Legislative Review

by Kevin Stewart

On Monday, Feb. 18, the Indiana Senate Education Committee denied a request to study the possibility of transforming IUPUI into an independent university.

The vote was 7-3 against the proposal, introduced by Sen. Lawrence M. Borst, R-Indianapolis. The request, part of Senate Bill 289, would have created a nine-member commission to examine the future of IUPUI.

Under Borst's proposal, the commission would have had to recommend either turning IUPUI into an independent school and changing the name to the University of Indianapolis, or, if the panel determined that no changes are needed, to decide on a new name for the university.

Other bills presented to the state Senate and House of Representatives include the 'bookstore bill,' which would limit the number of items being sold by college bookstores.

However, the bill would not affect such items as food and drink, educational and research goods, athletic or cultural goods, goods bearing university symbols, or surplus items.

The Senate version of the bill passed before the Agriculture and Small Business Committee on Jan. 29 with a vote of 6-2. The House bill has been directed to the Commerce Committee.

The general assembly scholarship fund bill has been submitted to House. This bill would call for the funding of scholarships being awarded by members of the general assembly.

Center will be part of Pan Am Games complex

$30 million hotel planned for campus

by Mark J. Goff

University administrators are working to select a private developer for a proposed $30 million hotel-conference center complex planned for IUPUI's downtown campus.

Officials hope the complex can be completed in time for the 1987 Pan American Games.

"The project has been in the planning stages for several years now," said Glenn W. Irwin, Vice-President, Indianapolis. "The games have merely served to step up the timetable by which the complex will be completed," he said.

A site now occupied by a surface parking lot bordered by Michigan, Agnes, Blake and North Streets, has been chosen for the hotel complex, Irwin said. In addition to 250 hotel rooms, the building would also include 30,000 square feet for offices, and another 20,000 square feet for commercial space, according to preliminary plans.

"This project will have a substantial impact on the university as a whole," Irwin said. "We anticipate the office space being used by the Hudson Institute, and other university related interests, but there will also be a sizeable benefits to students and faculty.

"There will be meeting rooms for students and other groups," Irwin said, "and with the commercial space we have in mind, we should attract some restaurants, banks and other facilities that will be useful to everyone."

University officials are also examining the possibility of moving some of the campus' administrative offices from their present site on Lansing Street to the new building, but nothing has been decided yet, Irwin said.

Diplomat says US-Turkey relations 'warm'

President Reagan calls it a "bulwark of peace" in the Middle East, and 5,000 U.S. servicemen are based there.

Turkey is a democracy, despite widespread charges of repression and censorship there.

The Turkish ambassador to the United States, Dr. Sukru Elekdog, visited IUPUI last week to try to explain these conflicting ideas better.

"I am here to tell the people of Indianapolis about the cooperation and mutual interests we share," the ambassador told the Sagamore.

Elekdog spoke before an invited group of officials and faculty in the Business/SPEA building Thursday.

"America and Turkey are enjoying better relations than ever," said Elekdog. This is mainly because of Turkey's "increased involvement in the NATO alliance."

Turkey receives $755 million per year in military aid from the U.S. government, according to press reports, and Elekdog is lobbying for even more favors from President Reagan and the U.S.

"We have cordial and warm relations with the U.S.," he said. "There is no issue which casts any shadow on our relationship."

While U.S.-Turkish relations are "warm," Amnesty International, a human rights group, claims in the spring 1983 issue

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Class replies to sexism

To the editor:

We would like to comment on R. Andrew Robertson's letter to the editor on Jan. 28 and his views on the issue of sexism in language. Robertson's insistence that Wayne Olson's views on sexism in language represent "shoddy thought" and "unpopular notions" is unfounded. We don't agree with his claim that steps toward elimination of sexism in language have no place in the university because "the mission of the university is education, not social engineering." We agree with Wayne Olson's "Ethics on Campus" column of Dec. 3, to which Robertson was responding, in which he claims that the campus is the ideal place to begin work toward a nonsexist language.

The school of Liberal Arts at IUPUI, the English Department, and the Women's Studies Program concur that the university is the place to start changing attitudes about sexism in language. This semester a course is being offered by the Women's Studies Program together with the English Department on precisely the matter of sexism in language:

W250, Language and Gender, taught by Dr. Ulla Connor, a linguist. In this course we examine women's and men's language by analyzing conversations and written texts, critiquing research studies, and conducting our own original investigations. Thus, IUPUI recognizes the need to examine differences in speech of women and men and what role these differences play in the issue of power and dominance in society.

Numerous studies in linguistics, sociology, anthropology, psychology, philosophy, and education have been performed in the past two decades that have contributed to greater sensitivity to this issue. Empirical studies like these examining gender differences from multiple points of view are the responsibility of the university. Thanks to this multidisciplinary research, many changes in the English language have already taken place to eliminate the use of sexist language. For example, organizations such as the National Council of Teachers of English have published guidelines for nonsexist use of language for writing publication, research, and teaching.

Thank you, Wayne Olson, for taking notice of an important sociolinguistic problem, and bringing it to the attention of the Sagamore readers. Awareness that a problem exists is the first step toward change, both in language and in conduct, and many women and men, faculty and students are doing their part in education and application with the support of IUPUI.

Party ads distasteful

To the editor:

It has come to my attention that university property is periodically being decorated by advertisements for private parties featuring, among other things, beer and legs and rump contests.

I personally find the advertising distasteful and inappropriate. I do not know if these parties are in any way affiliated with our school, or if this is a profit-making enterprise that simply takes advantage of a lax University policy. I feel that this sort of abuse should be stopped. The IUPUI library is not the place to advertise a drunken bash.

Name Withheld on request

Whose life counts?

To the editor:

This letter is in response to the letter to the editor printed that disputed advertisements for abortion clinics.

Justin Walsh is male and could never even experience an unwanted pregnancy. How is it, then, that he can put himself in the position of telling women that their alternatives to unwanted pregnancy make them guilty of "catastrophic astigmatism"?

Secondly, he says that "young women on campus are more than likely ignorant to the intricacies of this issue [abortion]..." which sounds like an attitude from the Medieval era when women were their husband's property and unjustly regarded as empty-headed servants whose only purpose was to please their husbands.

When women are unable to obtain clinical abortions, they usually take the matter into their own hands, which is usually harrowing, often injurious, and sometimes fatal.

I wonder if Mr. Walsh, who seems so concerned for unborn life, has ever considered the life of the woman.

Letters welcome

Every week the Sagamore reserves space on this page for letters from readers. Your views are welcome.

Although we will consider letters of any length and on any topic, we will give preference to letters of less than 500 words and those addressing matters of direct concern to the IUPUI community. If necessary, we will edit your letter for brevity or clarity.

For legal reasons, your letter must include your name and address. The letter also should include your telephone number so that we may contact you if necessary. Your address and telephone number will not be published, and your name will be withheld upon request.

Please type your letter in double-space. If that is not feasible, write legibly on every other line.

You may bring your letter to the Sagamore office, CA 001G, or send it through campus or U.S. mail. The address is:

ETHICS ON CAMPUS

A search for riches

Human encounters can help in the struggle

by Wayne Olson

I really do not want to write a column on this subject. I am, frankly, quite tired of the whole matter. A long time ago I decided I had been raised to be a racist, and I fought against that in me, denied it, and acted, at times, as if I were not. But then, I stayed out of the hard struggles of the sixties, giving only lip service to them; made an occasional appearance at a meeting on civil rights, gave a speech at times on the "intellectual" side of the question, and otherwise salvaged my conscience. It hasn't been until these enlightened eighties that I have accepted the harsh fact that I am a racist and will be until I die.

It's kind of like, I suppose, discovering one's self to be an alcoholic. Only those who admit it to themselves can overcome it, or responsibly cope with it. So now I have admitted to myself that I am a racist, that I more quickly and naturally identify with the white power structures than I ever can with any others, that I operate out of those structures and within them, and even when I wish it weren't so, it is. I cannot deny my affiliation. It has been a tremendous advantage in this racist culture to have been born white, and male, and Protestant and, yes, I suppose, even American. But that has made me a racist among other things, and I wish I weren't, but I am.

I used to kid myself that I knew what the black experience was, that I could fully enter into that realm and somehow "help" those who were there to become more fully human. But now I know I can do nothing for those black brothers and sisters except to love them, to befriend them, and to stop making their life more miserable through my racist behavior and attitudes, particularly to stop endorsing those power structures that contribute to their difficult plight.

Once I even tried to organize a conference on this campus on Religion and Race, but it became apparent early on that the purpose of such a conference was foggy. I wound up having a "facilitator" come in and help those of us on the planning committee understand our own racism. That taught me, among other things, that racism is rampant here, that it is sometimes subtle and covert, and, at other times, blatant and difficult. Racism is insidious, evil and dangerous. It separates persons from persons and interferes with the flow of life.

If Thoreau was right that "the earth is the richer for the variety of its inhabitants," then I want to search for those riches. I want to get off my proud and smug kick and seek out those who can enrich me. I do want to know more about the black experience, the yellow or red experience, the brown experience, just as I would hope they would want to know more about the white experience. They know, I fear, too much already of the negative stuff — we have taught them well — but I know we all have rich gifts to share with one another.

What I have learned in some fifty years of living is that we are all human, none of us more so than others. We have much in common, just as we have much that distinguishes us from each other. My humanity is or no greater importance of significance — certainly in no greater quantity — than that of any other person. That realization has helped me eradicate prejudice, but not racism. Prejudice can be overcome through human encounters and rational evaluation of them; racism, however, is almost innate. It seems the best course is to admit our racism and then to work at the elimination of our prejudices.

Knowing we are ill is the beginning of health.

Century-old building leveled

Casket Company demolished to make way for parking lot

by Mark Goff

Demolition of the Indianapolis Casket Company Building will proceed, despite objections from local historic preservationists.

A university spokesman said "no economically feasible use" could be found for the building, which preservationists say was eligible for the National Register of Historic Places.

The 110-year old tri-level brick factory, located at 521 North Street will be demolished within 30 days, according to IUPUI Director of Real Estate, Steve Cobb.

The IU Foundation acquired the building in July of 1984 for $220,000 from Amedco, Inc.

"We examined the possibility of reusing the building as a warehouse or for office space," Cobb said, "but a multi-story loft style building of that type is just not functional from a warehouse of office standpoint."

Douglas Dunn, director of the Indianapolis Historic Landmarks foundation believes the building had untold potential for a variety of uses.

"A late 19th century manufacturing building like that with wooden beams and wood floors could be reused for almost every residential or commercial purpose imaginable," Dunn said.

"All you have to do is look at the success of some other rehabilitation projects downtown," Dunn said, "and you can see that the building could have been used for apartments, condominiums or even warehouse or commercial uses."

Cobb maintains that the building could not be used by the university for any economically feasible use.

"There was just no way to incorporate it into our overall plan," Cobb said. "There is nothing practical we could do with it."

Jordan Demolition of Indianapolis will raze the building. Once that work is completed, the land will be transformed into a parking lot.

"We're going to be losing a lot of parking spaces later this year," Cobb said, "so I anticipate that the land will be relandscaped and then constructed as a parking lot."

Cobb expects that work to begin sometime this summer.

Demolition of the Casket Company Building, 521 North St., began last week in spite of pleas by local preservationists. The 110-year-old brick building will be replaced by a parking lot later this semester.

deciding the exterior appearance and shape of the building, to be sure it is compatible with the campus' existing structures," Irwin said.

He referred to Edward Larabee Barnes of New York City, the architect who designed the Business/SPEA, Education/Social Work and Natatorium buildings. Irwin said a private developer yet to be selected by the university will design the building's exterior.

Irwin said that more than 1200 parking spaces will be lost once construction begins, perhaps in late August or September.

"We are working frantically to find alternatives to that," he said.

"We have plans to expand parking on temporary surface lots until we can secure funding for the expansion of the east and south garages," Irwin said. He added that the new lots will be located further from the buildings.

According to plans, Irwin said, both garages will be increased from 475 spaces to 2000 spaces. However, the expansion of the garages, unlike the construction of the hotel, must rely on state assistance.

"We hope to fund the expansion with bonding authority (from the state)," Irwin said.

"Nearly 75 different developers from across the nation have expressed their interest in the project," he said. "Right now our main concern is completing the Request For Proposals (RFP). It should take about 30 days."

Irwin's Special Assistant, Robert Baxter, is overseeing the formation of the document, a detailed list of specifications that developers must comply with to be selected for the project.

"We're hoping construction can be underway by fall," Irwin said.

Elekdog did not mention during his speech that Gen. Kenan Evren seized power in 1980 and dissolved Turkey's constitution.

Instead, he talked about the need for improved commerce between the two nations.

Elekdog also said the United States and Turkey share similar strategic interests.

"On a vast array of world issues," the ambassador said, "the United States and Turkey see eye-to-eye."

Several American intelligence operations are based in Turkey, which shares a 370 mile border with the Soviet Union.

Elekdog had few kind words about the Soviet Union, despite the fact Turkey exports over 8 percent of its goods to Russia.

"We respect Russia, but we demand non-interference in domestic affairs," Elekdog said. "We're trying to improve trade with them. Naturally, we're not approving of their ideologies. We're not approving of international communism."

CTS auditions 'Dreamcoat'

Repertory Theatre at CTS will conduct auditions for a production of the musical, Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat. Similar in style to Godspell, the play has little dialogue. It features a wide variety of musical styles, including country-western, ballad, French bistro, calypso and Elvis Presley style. All vocal ranges are needed for solos and unison to eight part singing. Age range is from 16 to 60.

Those auditioning should prepare a memorized song from a musical comedy which best displays their singing ability. An accompanist will be provided. Bring sheet music.

Auditions will be held in room 122 of the Christian Theological Seminary on Monday and Tuesday, March 4 and 5, from 7-9:30 p.m. For further information call 924-1331, ext.

The schedule of events includes noontime talks Monday through Thursday, films Wednesday and Thursday afternoon and evening, and an essay $5 Wednesdays and Thursdays, and $6 on Friday and Saturday. Tuesday is amateur night with no cover charge. Unlike some comedy clubs, the drink prices were fairly inexpensive, with Heineken bottles for $2.25.

The night I attended, I was fortunate enough to see three excellent comedians, including Mike Blais from Bloomington, Tom Ogden from Los Angeles, and headliner Don Weir, also from L.A. The MC was the entertaining Artie Widgery, whom I nick-named "The Rap Man." All the acts were marvelous, with Mr. Weir's excontest on this year's theme.

"Famous Woman Book Review" and "Famous IUPUI Women" are two of the topics for the lunchtime series. The feature film is "Great Grand Mother," which will be shown four times during the two-day film series. As a part of the week-long festivities, International Women's Day will be honored on Thursday, March 7, from 11:30-1 p.m. with a noontime sampling of ethnic foods and music in Cavanaugh Hall 438.

In conjunction with this celebration of women, the Women's Studies Program is sponsoring an essay contest. Submissions are invited on any topic falling under the theme "Remembering Our Foremothers." All IUPUI students are eligible to enter. The contest deadline is April 5, 1985. The essay need not be written expressly for this purpose; it may be or have been used to satisfy course requirements.

The essay may be historical, autobiographical, literary, or psychological. The winner will be honored at the School of Liberal Arts Honors Convocation and will receive a partial scholarship to attend either the Institute of Women Today Foremothers Conference of the National Women's Studies Association Conference.

For more detailed information regarding Women's History Week, International Women's Day, or the Women's Studies Essay Contest, see Prof. Anne Donchin, Program Coordinator, CA504C, 264-7611.

Metros enter playoffs on 9-game roll

by Abby Marmion

"Metromania!" shouted the announcer responding to three consecutive Metro steals and three unanswered slam dunks by sophomore Charlie Davis. Davis brought IUPUI's stomping, chanting crowd to its feet in the final minute of the 94-69 win over Marion College Feb. 21.

The 25-point margin marks more than just another win for the Metros; it will go down in the IUPUI record book for numerous feats: the ninth victory in a row (with a previous record of seven), an 18-14 overall season standing, tying of the season-high margin of victory and a top-three seed in the NAIA District #21 playoffs.

The Metros grabbed the lead at the start and left at the half-time buzzer with a 44-28 lead, their widest margin at intermission this season.

The Titans were not able to come close to IUPUI's momentum in the second period, especially during the Metro streak of steals, slam dunks and alley-oops making the last five minutes look like a Harlem Globetrotter match.

Sophomore Aldray Gibson led the team with 17 points, while Eric McKay and Charlie Davis each picked up 15. (This marked Davis' career high.)

Not bad for a team that chalked up a four-game losing streak in early January and complained of a "mental slump." But the squad recovered and pulled together to defeat IU-Southeast, Hanover, Purdue-Calumet, Oakland City and Marion in a 10-day span by margins of at least 10 points, excepting Southeast.

Head coach Bob Lovell attributes the team's turn around partially to a change in attitude. "We were in a real mental slump earlier, and I think the guys felt that enough was enough. They started playing like they are capable and got on a winning roll," he said.

Lovell went on to say that this winning streak was the break they've been waiting for. "After winning nine in a row the guys are on a high and very confident. Now they know they have the ability to beat these teams again in the playoffs," the coach said.

The tourney starts on Feb. 26 but pairings will not be announced until the day before.

IUPUI is expected to have a bye on the 26th and will hopefully host a match on the 28th. If the Metros win their game, they will advance in play to vie for the district championship.

The team earning the district crown will advance to the national tournament to be held in Kansas City, Mo. over spring break.

The biggest advantage that the Metros will have in the playoffs is a home court advantage.

in at least one game. "I guarantee that most teams having to travel the whole time in the tournament are eliminated faster than those hosting matches," said Lovell. "It's just too mentally and physically draining on the players."

Top seeds this season are expected to be No. 1 Tri-State, No. 2 Taylor and No. 3 IUPUI.

The Metros have an interesting history with Tri-State. They were knocked out in the second round of last season's tourney on the Titan's home court, turned around and upset them at Tri-State in a 58-56 match in December (the Titans have a 90 percent winning record at home.), then lost to them at IUPUI's homecoming.

"If we have to face them again, we'll be ready to play. These guys know what mistakes were made last time, and they know what they have to do," Lovell said.

As the team eyes the tough road to the playoffs this week, they will take one game at a time. If their cards are played right, the road will lead to a non-stop flight to the nationals at Kansas City in March.

Women rise to 17-10 enter playoffs

by Matt Shrum

IUPUI's women's basketball team defeated Taylor and Kentucky State last week to raise its record to 17-10 with one game left in the regular season.

The Metros should host an NAIA District 21 playoff game Tuesday.

The victory over Taylor left IUPUI with a 13-5 district record with five bonus points for defeating NCAA teams.

Amy Strohmeyer paced the 80-64 victory over Taylor with 19 points while Glenna Massey scored 18.

Strohmeyer climbed to No. 1 in the district in field goal percentage last week at .526.

The Metros' 86-71 victory over Kentucky State avenged an 87-55 earlier at Kentucky State.

Massey scored 21 points to lead the Metros. Debbie Ferrell and Cheri Farrell scored 17 points and 14 rebounds each. Kelly Fitzgerald added 13 and Strohmeyer 12 as the Metros starting five all reached double figures.

Massey also reached double figures in rebounding with 12 and led the Metros with five assists. Farrell and Fitzgerald passed out four assists each.

Fitzgerald recently became the Metros' all time career leader in assists and steals. The sophomore from Bedford-North Lawrence also passed her own single season assist record.

McKay: a memorable career as a Metro

by Abby Marrison

For senior Eric McKay, a basketball career at IUPUI will bring back mixed feelings and bittersweet memories of lessons learned.

The 6-foot-3 forward began playing ball at the Boys Club in elementary school and played on School #58's eighth grade team.

He went on to play for John Marshall High School and proved to be a valuable asset to the Patriot squad.

During his senior year in 1981, McKay led the city in scoring, averaging 25 points per game. He beat top-notch players such as Broad Ripple's Jeff Robinson and Washington's John Sherman Williams, who is now the nation's third leading scorer in college competition.

During this same season of McKay dominance, Marshall won their sectional match and McKay earned MVP team honors.

College coaches around the country took notice and McKay received scholarship offers from Ohio State, the University of Louisville, Wright State and Indiana State; the list went on.

But he decided to stay closer to home and play for IUPUI. "My high school coach wanted me to play for a junior college in Texas, but I just stayed here," said McKay.

The physical education major was a major factor for the Metros and received All-District honors as a sophomore.

His next year held a twist of fate, however, when he became academically ineligible second semester, dashing any hopes of post-season awards.

"At first I couldn't believe I had gotten myself into that situation. I knew my chances might be ruined and I'd better do something to correct this," McKay said.

To remedy his problem Eric cracked the books and settled down the next semester and earned his position back on the team the following season. "I got a lot of encouragement from coach Lovell, the team and my family and friends. It helped so much to know that they were still behind me," he said.

Now McKay is back on top of things and is one of the team's top scorers and rebounders. He averages 13 points per game and has been in double figures in all but six matches.

Coach Lovell feels that Eric has made a complete turn around this season. "I think he realized what he was throwing away. He has really matured and come a long way," said Lovell.

Upon graduation he hopes to be invited to play in an overseas basketball league. "We'll see. It's so hard to get to play for them. Right now the most important thing is the playoffs," he said.

He eventually wants to coach his sport and someday hopes to have his own elementary school team.

Slack wins $100

011353.

Not exactly your average lucky number but Thursday, Feb. 21 it became one for an IUPUI student.

Fred Slack, an architectural engineering major at IUPUI, held the magic number and had his opportunity to shoot for $100 at halftime of IUPUI's men's game with Marion.

Slack was one of an estimated 100 students that registered at the Metro double header that night. At halftime of the women's game a student missed to make the shot during the men's worth the whole $100.

Slack came down and hit nothing but net on his first opportunity from NBA 3-point range to claim the $100 prize.

The Metros provided plenty of action on the floor as they swept the double-header. IUPUI's women downed Kentucky State, 86-71, and the men defeated Marion 94-69.

WE'LL HELP GET YOU THE MONEY TO KEEP ON GROWING.

If you're finishing up your first two years of college and you've decided to go on, to complete your education, but you don't know where the money's going to come from, here's a possible solution.

The Army College Fund. Here's how it works. You qualify to train in a skill you'd like to learn, one that entitles you to the Army College Fund. Then each month you put aside some of your Army salary. Just like a savings account. Except the government matches your savings 5 for 1 or more.

In two years, you could have $15,200 for college. Your Army Recruiter has a booklet that explains all about Army College Fund.
