University looks back and ahead to new projects

by Rick Callahan

A university official said last week that IUPUI's 10-year $175 million Capital Plan will bring it even further away from the "giant parking lot" it was in 1975.

J. Terry Clapacs, director of University Physical Facilities at Bloomington, speaking to the Feb. 7 meeting of the IUPUI Faculty Council, said the university has made major advances in construction projects.

"It was apparent in 1975 that a lot of new growth was going to take place here at the Indianapolis campus; so, the trustees became very much involved...in the planning process," Clapacs said.

Clapacs was one of five university officials who outlined several new campus construction projects scheduled over the next ten years. The cost of these proposed additions is $175 million.

Ten years ago, he said, there was "no real thread" that tied IUPUI together. Building designs and facade textures were inconsistent, giving the campus a disunified appearance.

During that period the university set up a committee which made suggestions concerning the areas needing the most improvement.

First on the committee's agenda was achieving a consistent building design that would give the campus a more homogenous building style.

The committee also urged the introduction of "green spaces," or grass, throughout the university. In 1975 only the east side of the Student Union building and a few other areas were grass-covered. Most of the campus was a gravel lot, he said.

Other major developments were an attempt to expand and organize the parking system, and to create a smoother traffic flow throughout the university by widening New York and Michigan streets. Also sanctioned was the installation of connecting tube walkways.

The major goals of IUPUI's current 10 year Capital Plan are relocating both the Herron School of Art and the 38th St. Krannert Science complex on the Michigan St. campus.

An arts center to be built east of the central purchasing building on New York St., across Military Park will house the new Herron facilities, Clapacs said.

Besides Herron, the Arts Center will also be the home of

Physicist discusses U.S. A-bombings of Japan

by John Crooks

A physicist who worked on the "Manhattan Project," a WWII U.S. Army program which led to the development of nuclear weapons, said he and his cohorts were misled by the government into believing that the use of the A-bomb on Japan would save lives.

Bernard T. Feld, a physics professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), spoke Jan. 31 at the IUPUI lecture hall on "Nuclear Weapons: Their Development and Perspectives for Control."

After he heard of the destruction of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Feld said he thought the bomb could have been demonstrated rather than actually used.

"I didn't feel guilty, I was happy that the war was over. But the first use (Hiroshima) was barely necessary. The Japanese had already sued for peace. The second bomb (Nagasaki) was not at all necessary," Feld said.

"It (the Nagasaki bombing) was the dash of cold water that woke me up. Its only purpose was to show that plutonium bombs worked as well as uranium bombs," Feld said.

Feld said that when the Manhattan Project began the scientists involved were convinced they were in a close race with the Germans to develop nuclear weapons.

At the time, Germany was the home of many of the world's leading physicists. Some of these scientists had been able to escape Germany before WWII, emigrating to the U.S. and eventually working on the Manhattan Project.

After the war, Feld and his co-workers at Los Alamos, the site of the Manhattan Project, learned that their fears about the Germans ability to develop nuclear weapons before the U.S. had been unfounded.

Although the Germans were close on a theoretical level, their industrial manufacturing capabilities were strained by the production of conventional weaponry, Feld said.

Besides his work at MIT, and his studies of the application of the quark model to the understanding of the electromagnetic properties of strongly interacting particles, Feld is also editor of The Bulletin of Atomic Scientist. The Bulletin is a journal of 25,000 circulation that is

300 new 'E' spaces

by Abby Marmion

Since I don't have any classes until late afternoon this semester, many times I don't arrive on campus until after 12 noon. Very often I find myself driving around and around looking for a place to park, and after a while it gets very irritating.

Although I see the University Police doing their job ticketing people who are parked in the wrong "zones," I also see them neglecting to ticket non-stickered vehicles much of the time. It is very annoying to see someone without an "E" sticker parked in an "E" zone, especially when there are several students like myself with up-to-date parking stickers who can't find a parking place.

After experiencing this situation many times, I thought to myself, why can't the university spend some of their funds to expand the parking areas on campus?

I found the answer to my question after doing a little checking.

I discovered, for instance, that nearly 300 new "E" spaces, solely for student use, have been built and are in use, due to the expansion of two existing lots which were already a part of IUPUI parking facilities. Included in this new parking is lot #71, north of Michigan Street, and lot #85, bordering Vermont and California Streets.

A total of 60,000 square feet of university land was used to construct the new spaces, which cost a total of approximately $71,000.

I realize that these lots are nowhere near my classroom locations, but I also realize that I can't complain that the university hasn't made an effort to improve parking facilities.

I remember how hard it was trying to find a parking space at IU in Bloomington; when driving into campus it was nearly impossible! If I got as close as three blocks to by classroom on the Bloomington campus I felt very lucky.

After coming to IUPUI for a summer session two years ago, I became spoiled by the uncrowded parking lots. I then found it easy to complain during the regular semesters when I couldn't find a close space like the ones I grew accustomed to over the summer.

But I realize now that measures have been taken to accommodate the increased numbers of student vehicles on this campus, and that there isn't much more room on campus to put parking facilities even if the money is available.

As long as I can find a place to park, I guess I will keep my complaints to myself, keeping in mind how much better the situation is here than it is in Bloomington.

Letters Welcome

Every week the Sagamore reserves space on this page for letters from readers. Your views are welcome.

Although we will consider letters of any length and on any topic, we will give preference to letters of less than 500 words and those addressing matters of direct concern to the IUPUI community. If necessary, we will edit letters for brevity or clarity.

For legal reasons, your letters must include your name and address. The letter also should include your telephone number so that we may contact you if necessary. Your address and telephone number will not be published, and your name will be withheld upon request.

Please type your letter in double-space. If that is not possible, write legibly on every other line.

You may bring your letter to the Sagamore office, CA 001G, or send it through campus or U.S. Mail. The address is:

CAMPUS LIFE

In perspective

Activities are opportunities

by Mike Wagoner

In order to keep the right perspective in sight, it is important to reexamine, every few years, the purpose of student activities. During the last few months the questions has been raised, on this page, "Why have student activities on a campus where students are involved with other facets of their lives?"

Why indeed! It has been said here repeatedly that students are occupied with jobs, families and community projects, not to mention the necessary socialization that goes on at night spots, apartment club houses, and family rooms in students' homes.

And it is a question to which everyone has an answer, and an answer that reflects his or her life-style. But it is a question that, to be fair, requires some serious thought.

It is a question that denies a "shoot from the hip" answer. You might respond, "I'm too busy! Why should I pay for someone else's fun and games?"

Or you could answer, "To each his own." Or, if you are one of those involved in activities at IUPUI, you would probably answer with a positive response about your own experience.

At IUPUI there are students of all ages and from all situations who participate in activities. The figure varies slightly from year to year, but it is accurate to say that over 8,000 students are more than passably involved in student activities here. Another 6,000 are passably involved — that is, they voted in an election, read a newsletter or student publication, or sat in a student lounge and read a moving message. (Those, and many similar actions, are partially supported by the activity fee or produced by staff in the Student Activities Office for the benefit of students.)

Ultimately the purpose of student activities at IUPUI is to educate, although entertainment is a spin-off of some activities. The purpose of activities on any college campus is to provide that part of a student's education which cannot be provided in the classroom, i.e., the development of the whole person.

One can learn how to plan and defend a budget by participation in a student organization. One can learn to motivate others to carry out a project. One can learn to organize and direct a festival or an honors banquet — the possibilities go on and on. If you are one of the fortunate persons who has already acquired these skills, then you have the opportunity to learn to teach these skills to others.

Activities can provide you an opportunity to expand your personal development. If you are among the thirty-four percent of the student body that has not found time to participate in activities — even vicariously — you have missed out. And you are missed!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dean replies

To the editor:

In reply to Michael Lake's question "Don't we as students have a right to be able to understand what is being said in class?", the answer is yes, indeed you do! (Michael's question was asked in the January 28 issue of the Sagamore and referred to instructors from foreign countries.)

A student who has a problem of any kind with an instructor should first discuss it with the instructor. (Michael's problem probably could not be resolved in this way.) If this does not end the problem, the next step is to report it to the department chairman, who won't know about it unless the student tells him. The department chairman is directly responsible for providing good instruction in his discipline. In case the department chairman is not helpful in resolving the problem, the student has a right to appeal to the dean of the school which offers the course. If unsuccessful at the school level, the student may appeal to me.

Problems with instructors include: perceived unfair treatment of students, offensive language or behavior, failure to meet classes, rescheduling of final examination dates (times) as set by the university, etc. Student complaints about instructors are more effective if made by more than one student, and delivered courteously.

Ads disputed

To the editor:

With the debate in this country over abortion I find it irresponsible of your paper to run advertisements for abortion clinics. These ads, directed at young women on campus who are more than likely ignorant to the intricacies of this issue, read: "Pregnancy alternative. . . ."

"Menstrual aspirations. . . ."

A rather euphemistic way of saying "For the low low price $5 we'll be happy to snuff out your baby's life."

There are far too many unresolved problems (medically and philosophically) concerning abortion and if in fact our laws are wrong, our society is guilty of catastrophic astigmatism. People should not be exposed to advertisements that depict an abortion as a dental appointment or a Big Mac order.

I beseech any women searching for earnest counseling to contact the Pregnancy Problem Center at 445 Penn. St. 632-3720

Will help feed starving Ethiopians

Progressive Student Union to hold hunger-relief dance

by Roslyn Dillard

Starving Ethiopians are nothing to joke about and the Progressive Student Union knows it.

The PSU is hosting an Ethiopian Famine Relief Fund Raiser, to be held at the St. Peter Claver Center, Feb. 15.

Charles Wiles, a PSU member and organizer of the event said the proceeds will go to three organizations: Catholic Relief Services, Care International and the St. Peter Claver Emergency Food Aid Center, which feeds local poor families.

"Since we started moving on the idea of an Ethiopian fundraiser, things have been snowballing.

"Herron Art students have volunteered their talent and made posters. Tickets were printed free of charge and there is the possibility that some bands will play for free as well," he said.

Wiles said that so far the PSU has sold only 20 tickets. Wiles said, however, that he still expects a large turn-out at the Claver Center which holds a capacity of 1,600 people.

"We don't want to alienate anyone because of the ticket prices. We will accept any donation, but every student should be able to afford a ticket," Wiles said.

To his knowledge, Wiles said, only one other group on campus has held a fund raiser for the Ethiopians.

"I only hope through our efforts, other organizations will get involved," he said.

Wiles said he holds a sentimental attitude towards the project because "I spent a year in Africa and was treated like one. This is the least I can do to repay my debt," Wiles said.

"Ethiopian jokes are a sign of sickness in our society. They don't help anyone and are not funny," he said.

Tickets for the PSU Ethiopian fundraiser can be purchased in advance at the Cavanaugh Hall bookstore and the Herron School of Art.

IUPUI's theater and dance programs.

Phase Two and Three of the Science Engineering and Technology project accommodate the 38th St. campus' move adjacent the current ET building.

Also scheduled is the $34 million Clinical Research Center to be built east of the Medical Science building. This project is already being funded by the legislature.

Two University Hospital expansions are on the drawing board as well, Clapacs said, along with an increase in parking spaces to keep up with the projected influx of patients and staffworkers.

The East Garage, which is connected to the ET building by the Michigan St. tube, will increase from 470 to 1000 parking spaces. The South Garage, across from University Hospital will be increased to 2000 spaces, Clapacs said.

Two other projects planned are the expansion of the Dental School and the relocation of Agnes St.

By 1995, Agnes St. will have been converted into a four-lane boulevard, offering a new, northern entrance to the university, which Clapacs said is sorely needed.

Expansions of University Library, the IU Law School and its associated library are also scheduled, though they are in early stages of planning.

"IUPUI is by far the fastest growing and most dynamic urban campus in the United States," he said.

widely-respected in the arms-control movement.

After the Manhattan Project was completed Feld said the government attempted to retain information about nuclear energy for its own use. During that period it was illegal for anyone other than the government to do research, mainly for reasons of national security.

Once the theoretical work had been accomplished the actual technology for the production of nuclear weapons was relatively simple, Feld said.

Although he had already been offered his position at MIT before the end of the war, Feld did not go directly to MIT after the Manhattan Project. The first thing he did was to ask for a six-month leave of absence.

He and his co-workers immediately went to Washington D.C. and began lobbying for civilian control of the nuclear industry.

Feld said the most effective step to be taken by those concerned about nuclear proliferation is to "convince their elected officials, especially their senators—since the Senate is where foreign relations decisions are made—that the arms race is not popular. Convince them with letters and convince them with votes," he said.

Feld's lecture was the fourth of 15 lectures being presented by the Department of Continuing Studies in a course called "Perspectives On Nuclear Warfare." The course has an enrollment of 22 students. However, the individual lectures, which are open to the public, usually have an average of 70 to 80 persons in attendance.

The course is also co-sponsored by the Indianapolis League of Women Voters, the Central Indiana Chapter of the World Future Society, Peace Center of Indiana and Physicians for Social Responsibility-Indianapolis Chapter.

NIGHTLITE

Bob and Tom rap on Indy nightlife

by Chris Hutson

This week, "Nitelite" is honored to have three celebrities from WFBO's Q Zoo: Bob, Tom and Elvis (Tom's wet-leg golden retriever). I talked with them over a few brewskies to get their comments on bars across Indy.

Ever since their arrival on the Indy Disk Jockey scene in 1982, Bob and Tom have been revolutionizing the FM airwaves with a bizarre morning show (6-10 a.m.) featuring music, jokes, phone calls, contests, impressions and general craziness. These guys are hilarious and spontaneous, planning out only about ten percent of their show with the rest being improvisation. They get paid to get crazy, a job most of us would pay to have. So where do the coolest DJs in town go for live entertainment and booze?

"Since I live in the Broad Ripple area, I generally go to the Vogue, the Patio and Union Jack's," Bob says.

"I wish there was something a little smaller than the Vogue and a little bigger than the Patio in Broad Ripple, but there isn't. I think the Raz-Ma-Tazz (on the west side) is the ideal size for a listening audience," says Tom.

Since their popularity has

KYLE CAPRON/The Sagamore

Bob Kevoian, Tom Griswold, and Elvis "the wet-leg" made them public figures, Bob and Tom sometimes enjoy being out of the limelight. When attending concerts at Market Square Arena, they enjoy the Market Square Gardens which enables them to escape fan disturbances. Another establishment that catches their eye is Broad Ripple Pub, a local pub that features several dart boards, two pool tables and a big screen television.

Bob and Tom really enjoy live music. As Tom says, "I like to see it in person. I get a big charge out of heavy metal live, I can't stand Ozzy Osbourne on records, but going to the show is great."

Of the local bands they have seen, they recommend the following: Henry Lee Summer, Rods and Cones, Cousins from Venus and Latex Novelities. I am sure there are others, but Bob and Tom haven't seen them yet.

From "Helium Monday," through two-for-Tuesday to "Name that Tune," Bob and Tom love this city. As Bob says, "The thing about Indianapolis is that it is not the small town that we all used to know, but a metropolis with lots of growth. Personally, I love Indy."

Annual contests for artists, writers set

Arts Insight, Indiana's newspaper on the arts, has announced its annual competitions for Indiana artists and writers.

"Postcards Series V" is the fifth annual contest for artists and offers exposure to the public via postcards. The works of the twelve winning artists will appear at the Indianapolis Museum of Art, the Herron School of Art, the Indiana Repertory Theatre, the Ball State Art Gallery and other locations throughout the state.

Each of the winners will receive an award of $100 and 100 copies of the post card of his/her work. Artists currently residing in Indiana are eligible. Works must be original and never before published, exhibited or reviewed, and will be judged on creativity, technical expertise, content, ease of reproduction and potential commercial adaptability. Deadline for entries is March 8. There is an entry fee of $10 for up to three entries. Further entry requirements are available from Arts Insight.

"Articulating the Arts" is the second annual competition for Indiana writers. Its purpose is to foster critical writing about the visual, literary and performing arts. Awards of $150 will be given to the best feature and review writers, and the winners' work will be published in the May, 1985 edition of Arts Insight. Deadline for entries is March 5. Feature articles should not exceed 1000 words and reviews should not exceed 600 words. Photographs are encouraged.

Awards for both contests will be presented at the annual Arts Insight Benefit Auction on Saturday, April 27 in Indianapolis.

For additional information and entry forms, write: Arts Insight, 47 S. Pennsylvania St., Suite 403, 46204; or call (317) 623-7894.

GET TWO EDUCATIONS FROM ONE COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIP.

An education in your chosen major. And an education in becoming an Army officer. You get both with an Army ROTC scholarship.

Army ROTC is the college program that trains you to become an officer, a leader and a manager.

You take ROTC along with your other studies, and graduate with both a degree and a second lieutenant's commission.

Best of all, you can put both of your educations to work right away. In today's modern high-tech Army, we need engineers, communications experts, computer specialists, and other professionals.

Our scholarships cover full tuition and required fees. They also provide an amount for books, supplies and equipment as well as an allowance of up to $1,000 each school year they're in effect.

So if you think all scholarships just provide you with a college degree, look into an Army ROTC scholarship. You'll be in for quite an education.

Men's b-ball win two in a row

by Abby Marmion

The Metro basketball team wasted little time in putting bad times behind, collecting two more wins to bring the team to a 12-14 standing.

IUPUI upset 1984 District #21 champions Taylor University Feb. 2 with a 68-63 overtime road victory.

The Metros had the advantage most of the first period, with a 28-24 lead at the buzzer, but the second half proved to be a different story. Taylor came on strong in the final 10 minutes of the game and forced IUPUI to come from behind for the regulation tie of 51.

Eric McKay collected his game high of 18 points, 14 of which came from the free throw line. Aldray Gibson had 17 and Troy Fitts 14.

The Metro winning streak continued as IUPUI went on to capture a 100-75 home victory Feb. 16 over Franklin College.

The Metros took a quick lead and ended the first half with a 50-31 advantage. Their momentum never let up as the team connected on 41 of 61 shots and hit 18 of 23 free throws to pick up their biggest win of the season.

Six Metro players appeared in double figures, with Gibson collecting 26 points to lead the win. Senior captain Maurice Womack pulled down 8 rebounds and dished out 6 assists.

The Metros are on the road for the next two matches, facing IU-Southeast Feb. 11 and Purdue Calumet Feb. 15.

IUPUI defeated both teams at home earlier in the season, going 76-66 over Southeast and 92-91 in a triple overtime victory against Purdue Calumet.

Women's basketball 14-9 after NCE, Butler wins

by Matt Shrum

IUPUI's women's basketball team raised its record to 14-9 last week by defeating the National College of Education and Butler.

This week the Metros host Mount Saint Joseph's Tuesday night and travel to Oakland City College Saturday.

Since coming back from Florida, IUPUI has won 11 of 14 games, including 10 of the last 11 games. The Metros are now 11-4 in NAIA District 21 play.

Cheri Farrell scored 24 points and Amy Strohmeyer 16 to lead the Metros past NCE Feb. 5, 76-71.

IUPUI got off to a quick start against the visitors from Evanston, Ill., and led by as much as 10 points in the first half. NCE turned the tables on IUPUI early in the second half and led 63-56 at the 7:53 mark.

The Metros closed to 67-66 on a rebound basket by Debbie Ferrell and finally went up 70-69 on a free throw by Farrell. IUPUI never relinquished the lead.

The host Bulldogs from Butler opened quick against the Metros with the first two baskets of the game. IUPUI pulled even at six and took its first lead at 9-8.

Butler then sprinted away with nine consecutive points and eventually built up a 25-13 lead with 4:16 remaining.

The Metros then started a 20-1 run that overlapped into the second half and the Bulldogs were never able to recover from.

Strohmeyer hit two jumpers to close the Metros to 25-17 with 2:44 remaining in the half. After a Butler free throw Ferrell hit a 10-foot jumper and Strohmeyer hit a 12-foot jumper to make it 26-21 with 1:13 left in the half.

At the 32-second mark Ferrell hit another jumper and then with six seconds left in the half Glenna Massey hit two free throws to close the Metros to 26-25 at the half.

In the second half the Metros started like they left off in the first half as Strohmeyer hit the first shot of the second half to give IUPUI a 27-26 lead. Massey followed with a lay-up, Farrell hit a jumper and Strohmeyer hit a lay-up to give IUPUI a 33-26 lead just three minutes into the second half.

The Metros eventually rolled up a 59-46 lead with 5:26 remaining in the game and coasted to victory.

Five Metros scored in double figures led by Strohmeyer with 16. Farrell scored 14, Massey 12 and Kelly Fitzgerald and Ferrell scored 10 points each.

Fitzgerald led the Metros with six assists. Strohmeyer led IUPUI with 10 rebounds and Massey pulled down nine.

IUPUI finished the game by hitting .460 from the field compared to just .340 for Butler.
