genesis deadline moved due to snow days

The deadline for submissions to genesis, the IUPUI student literary magazine, has been moved to 5 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 20.

Since many IUPUI students are on campus only one or two days a week, the decision was made to move the deadline to accommodate students who would otherwise have missed it due to campus closings Tuesday night and Wednesday.

Submissions should be taken to the Student Activities office in the basement of the Blake Street Library.

Students have chance to debate Activity Fee

by Rick Callahan

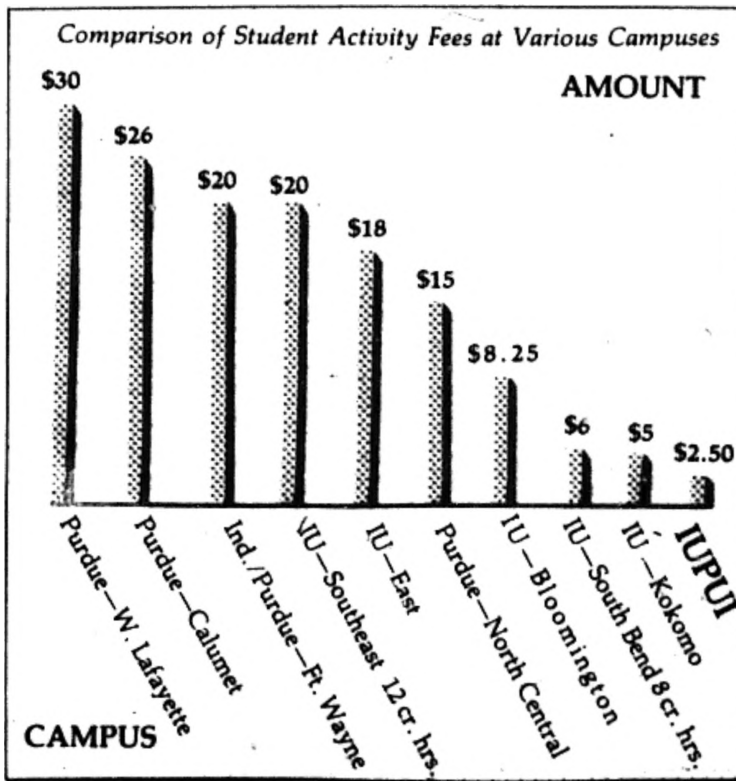

A university official says that a proposed increase in the Student Activity Fee, coupled with changes in its allocation, "will improve student government" and make campus life "more interesting."

Patricia Boaz, acting dean of Student Affairs, is touring IUPUI classroom buildings this month along with Steve J. Akard, president of the Student Assembly.

Boaz and Akard hope to gather a fair representation of student opinions on the Activity Fee increase by circulating a written ballot during their tours.

Boaz says that if students show they are in favor of an increase, a new "legal/fiscal relationship" between the various academic schools and the university will be created.

The new relationship would require schools to assess their Activity Fee needs through their student government, Boaz says.

She adds that since some schools do not have student government officials to represent their needs, "they will have to form a student council of some kind if they want any Activity Fee money."

One example of a lack of student government, Boaz says, is the University Division, in which 46 percent of all IUPUI students are enrolled. She says that the University Division currently has no official student government.

Presently, 30 percent of all Activity Fee money is funneled back to the various schools to support extracurricular activities.

Last year IUPUI schools received $34,278 in Activity Fee funds, with the School of Liberal Arts receiving the most, at $12,293. Both the schools of Education and Physical Education received no money.

One result of the changes in Activity Fee allocation, Boaz says, will be a simplification in the process "of deciding who gets how much money."

The new system will provide "far greater representation" for students, and will therefore give campus officials a better idea of how much students want for activities, she says.

The change that will "improve" student government the most, is the requirement that all campus organizations keep

'sno school

by Kyle Capron

Like most students attending IUPUI, I have been wondering what type of conditions warrant the cancellation of classes. With the extreme weather Indianapolis has experienced last week, many students have vocalized their displeasure with the administration's decision-making last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Like the majority of students, I was displeased with the administration's decision not to cancel classes Tuesday and to cancel them Wednesday. I decided, however, that it would not be fair to attack the administration without first doing a little investigating.

I sought out Director of Administrative Affairs Neil E. Lantz as a representative of the administration. Like most students, the first question I asked was, "What does it take to cancel classes?"

"There is no real formula for cancelling classes," Lantz said, "but we take into consideration the wind, snow accumulation and ice on the roadways."

The situation began on Tuesday. IUPUI officials started to accumulate weather information beginning at 4 a.m. Tuesday morning. At that time the information available did not warrant the cancellation of classes. But as the day wore on conditions worsened, so that by 4 p.m. officials agreed that the situation warranted the cancellation of evening classes. Tuesday night the administration compiled information from which they concluded that classes for Wednesday should be cancelled. One of the major factors that was considered was that there were snow emergencies in several of the surrounding counties and that many of the students and faculty would not be able to make the trip into the city.

On Wednesday on the way in the streets were in reasonable condition considering the weather. Looking back on Wednesday, I realize that by the time I came in the afternoon the sun had broken through the clouds, raising the temperature so that the salt and other chemicals could remove the ice and snow. Concerning Wednesday's cancellation of classes, students must take into account the fact that not everyone lives in the metropolitan Indianapolis area and county roads in many of the outlying areas were closed.

Whether or not to cancel classes at IUPUI is a very difficult decision that is not made by a single person. Involved in the decision-making process are the Vice President of the university, the Executive Dean and Neil Lantz. As Lantz told me on Thursday, "We make our decision based upon the information given to us by a local meteorologist, campus and city police officials, the physical plant workers and the National Weather Service."

When considering to cancel classes, the administration must consider the condition of university property. "The University is comprised of just a little over 80 acres of parking spaces, 20 miles of sidewalks, and five miles of roadway. All of these areas must be cleared and made safe for both pedestrian and automobile traffic," Lantz said. "We do not cancel classes on the basis of other schools or universities."

There may be cases when the city will receive an extremely heavy snowfall and most schools will be open but IUPUI will have to close due to the fact that the physical plant employees will not be able to remove the snow in the parking areas.

The responsibility of calling off classes is not an easy one, and no matter what decision the administration makes, not everyone is going to be pleased. We must remember that living in Indianapolis, the weather is not always going to be pleasant.

Living in Indianapolis, we should be accustomed to driving in winter conditions. The reasoning that best sums up the administration's reluctance to cancel classes is embodied in this statement by Lantz: "We are trying to give higher education students the education that they are paying for."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Upset with no closing

To the editor:

I'm sorry but I'm upset! Last Tuesday we had classes go on as usual while the rest of the city was told to stay off the roads unless absolutely necessary. I am not pleased with the "powers that be" who decide whether or not we should have school on days such as the one last week. I think they must have 4-wheel drive and live 2 minutes from I-70. Several things that apparently are not being taken into consideration. First, we are a commuter college with over 95% of the student population living off campus. At least a third of these off-campus students do not even live in the metropolitan Indianapolis area. Their drive is usually half-hour or more to begin with. Another thing to keep in mind is that many students have children who are let out of school by their local districts. These people are stuck between a rock and a hard place because they have to come in to school and provide for a sitter also. As you know it is tough to get a sitter to begin with, but it is practically impossible on such short notice. Another thing to keep in mind is that on a day like last Tuesday students take their education into their own hands by staying home. The result of that is a lecture hall class of over 250 had only 11 students, and a 40-student class had 6 Tuesday. In both cases the professor cancelled class due to low attendance. Enough said. The point is that a little more logic should be taken into consideration when it comes to the decision of calling off classes. Is it safe? Will it be a major inconvenience? Is it worth it?

Philosophy Club President

Closing consideration

To the editor:

Does everyone remember Tuesday, Feb. 12? You should, that was the day that IUPUI boldly held classes when every other school in Indianapolis decided not to.

That was the day that sheets of ice left roads and highways treacherous. It was the day that tires got no traction and cars went skidding out of control.

Did anyone else wonder whose brainstorm allowed school to stay open in the wake of such severe weather? I was able to ascertain just who was responsible. I called Neil Lantz early on that Tuesday morning and inquired about his decision. He told me, first of all, that it was not solely his decision but a joint decision between the IUPUI, Mr. Lantz and other faculty and administrative personnel. He proceeded to tell me that he saw the decision as a "close judgement call" but chose to keep school open.

Mr. Lantz, I and a number of other students have some serious questions for you:

1) Should scholastic consideration come before the health and safety of the students?

2) Should the students have risked personal injury and braved the elements only to find that their professor was much more sensible and elected not to attend?

3) Why, when all of the other school corporations chose not to send their school buses out, did you expect thousands of cars to arrive safely?

Beyond all this, the most important question will remain unanswered until some future date: will the same poor "judgement call" endanger students again?

Registration problems

To the editor:

I am writing to you with respect to an unfortunate incident which occurred during the Christmas break.

On Dec. 14, 1984, I took the cheque for my Spring semester fees to the Bursar's office. I was therefore very surprised when I received a letter on Dec. 24 stating that my registration had been cancelled. I immediately rang up the office, but to no avail as there would not be anyone available to answer my inquiries until Jan. 2. In addition, after contacting the bank, I found out that the Bursar's office had still gone ahead and cashed my cheque.

The letter I received informing me of the termination was of course very vague. I quote: "students who did not pay fees, arrange for a deferment, remained encumbered by Student Loan Administration, or who did not make sufficient payment by the due date to retain their course schedule would have their registration terminated" (none of which applied to me). When I finally contacted the Bursar's office on the 2nd I was told that I would have to come back early to re-register, even after I had explained that there must have been a mistake for me to have received such a letter. Suffice it to say that when I started asking nasty questions like: "Who would pay for all the out-of-state telephone calls that I had had to make?", they were finally able to admit that it was a computer error, and reinstated me.

On returning to Indianapolis for the spring semester, I have also discovered that at least ten other people had the same difficulty. Therefore I am writing in the hope that you will print my letter, or one from somebody else who had the same problem, whereby something might be done to improve the obvious shortcomings in administration. I really believe that a concerted effort should be made to facilitate student's enquiries during recesses, and also to produce form letters which have empty boxes next to the possible problems, which can then be checked where appropriate, instead of reeling off an unintelligible list.

Thank you for your kind attention.

Anton C Halaby

Hudson Institute studying high school texts

by Karyn May
Staff Writer

The Hudson Institute, a non-profit policy-research organization located on campus, is currently studying classroom curriculum and textbook composition.

"Visions of the Future," the title of the institute's latest area of research, will also strive to develop a teacher's pilot program and training manual.

Also a goal of the program is to provide teachers with information and educational materials that are both realistic and optimistic.

Lt. Gen. Sinclair L. Melner, current vice-president of the institute, said the program has revealed that high school and junior high school curricula is quite often pessimistic.

"We went into various high schools... and looked at what was being taught... we found it very pessimistic, as far as the subject material. So, we produced some new material which we felt was more optimistic," Melner said.

The Hudson Institute conducted tests in Arizona, North Carolina, New York as well as in Washington Township in Indiana while researching "Visions."

According to the findings of the program, students throughout the U.S. are extremely alarmed about shortages of energy, natural resources and living spaces.

To date, student reaction to the project has been positive, Melner said, and the Hudson Institute plans to begin work on a new education project titled "Education and Employment" upon completion of "Visions."

Chinese researchers to study at Purdue School of Science

by James Lamb

Research scientists from the People's Republic of China will soon be working in the Purdue School of Science.

The scientists will be part of an exchange with the Synthetic Materials Research Institute in China.

Martel Zeldin, professor of chemistry and department chairman at IUPUI, visited the Chinese research institute last summer at their invitation.

While there, Zeldin presented a series of academic papers to a section of the Chinese scientific and industrial community. He informed them of the work being done at IUPUI, which lead to the exchange.

Four of the Chinese scientist will arrive in mid-March to work in polymer research. Two of them, Zhang Jin-Hua and Quan Nan, will stay only for one month, while Xu Jian-Ming and Zhang Zitong will remain at IUPUI for two years.

Zeldin, Paul L. Dubin, assistant professor of chemistry and Wilmer K. Fife, professor of chemistry, will make up the core IUPUI faculty in the polymer research program.

Polymers are long chain-like molecules which are used to form plastic and other synthetic materials.

Auditions for Shaw play

The IUPUI University Theatre will hold open auditions for its upcoming production of George Bernard Shaw's comedy, "Misalliance," Saturday, Feb. 23 from 10 a.m. to noon and Monday, Feb. 25 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. The auditions will be held in the Mary Cable Building, 525 N. Blackford St., on the main IUPUI campus.

Roles are available for six males and three females. Persons auditioning should have a one-to-two-minute monologue prepared from a classic work such as those by Chekhov, Shaw, or Ibsen, but not Shakespeare.

"Misalliance" takes place in a middle-class country estate in England at the turn of the century, where a successful merchant lives with his dotty wife, daughter and son. Into this peaceful setting comes a sputtering airline with a pilot, who turns out to be an old school chum of the daughter's fiancé, and a Polish woman acrobat, whom all of the males make up to in succession. Then along comes a youth with a gun to kill the merchant father.

"Misalliance" will be presented on the IUPUI Theatre stage April 19, 20, 26, and 27 at 8 p.m. each evening.

Tickets are $5 general public and $2.50 for students and senior citizens and are on sale at all Ticket Master outlets, including the IUPUI Natatorium Ticket Office.

For further information on auditions or tickets, please call the IUPUI University Theatre at 264-3094.

Theatre to honor playwright

by Robert Aull

Poet Langston Hughes wrote: What happens to a dream deferred? does it dry up/like a raisin in the sun?

Twenty-five years ago, Lorraine Hansberry posed this question to American society from the Broadway stage. To mark this anniversary, the IUPUI University Theatre will conduct a symposium on Ms. Hansberry and her landmark work on Friday, Feb. 22, beginning at 2 p.m. in the Madame Walker Urban Life Center.

The symposium is free to the public, and at 8 p.m. the same evening A Raisin in the Sun will open at IUPUI's University Theatre, located in the Mary Cable Building.

Keynote speakers for the symposium include Dr. Margaret B. Wilkerson, Department of Afro-American Studies, University of California/Berkeley. Also speaking will be Dr. Robert Grant, Department of English, University of Southern California, and Robert Nemiroff, Executor of the Lorraine Hansberry Estate. Each is a recognized expert on Ms. Hansberry and her contribution to American drama.

A reception will follow the presentation of papers and open discussion. The events are sponsored in part by the IUPUI Black Student Union, Indiana Black Expo, and the IUPUI Afro-American Studies Program, among others.

A Raisin in the Sun will play at 8 p.m. on the 22 and 23 of February, and again on the weekend of March 1-2. Tickets are available at the IUPUI University Theatre, at the standard price of $5 for the general public, $3.50 for IUPUI faculty and staff, and $2.50 for students and senior citizens. Following the opening night production on February 22, a post-performance Matrix Discussion will be held in the IUPUI Theatre.

'Winter concert' a burst of spring

by Kristi Hart

Dance Kaleidoscope's "Straight from the Heart" opened on Valentine's Day at Indiana Repertory Theatre's Upstage and runs through Sunday, Feb. 24. Gary Masters and Fred Mathews, DK's guest artists-in-residence, each choreographed a new piece especially for this concert.

The festive opening number, "Tribute," choreographed by Deborah Galvin, is dedicated to Indianapolis dance instructor Peggy Dorsey. The DK company conveys with their usual finesse the joy of dance that is Mrs. Dorsey's legacy.

The highlight of the show is "Unpublished Dialogues," choreographed by Lynn Taylor-Corbett of "Tootloose" fame. Four vignettes feature couples in dance dialogues between casual sex partners, newlyweds, and others. Exciting acrobatics are performed by Lynn Elam and Craig Callaway in the vignette, involving two dancers who wrestle with a top hat and cane that grow to enormous proportions by the end of the number.

"Aspirations" is a premiere piece choreographed and danced by Fred Masters. Masters' performance as a nerd who aspires to be a macho man is comedy dancing at its best, and includes such outrageous partners as a giant spider and a barking, battery-operated dog.

Although dubbed DK's "winter concert," this show is a refreshing burst of spring. Tickets are available at the IRT box office and at all Ticketmaster locations. For information about showtimes and dates, call 635-5252.

On Feb. 27 the movies to be shown are: For Love of Ivy starring Sidney Poitier, and Boogie Woogie Dream.

On Feb. 28 Cabin in the Sky starring Lena Horne will be shown.

On both evenings, the films Heritage in Black, Kingdom Builders and Booker T. Washington will be included in the screening.

Free fair

WNAP 93FM has announced the 11th annual 50% Free Fair to be held Sunday, Feb. 24 from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Convention Center.

Before the NBA All Stars arrived in Indianapolis, IUPUI's men's basketball team had the opportunity to practice on the floor of the Hoosier Dome.

The Metros practiced at the Hoosier Dome Tuesday, Feb. 5 and then were invited back Friday, Feb. 8.

Friday's practice was delayed because when IUPUI arrived, balloons which would form a giant American flag were on the basketball court.

Metros continue winning streak; 5 in a row!

by Abby Marmion

The men's basketball team finishes its regular season play this week and will do so with the confidence of a five-game winning streak behind them.

The Metros compete in a non-conference game at Hanover College on Feb. 18 and will have the home court advantage for their final two matches. Feb. 19 they host Oakland City College and Marion College on the 21st. IUPUI had a previous victory over Oakland City earlier in the season, but was beaten by Marion College.

The squad collected two crucial wins last week, moving them from seventh place to a fifth place ranking in NAIA District #21. In a home match they defeated Marian College Feb. 9 with a 65-61 margin.

IUPUI came back strong in the second period after a 34-29 deficit at the half. The turning point of the game came at the :25 mark, with the score divided evenly at 61.

Senior Eric McKay made a steal and was fouled by a Marian player. He made two free throws to make it 63-61 and was fouled again. Once more he was successful at the line, scoring the final two points of the game.

With just :05 to play McKay stole the ball a second time, but couldn't put a bucket up before the buzzer sounded.

IUPUI was again successful two days later, pulling off a tight 67-63 victory at IU-Southeast.

Junior Kayle Funkhouser hit a jumper with less than 1:00 to go and gave the Metros a 65-63 lead. Mike Landis was fouled and scored the winning two from the free throw line.

According to senior captain Maurice Womack, by adding these two wins to their 14-14 record, the Metros passed Franklin and Marian Colleges in the district #21 ranking.

"We've won five in a row and that's only two short of our all-time record. We're back in the running for the district title now that we have moved up," he said.

The senior center feels that IUPUI is in contention with Purdue Calumet, Tri-State and Taylor for the championship. "Taylor is close to losing their #1 ranking because they've lost some crucial NAIA district games. Many of their wins came from non-conference competition," Womack said.

If the Metros win their last two matches they will earn a berth in the playoffs and the possibility of hosting a couple of the games, which begin Feb. 26.

Womack believes that the key in winning their last three lies in the team's ability to avoid mistakes.

"We've started pulling together in our last five games and we have about six or seven people that we rely on very much. It's just come down to the fact that we can't put pressure on ourselves or we will create stupid mistakes. We just can't afford that," said Womack.

During the half-time of Thursday's game students will have a chance to win $100.

At half time of the women's and men's game one student will be given the opportunity to shoot two NBA 3-point shots. If one of the students hits a 3-pointer he/she will win $100. If both students hit a 3-pointer each student will receive $50.

Bookstore chief says 'we care'

by Leslie L. Fuller
Staff Writer

IUPUI campus bookstore director Bill G. Cassell says the bookstore "is a strange business."

"Students need to realize that books are not a money-making faucet of the operation. We don't arbitrarily price books at $30. They are scaled," Cassell says.

Cassell says that textbooks are one the least profitable bookstore items because the textbook trade is very susceptible to inflation.

Cassell said when he first came to IUPUI in 1979 one medical text was $18 and that now the cost of the same book is $85.

The "thriving" used-book industry also affects prices, he says.

"In the last five or six years college bookstores have felt the need to become more aggressive in used books. When many used copies of a text circulate, fewer new books are sold and publishers' profits drop.

"They are then forced to anticipate this and charge higher initial prices for books," Cassell says.

Cassell explains that campus bookstores rely on department notification of student enrollment to judge the number of books needed.

"We need to sell 80 percent of the books we buy. We purchase many books at wholesale. Our problem is the books we don't use," he says.

Most of the bookstores' profit margin comes from the sale of such items as sweatshirts, paper products and school supplies, Cassell said. Profit margins run slightly lower than those of most department stores.

Hank Herrara, director of the Cavanaugh Hall bookstore says that bookstore management sympathizes with the plight of the student.

Herrara adds, though, that students need to understand that "on any special type item the consumer is going to pay."

Cassell compares book bills to other expenditures.

"Have any of you bought a new car lately? You drive it off the lot and it costs $2,000. You come in and buy a textbook, hopefully you will get some education from that book—and you even be able to get 50 percent of it back," he says.

Cassell says the thing that bothers him most, "is when students say 'You don't care'. We care. We realize our job is to provide books at the proper time."
