Art supply store problems subject of petition

To the editor:
To voice dissatisfaction with the operation of the Herron Supply Store, on April 5 students began signing a petition at Herron School of Art.

Though circulation of this petition was the act of an individual student, problems associated with the supply store have been discussed among the Herron Student Senate and the School Administration. The various points of discussion seem to address a single issue: inconsistent service due to a lack of knowledge of, or concern about, the merchandise.

In a store as specialized as Herron's, the IUPUI Bookstore management must see the legitimacy of this complaint. Unlike the other bookstores in the IUPUI system, which are walk-through and self-service, the Herron store features counter service only. Students request items, and the sales clerks must be familiar enough with the stock to locate and present the item. In the event an item is out of stock, a knowledgeable clerk could recommend a viable substitute.

One factor contributing to the present situation is this:

in the fall of this school year, the Herron supply store underwent a total change in management and sales personnel. Understandably, it takes time for new employees to become familiar with the entire stock of a store, but problems arise when there is no desire to learn the stock or the use of specific art materials.

An issue causing great controversy is the procedure for hiring sales personnel. The application form used at the Herron store is the standard employment form used through the bookstore system. At no time is there an inquiry as to the individual's knowledge of art materials or processes. If an individual is considered suitable for employment but lacks an interest in learning about art materials, perhaps a position at one of the other general merchandise bookstores would be more appropriate.

The only proper way to address these issues and problems is for the concerned parties to meet and frankly discuss them. Without this dialogue, the situation will only get worse. Let us hope that before next fall, those concerned will openly and sincerely discuss possible permanent solutions.

Spring festival band draws complaint

To the editor:
In regard to the band on the IUPUI campus April 21, I would think the Student Activity Fee could be put to better use or just used more appropriately. For instance, take those bands at the Fall Festival. Now those bands knew what the college students preferred in musical entertainment. I would strongly suggest you evaluate your entertainment selections a little more carefully. I hope this is not what we as students are paying for.

Litter seen as disturbing accompaniment of spring

To the editor:

With spring's arrival have come students who wish to frolic on IUPUI's landscaped lawn.

With the students' departure there emerges, it seems, a spring day's problem: TRASH. I invite any student to go atop the library, business school or Cavanaugh Hall and glance down to our lawns. What do you see at noon on a sunny day?

To the future leaders — the lawyers, politicians, philosophers — who contribute to this mess: don't you feel it's time to begin picking up after yourselves? To the leaders who didn't contribute, who only walked by: is it an inconvenience to pick up a can on your way through?

Look around people — this trash is an inconvenience to those who don't contribute. I can't imagine what possesses people who feel this is a trivial gripe.

I pity my community who must clean up after these slobbs.
Linda Gray

Bookstore price fairness questioned, compared

To the editor:

IUPUI students face an unnecessary hardship arising from the "for-profit" system under which the bookstores are run at Cavanaugh Hall, the Student Union Building, and the Krannert Building.

This system exploits what economists call "inelastic demand," which is created by the necessity of purchasing certain goods. In this instance, the demand is created by instructors' requirements that students purchase certain texts for courses.

Every bit the villain, the IUPUI bookstore chain has made a consistent practice of sucking the last dime out of poor undergrads. One would wonder, "Does anyone really care?"

Judging from many students' comments, the prices of most books and supplies are set as high as exploitation will allow.

Many express resentment toward the "not-for-students" bookstores.

How can the IUPUI bookstores call themselves "student" bookstores, when they drain the economic blood of those they pretend to serve? Wouldn't a better name be "B. Dalton" or "Waldenbooks"?

Prices at IUPUI bookstores are only competitive with those in the retail marketplace. Don't the people in charge of the bookstores understand that IUPUI students, who staff the stores anyway, could manage and operate them AT COST?

This is not a "hot" issue right now, since students aren't buying books at this time. However, if re-organization from profit to non-profit status doesn't begin soon, another year, another group of students, and another season of fat profits will become history.

Literary journal earns highest rating

"An oddity and an accomplishment!" is how the National Scholastic Press Association described the "Superior" rating of the poetry in the Fall, 1981, and Spring, 1982 issues of genesis, IUPUI's literary journal.

The evaluations, made by the Associated Collegiate Press at the University of Minnesota, bestowed the highest award possible, All American Honor Rating, on last year's publications.

Scores of "Excellent" and "Superior" were received in all categories of editorial standards, from literary emphasis and balance of content to juxtaposition of artwork with prose and overall layout.

The judges commented frequently on the skillful and effective use of imagery and diction in the published pieces, concluding that genesis, with its high literary expectations, is justification that talented people are in Indianapolis.

Copies of the 1983 Spring issue of genesis will be available in the Cavanaugh Hall Bookstore and the Blake Street Library by the second week of May; coupled with the fall 1982 magazine, this academic year's publications should receive comparable rankings as those in the previous semesters.

The genesis editorial board reminds students to consider submission for the fall 1983 issue. Instructions for authors and artists can be found in the journal or by watching for posting and notices in the Sagamore shortly after the fall semester begins.

According to the board, only with continued submission of works of creative excellence can the literary journal of IUPUI maintain its prestigious honor rating.

Ex-candidate to work outside 'proper channels'

by Bill Nolan

Vasilis Koulolias, former candidate for 1983-84 president of the Student Assembly, stated last week that he intends next year to carry out the programs of his campaign platform despite his defeat in the election held April 13 and 14. Monday he said that he will continue with his stated plans whether or not the Student Assembly supports him.

Both before and after the election, Koulolias said, numerous students approached him and expressed their support of his proposals, which include the establishment of a radio station at IUPUI.

Some faculty members in the department of telecommunications also support the radio station, said Koulolias.

George Graves, presidential victor in the election, said last week that he thinks the radio station is not "a feasible project to undertake." Koulolias, however, said that telecommunications faculty consider the project feasible. One professor, he said, estimated that a station could be established at a cost of about $20,000.

Graves also voiced a more general pessimism about Koulolias' chances for success in implementing his programs.

"If he is willing to come back next year and be a senator, work with the assembly and make his suggestions, which is what any student senator ought to do, I have no problem with that."

Koulolias is a 1982-83 senator at large in the assembly. His term of office expires May 15.

Graves continued, "There's not going to be very much he can do as an individual acting on his own. We are the only recognized representative of the student body. Koulolias "has to know what channels he has to go through," Graves added.

Koulolias said that he does plan to approach the assembly. "We will go straight to the administration with our proposals," he said, "after we get the support of the student assembly."

Koulolias denied the necessity of going through "proper channels" to implement his proposals. He stated he feels that support from faculty, student organizations and students, expressed through petitions and other means, will incline the administration in favor of the proposals, whether or not the assembly supports them.

"If we keep on lobbying," he said, "it might make a difference."

If the proposals fail to gain assembly support, Koulolias said, he still plans to continue trying to implement them. "If the student assembly says 'no' and it doesn't represent the majority of the students, then the student assembly is not doing its job, because it's supposed to represent the students."

Metros 'favorite team' entering tournament

by Matt Shrum

The IUPUI women's softball team enters the last week of the regular season with a 24-8 record.

Coach Nick Kellum said the Metros are "probably where we should be." He added, "We've lost a couple of close ones that we shouldn't have lost, but then there has been some inconsistent play."

Kellum related the inconsistent play to the inconsistent weather.

The Metros finished third over the weekend in an invitational tournament held at IUPUI. They opened the tournament with a 4-3 loss to Butler University and then fell again to Southern Illinois University-Evanville 1-0.

In the consolation game, the Metros defeated Butler 7-1. The University of Akron won the tournament, defeating SIUE in the finals.

IUPUI will host Indiana Central University tonight at 4 p.m., and will close the season with a game against visiting Manchester University Saturday at 1 p.m.

Next week the Metros will host the District 21 tournament of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

Kellum said that "on paper, we would have to be the favorite team" entering the district tournament. "We've beaten all the teams that we've played in the district," he said, "and against common opponents we look better than the other teams."

Last year IUPUI won the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women state championship but moved to the NAIA after the AIAW folded over the summer. Of the Metros eight losses this year, five have been to NCAA Division I schools, the other three to Division II schools.

Although the Metros are led for the third straight year by Judy Cummings at the plate and Trudy Bernath at the pitcher's mound, Kellum claims "we really don't have a sure out in our lineup."

Cummings and Bernath, both juniors, were named last year to the four-player Regional All-American team. Cummings was subsequently named a first-team All American.

Kellum said that defensively, the Metros are beginning to gel. The team has just two seniors on the roster, shortstop Cathy McCoy and catcher Marty Kalb. Top juniors are leftfielder Cummings, third base Shelly Hawkins, designated hitter Sue Baas and pitchers Bernath and Rae Ann Elcheldinger. Sophomores in the regular Metro lineup are Teresa Allen, first base, Chris Nichols, second base, Kim Satterly, center field and Tracy Taylor, right field.

If the Metros succeed in their bid to win the district, they will probably host the Tri State tournament May 13 and 14. The winners from Ohio, Indiana and Michigan will play in that double-elimination tournament, with the winner advancing to the nationals.

Members of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra entertain participants of "The Isometric 5 and 10 Kilometer Run." The run was held on April 23 and ran through the IUPUI campus. The proceeds of the event benefitted the Orchestra. (Photo by Mark Langlois)

Lockefield to be razed despite protests

by Mark Goff

The decision to raze all but six buildings in the Lockefield Gardens complex was finalized April 21, despite protest from community and university groups.

Housing authorities decided Thursday to give the go ahead to plans calling for demolition of a major portion of the complex to make room for future expansion of the IU School of Medicine and related facilities.

In an effort to build support in favor of saving Lockefield before finalization of demolition plans, for use as student housing or for other purposes, the Lockefield Guardians Coalition, one of the groups opposed to the demolition of Lockefield, held an open house in an apartment they renovated to disprove the belief that the apartments were beyond repair. Leaflets were distributed throughout campus announcing the open house before the April 21 meeting between city and university officials.

Community members who were aware of Lockefield's potential for redevelopment included J. Ravenell Fields of the Midtown Economic Development and Industrial Corporation. Fields, as well as Paul Chattey and Glory June of Historic Indianapolis, refused to accept the belief of university officials, including Robert Baxter, special assistant to the vice president, that Lockefield could not regain its position of importance in the westside community.

Baxter was quoted repeatedly as saying Lockefield was a "health hazard," detrimental to the growth of the IUPUI campus. According to Baxter and associates, Lockefield was a stumbling block, standing in the way of university expansion.

The land on which Lockefield stands will be used for anticipated construction of expansion of University Hospital, the School of Medicine and Wishard Hospital, all of which surround Lockefield. Plans have also been made to reconstruct Locke and Agnes Streets, align them into a straight roadway and eliminate the zig-zag road that currently exists.

While plans for street realignment are scheduled to begin as soon as proposed demolition is completed, the remaining part of the land could lie unused until university expansion plans are initiated.
