MISS J.A. FINALIST SELECTED

"Take a deep breath, stand up straight, and smile."
 Those were the thoughts of the 39 lovelies competing for the title of Miss Junior Achievement. Competition has now been narrowed down to only ten girls. Charlene Bills, Indianapolis, Ind.; Diane Drass, Fort Worth, Texas; Judi Draper, Nashville, Tennessee; Betty Jo Feldpausch, Owensboro, Ky.; Kay Kelsay, Dallas, Texas; Linda Stussie, Berkley, Missouri; Peggy Turner, Columbus, Geo.; Susan Ward, Coral Gables, Fla.; and Stephanie Wilson, East Grand Rapids, Michigan.
 Tonight after business clothes modeling and an interview, only the five finalists will remain in competition.

SPEECHES SET AT TONIGHTS MEETING
 Seventeen Achievers were validated for office today by the elections committee.
 Validated for president were J. Byron Davey of Dallas, Texas, Michael Hennigan, Jr. of South Bend Ind., Norman MacLean of Chicago, Ill., Richard Marklund of Rockford, Ill., William Robinson of Birmingham, Ala. and Robert VanZandt of Danville, Ill.
 Vice-presidents validated are Clare Baughman of Canton, Ohio, Lawrence Booth of Birmingham, Ala., James Schlaf of Chicago, Ill., and Terry Costa of Honolulu, Hawaii.
 Conference secretary candidates validated were Dianne Erxleben of Southeastern Michigan, Barbara Lawrence of Buffalo, N.Y., and Shari Roberts of Seattle.

Association secretary candidates are Chellie McAuliffe of Schenectady, Barbara Monahan of Everett, Terrance Stewart of Chicago and Nancy Woodward of Dallas.
 The candidates were validated after they met with the members of the elections committee.
 The committee was concerned with presenting only the qualified persons for election as conference officers.
 Leadership, an acute knowledge of Junior Achievement and business principles and outstanding accomplishments in many levels of activities are qualities set by the committee for validation.
 Those Achievers that did not pass validations may appeal to the Review Board today between 8-9:45 and 12:30-1:45.

 * INTEREST AND TALENT **
 * COMPOSE REAL SWINGING BAND *

MAKING INFORMATION AVAILABLE
 A PRIME SERVICE OF IGA

Areal swinging organization of interesting and talented kids. That's how Lee Bright, counselor and director of the band defines this year's conference band.

The conference band was formed in 1958. At that time Lee Bright, then a delegate, was one of the seven founding members. This year the band has seventeen members with nine different instruments. They are: clarinet, tenor sax, flute, drums, piano, French horn, trombone, and bass horn.

The bandsters practice every afternoon in Rec Room A. Their big moment will come when they play at intermission on Talent Night.

HOUSE COMMITTEE DISTRIBUTES
 BOXES FOR WASTE PAPER

Litter boxes, along with hundreds of posters to remind delegates that it is up to them to keep the conference area clean, were put out yesterday by the House committee.

The committee has the responsibility of keeping the area clean of Coke cups, gum wrappers, and any waste paper that may be thrown away.

The committee members ask that delegates use the litter boxes to deposit their waste paper.

Ken Graften of Madison, Wis. was elected chairman of the committee, and Sue Spalding of Indianapolis, Ind. secretary at their organizational meeting.

The committee must also act as Sgt.-at-arms at the general meetings and see to it that everything runs smoothly. They also are in charge of planning delegation seating.

TRY AN OFF AND OFF SOON

There is a new drink out. It's called Off and Off. For you delegates who are looking for something different may we suggest that you try Off and Off. You simply take a cup, fill it half full with Coke, half with Sprite and mix very, very gently. Its good.

One of the prime services which can benefit the members of International Graduate Achievement and Junior Achievement is the making available of accurate information about former Achievers, says Sid Snellenberg, Executive Secretary of International Graduate Achievement.

The information can be of invaluable benefit to J.A. in the various activities in which they are involved throughout the program year.

Sid is a former Achiever from Indianapolis, Ind. who is now administrative head of the graduate organization.

Graduate Achievement is composed of people who have been Achievers and are no longer eligible to participate in the program as Achievers.

Its purpose is to act as an alumni association, to promote and extend the education of the free enterprise system, and to serve Junior Achievement.

Sid Snellenberg was a conference counselor for three years. This is his first year on the Junior Achievement staff and his fifth national conference.

To become a graduate Achiever, a former Achiever may request an application from the International Graduate Executive Secretary, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York 36, New York, or from any officer of International Graduate Achievement. The dues are $3.00.

"This information gathered by Graduate Achievement can be of great potential to fellow members, none the least of which will be the business and social contacts," he said. "On behalf of the officers of International Graduate Achievement, you are cordially welcome to join our organization when you are no longer eligible to join J.A.."

LOST AND FOUND

The information office reports that there are many items that have been found by them which were lost by delegates. Name-tags, keys, and sweaters have been found. Owners should claim them.

DR. NICHOLAS NYARADI SETS TALK TONIGHT

For the past ten years Mr. Robert Richards, executive director of Peoria, Ill., has been the group song leader at the national conference. He has led thousands of delegates and counselors in song over the past ten years. Above is our staff artist's zany cartoon of the "Official" conference songleader. Let's keep singing!

ASSOCIATION SECRETARY ENVOYS JOB

Although there are 1100 bewildered Achievers rushing in all directions, one of them can now breathe a sigh of relief.

Beverly Brophy, association secretary, can relax. Her job is almost finished.

During this past year, she has spent about nine hours a week performing her duties as secretary.

Bev fits her job "like a glove". She was secretary of her own J.A. company. In addition, she says, "I love my job. Writing is one of my favorite pastimes."

In Windsor, Canada, her home, Bev was a member of JASPR, a radio company which produced a hour long program.

Dr. Nicholas Nyaradi, professor at Bradley University in Peoria, Ill., will address the Achievers tonight at the general meeting in the Auditorium.

Dr. Nyaradi's topic will be "Stronger than the Atom".

A native of Hungary, Dr. Nyaradi is now a citizen of the United States.

He has been a very popular speaker at several Future Unlimited Banquets throughout the country and has been invited to speak at the national conference because of the interest given him by everyone active in J.A.

This will be the first time that Dr. Nyaradi speaks to an all Achiever audience.

Also at tonight's meeting the Regional presidents or a representative from the region will give the regional report.

In a talk filled with humor, but one which contained a serious message, Dean Earl L. Butz, Dean of the School of Agriculture at Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., told the delegates that America's inexhaustable resource was brainpower.

Dean Butz said that the United States would have to destroy much of itself in order to "catch up" with Russia.

He told the delegates that America's resources and economy were far ahead that of Russia and that it was this country's brainpower that must keep it ahead.

The dean is a native of Indiana, born on a livestock farm in Noble county. He is a graduate of Purdue with extensive background in the agricultural field.

He has traveled four times thru Europe and in the Orient and near East and South America, studying food and agricultural conditions.

Dean Butz' address was sponsored by the General Motors Corporation.
