OUTREACH: TEACHERS, TEENS, CITIZENS

Teachers -- Indiana high school social science teachers are being invited to participate in Project CIRCLE, a program of the Department of Psychology of the School of Science. The program is designed to help teachers increase their skills in psychology instruction with information about recent developments in the field and curricular materials.

The program is made possible by a $21,000 grant from the Directorate for Science Education of the National Science Foundation as part of its Pre-College Teachers Development in Science Program. Project CIRCLE is a 10-month academic program with a flexible schedule that varies from weekdays to weekends.

Lectures, readings and curriculum projects will deal with a wide range of contemporary and applied topics within psychology, such as social stigma of minority groups, addiction, psychology of aging, altered states of consciousness, the psychology of politics, environmental psychology, stress and emotions.

The 24 teachers selected for Project CIRCLE (Content Innovation and Resources: A Curriculum Learning Experience) may register for at least three hours of credit at the graduate level. Materials generated by project activities will be compiled in a handbook which will be made available to all social science teachers in the state. Directors for Project CIRCLE are Dr. Robert Bringle and Dr. John Kremer.

Teens -- Hoosier high school students who have completed their sophomore year and have a serious interest in art or an art career have an opportunity to enroll in one of two 12-day sessions of a Pre-College Art Workshop at the Herron School of Art.

First workshop will begin on June 18; the second starts July 9. Instruction (equivalent to that given first-year students at Herron) is provided in drawing, design, three-dimensional work, and printmaking.

The moderate class size leads to individual attention by instructors Aaron Law and Sarah Burns, both faculty members in the first-year program at Herron. Besides the studio experience, students learn how to prepare for an education in art and what career opportunities are available, take a field trip to the Indianapolis Museum of Art, and attend presentations by visiting artists. Tuition is $50. For information, call 923-3651.

Citizens -- Community members interested in the future of water pollution control -- and what "trade-offs" or compromises may be necessary to get it -- should be interested in a series of educational forums and technical workshops on water quality education. They are being sponsored by the School of Public and Environmental Affairs in conjunction with the five designated water quality planning regional agencies in the state.

The Indiana Heartland Coordinating Commission will hold one such program at the School of Nursing on June 7-8. The educational program, aimed at interested citizens and public officials, will be keynoted by Noel Kohl of the Environmental Protection Agency. The session will begin at 7 p.m., followed by discussion and questions. The technical workshop will be June 8 from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Participants will discuss the future of water pollution control in Indiana as it progresses from the planning to the management phase. Other topics include municipal and septic tank pollution and future planning for high growth in unincorporated areas. The meetings are free and open to the public. For more information, call Nancy Smith or Mildred Ashkenaz at Ext. 4607.
