BRITAIN, BEETHOVEN & KILLING IN LIVING COLOR

H The typical British university teacher works for 50.5 hours a week, according to a report issued by the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals. The London Times' Educational Supplement reports that participants in the survey kept diaries reporting their time allocations, and offers this interesting statistic: "Leaving aside the specialist institutions with a high proportion of postgraduate students, teachers at the London School of Economics spent the smallest proportion of their week, only 28 per cent, on undergraduates. They were followed closely by the University of Manchester Institute of Technology, 30 per cent, University College London, 31 per cent, and Cambridge, 32 per cent." . . . Fragments of an original Beethoven concerto have been found at the Lovejoy Library of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville. The title page and three of the four missing measures of Opus 61A, the piano version of the violin concerto in D, were found by a librarian, who discovered the identity of the work when she removed a frame which hid Beethoven's autograph and a description of the work. . . . University of Oregon students conducted a poll to discover the attitudes of the viewing public to televised accounts of assassinations. Forty-seven per cent of those polled believed that assassinations and assassination attempts should not be shown at all; 40 per cent believed that TV coverage was proper; 11 per cent said they had no opinion. ACTING UP

H "Not Far from the Giaconda Tree," a one-act play, will inaugurate the Summer Cultural Program Friday at the Herron School of Art.

The performance, with an all-female cast, will be presented at 6:30 p.m. by the Arlington Repertory Players in the courtyard between the gallery building and classroom building at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Also on the entertainment agenda for the evening will be a workshop by the Actors' Conservatory Theater dealing with improvisational theater. Then, about 9 p.m., the Job Corps Band will take the podium for an informal rock and blues program.

The program is free and open to the public.

NAACP NEEDS IUPUI

H Few today remember the sad tales being told in the NAACP about the "Hoosier treatment" delegates received at the national NAACP convention in Indianapolis in 1927. Except in the NAACP, that is, where anything reminding them of Indianapolis is not highly regarded.

In an effort to erase old memories, and to show some 5,000 NAACP members the new Indiana, the NAACP has relented and has consented to hold the 1973 convention here. And that's where you come in.

The local NAACP planners are in Detroit this week at the 1972 convention to convince delegates who will come here next year that:

--Indiana can produce an additional 10,000 NAACP members by that time, and
--Many groups of citizens are combining efforts to make it a memorable and happy occasion for delegates.

IUPUI faculty and staff are asked to consider joining the NAACP in this convention year, and to become involved in convention planning. Finance, housing, publicity, music, ushers, entertainment, program, arts and fashion shows, exhibitions, are some of the categories in which workers are needed. All who have an interest should contact Robert Williams, general chairman, 1973 NAACP Planning Committee, 1714 West 63rd Street, Indianapolis 46260. He especially needs help from the university community and would like to talk with you.

ARE YOU "TEED OFF?"

✓ "How to Play Golf" is on the Continuing Education agenda offered this summer by the 38th Street Campus. Instructor will be Jack Mann, formerly of Greentree Country Club and now continuing his teaching assignments working out of Coffin Golf Course.

This course is for those who want to learn to play golf or those who have learned and now want to play golf correctly. The first three sessions of the course will include terminology, etiquette, rules, (rule book furnished), and the game (no swearing will be taught). The rest of the sessions will be at Coffin and will include the clubs, the grip, the stance, the swing, timing and rhythm, pitching, pitch and run, sand shots, chip shots, putting, how to slice and hook, and other procedures, at some of which you may already be expert.

Lab sessions will be held twice a week in the early evenings with enough time between sessions for your practice. Maps and information on Coffin will be distributed in class.

Class will meet at 38th Street Campus in Room 31, Krannert Building, from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., July 10, 13 and 17. Then for the six labs you will have your choice of Mondays and Thursdays starting July 20, or, Tuesdays and Fridays starting July 18 from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

An "Advanced Golf Clinic" also will be held for only those persons who have completed, are currently enrolled in, or have mastered the fundamentals of golf as taught in "How to Play Golf."

More emphasis will be given to individual problems in this course, as well as greater depth in mastering fundamentals and special approaches to problem areas of your game.

Both sections will be held at Coffin Golf Course and will meet at the Clubhouse from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays starting August 9 or Tuesdays and Thursdays starting August 8.

DOCTORATES, DONATIONS & DIVISION

Just about the time CBS Report (May 25) was bemoaning the plight of overeducated and underemployed Americans ("Higher Education: Who Needs It?"), along came notice in News Report, May, of the National Academy of Sciences, that a summary report of doctorate recipients in the U.S. for 1971 shows there was little decline in post-doctoral study or employment openings, that of the Ph.D's planning to take employment, 79.3 percent had signed a contract, compared with 79.9 percent a year ago; 7.7 percent were negotiating for employment as against 8.5 percent in 1970; and 12.4 percent were in quest of employment, compared with 10.3 percent in the previous year. Meanwhile, Science (April 28) tells us that the employment outlook for June graduates in science and engineering, while nothing to shout about, is an improvement over last year. . . Giving USA, 1972 edition, published by the American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel, notes that total transfers to philanthropy reached a record $21.15 billion in 1971, compared with $19.5 billion in 1970. Although gifts to education ($3.3 billion) increased 6.5 percent, education's share of all philanthropy decreased slightly, 15.6 percent of the total. . . . A report of a survey in the British Universities Quarterly, Spring issue, produces evidence that university life does not tend to draw students to a closer identification with a youth culture, setting it off against older people; rather, it leads to a movement away from identification with people of the same age who lack a university experience.
