CONTINUING SAGA OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Catering to your eclectic, maybe eccentric and egregious hunger for education, the Continuing Education Office has again come up with a roster of programs and courses to pique the interest of just about anybody.

From cartooning to concrete construction, speedreading to getting in touch with yourself, floral design to digital integrated circuit applications, Chinese culture to child control -- and the ever-popular powder puff mechanics -- the series includes about 100 courses. General topical divisions are personal development, contemporary culture, communication skills, behavioral courses, crafts and hobbies, Herron School of Art classes, business and vocational courses, engineering and supervision programs.

According to Mrs. Marjorie P. Leamnson, acting director of Continuing Education Services, prospective enrollees should know that the classes are starting earlier this year so they can end well before the holidays. Also, the courses are half-price for university staff and faculty; just make a note of that on the enrollment form. For more information, call the Continuing Education Office, Ext. 4501.

OFFICE OF VETERANS' AFFAIRS ESTABLISHED

Dr. Hugh A. Wolf, dean for student services at IUPUI, has announced the appointment of Michael E. Hamilton as co-ordinator of veterans' affairs at IUPUI.

Funded by a $77,000 grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to establish such an office, the program will make use of existing offices of the university to provide services to veterans. About 1,800 veterans are enrolled at IUPUI out of a total enrollment of approximately 17,000 students, according to Dr. Gerald C. Preusz, assistant dean of student services.

Hamilton will co-ordinate the services of many existing offices on campus to help veterans. It is expected that personnel additions will be made to several offices, such as the Office of Financial Aid where Charles L. Clark has been named financial aid officer to help veterans especially, and others when time permits.

Besides helping with financial aid, the office of veterans' affairs will co-ordinate other university services for the veterans' special problems. These will include admissions, academic counseling, placement and special education programs.

An outreach program, involving the services and abilities of community agencies, also will be part of the program. Other aspects of the project probably will include tutorial assistance and guided study programs.

Hamilton received his undergraduate and master's degree from Murray (Ky.) State University. His two years in the United States Army included a tour in South Vietnam and Thailand where he served as a human relations officer and assistant drug rehabilitation officer and helped with the Army program in human awareness.

Clark, a native of Kansas City, Mo., received his undergraduate and graduate degrees from University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff and Indiana University. A former grade school teacher, he is currently pursuing his doctoral degree at I.U.

SPEAK UP!

A new and expanded IUPUI Speakers Service will again be offered to the public this year. Patterned after last year's initial program, the service now will provide more help in getting speaker and organization together.

The IUPUI Speakers Service is a voluntary program in which faculty and staff members who wish to present various topics in their specialties to the public may have assistance in finding audiences.

Those who wish to participate this year should contact the IUPUI Information Services Office at 38th Street. A form will be sent which allows speakers to list three topic titles and biographical information which will be published in a booklet. This little book will be sent to more than 2,000 organizations and VIPs in central Indiana. Based on last year's experience, university speakers are in demand in some areas and this year's program promises to be more successful than last year.

If faculty or staff members have lists of organizations to which the booklets should be sent, this also will be welcomed by the Information Services Office. Deadline for drawing up lists of speakers is September 18.
