Nurses' Day July 3

SPERLING MEMORIAL HONORS RILEY NURSES

To honor the memory of Anne E. Sperling, R.N., and all nurses and others who have cared for the children at Riley Hospital, a sculpture by Hoosier artist George Debikey will be dedicated in ceremonies in the hospital atrium July 3 at 3:15 p.m. All are welcome. Adding to the celebration of nurses is Mayor William Hudnut's official proclamation making July 3 Riley Hospital Nurse's Day in Indianapolis. Before her untimely death in an auto accident in 1984, Sperling was a "superb nurse and a wonderful human being who was totally dedicated to her work with young children in the toddler unit," said Morris Green, M.D., former physician-in-chief at Riley, who was instrumental in the project to commission "just the right memorial." The search took months, but finally the sculptor and Dr. Green met through Sharon Schlosser and Ondine Terrebonne, Indianapolis art consultants, and along with Omer Foust, director of the Riley Memorial Association, the memorial resulted. Debikey's 20 by 20 inch sculpture depicts a nurse comforting an infant. It was rendered not as a likeness of Sperling, but to epitomize all nurses and care givers of sick children. The sculpture is made possible by gifts from Sperling's family and friends to the Riley Memorial Association, and it will be permanently installed atop a 4-foot oak base on a portal wall in the atrium at Riley.

DEDICATION HONORS DR. SELKURT

The Department of Physiology and Biophysics is dedicating room 309 in the Medical Science Building to Dr. Ewald E. Selhurst, distinguished professor emeritus of physiology, who served as department chairman for 21 years--1958 to 1979. The dedication ceremony was set for June 29 at 4 p.m. in the newly named Selkurt Conference Room. Friends and colleagues were invited to attend.

CAR WASH FOR RILEY UPEC'S FIRST PROJECT

Philanthropy was first on the agenda of the newly formed University Place Employee Council, which is sponsoring a campus car wash/vacuum to benefit Riley Hospital. The council's first president and reservations supervisor Diane Kennedy will join other employees in washing cars from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. for three Saturdays in July, beginning July 7. At the University Place loading dock at the corner of North Street and University Boulevard, volunteers will hand wash the outside and vacuum the inside for $5 per vehicle. For $1.50 more, volunteers will polish your tires.

600 EMPLOYEES TO LEARN COMPLIANCE WITH SEXUAL HARASSMENT POLICY

As June ended, all 600 employees working in Campus Facility Services were expected to complete training intended to help them be aware of and comply with IUPUI's policy on sexual harassment. Stant Clark, personnel coordinator for Physical Plant and Joanne Sanders, assistant director of campus facility services, took training on the subject through a collaborative program developed by Human Resources Administration and the Office of Affirmative Action. They, in turn, gave 27 separate training sessions to the employees that included those working in Physical Plant.

ROTC INSTRUCTOR FOLEY NAMED BEST IN THE MID-WEST, THIRD BEST IN ALL U.S. ARMY
Maj. William A. Foley Jr., assistant professor of military science and former assistant registrar at IUPUI, has been named the top ROTC instructor of the year in the Midwest states and ranked third among all instructors in the U.S. Army in the nation and abroad. To further enhance an already distinguished career in the military and higher education, Foley has accepted the Army's appointment to the highly acclaimed U.S. Army Command and General Staff College in Fort Leavenworth. Upon graduation, the Vietnam veteran will leave the IUPUI Metro Battalion and the history department for a new assignment. He takes with him the wings he earned in May from the Army Air Assault School and most likely, a dual doctoral degree in history and American studies which he is completing at IU.

SPEA'S ROSENTRAUAB RESEARCHES ALL-AMERICAN SUMMER "RITUAL"

Small American cities that want to be called home to the boys of summer may be in a no-win game because even minor league teams can become big boys with expensive toys that cities cannot afford, writes Mark S. Rosentraub, professor and associate dean in the School of Public and Environmental Affairs. His research and resulting paper entitled, "Just Say No?: The Economic and Political Realities of a Small City's Investment in Minor League Baseball" was presented recently at the 20th annual meeting of the Urban Affairs Association in Charlotte, N.C. Using Fort Wayne as a model, and using standards that can be applied to many Midwestern cities, his research shows that Fort Wayne was entirely correct economically in saying no to the owners of the Timbers minor league team who wanted to relocate the Class A team and wanted the city to finance a stadium for it. His research shows that little new money would be generated in the area, but it also concedes that "sports alone offer the best escapism for the masses and provide good publicity for a city. Fans may be acting out an ancient human ritual of building arenas and stadia to watch and honor their heroes." His research was assisted by doctoral student David S. Harlow.

July 4 is an official holiday for many on campus. Libraries, schools and many offices and departments will close for the day. Hospitals, police, labs and many other units remain open and many employees will take the "holiday" at another time. Enjoy.

RICK BAUGHN, IUPUI photographer, won first place with the "moon over the campus" photo (above) in the campus and environmental class in the recent annual competition at the 29th conference of University Photographers of America Association at Door County, Wis. He also was elected public relations director for the group. Baughn also took the aerial photo of the campus (above, right) which is among several aerials of campus buildings and locations that can be purchased by faculty, staff and students. The new shots were taken from a helicopter on the last day of May this year, "a beautiful day for a fly-over," said Baughn. Copies of the aerials are available in color slides and prints in sizes ranging from 5 x 7 inches to 40 x 60 inches. The prints are suitable for framing and gift giving, and are available by contacting Baughn in Learning Technologies, 4-4563.

FINALLY...

...the IUPUI Office of Alumni Relations has moved from the Union Building to Suite 200 in the University Place Conference Center and Hotel--second floor corridor that connects the center and the hotel. The campus address is HO 200, the postal address is 850 West Michigan St., Indianapolis 46202-5198. The alumni publications, printing and mailroom staff and operations remain in the tunnel area in the Union, room B-17. All phone numbers remain the same.

...serving all summer are several members of the staff and faculty in the School of Journalism who are also instructors and officials in the IUPUI-based National Institute for Advanced Reporting. They are traveling across the continent speaking about truly high-tech journalism to professional groups in such cities as Winnepeg, Charlotte (N.C.), Milwaukee, Las Vegas and of all places, Indianapolis and Bloomington. Associate Dean of Journalism James W. Brown is executive director of the institute and joins his associates in making presentations.

...there was an off-season kick-off June 25 when Bill Brooks, wide receiver for the Colts, caught the attention of many at-risk kids who might drop out, do drugs or have babies way before their time. He was the featured speaker in the meeting to begin IUPUI's Partners 2000 and STEP projects which hire, teach life skills to disadvantaged teens now through Aug. 10. Thirty-five IUPUI supervisors opted to give the young people a break--at no cost to the departments. Ted Booher is coordinator.
