B. Cooper, but is actually one long chase scene. "The Pursuit of D.B. Cooper" doesn't aspire to be anything more than that, but settles for putting together some amazing action sequences. It is good at what it does. The question remains: is that what you want a movie to do?
