LEHNEN AND MCCARTHY LEAD NEW IU CENTER

LEHNEN

MCCARTHY

Research supported by a new center with sites at IUPUI and IUB will seek to discover what makes good schools and successful students. Robert G. Lehen, professor of public and environmental affairs at IUPUI, and Martha M. McCarthy, professor of education at IUB, will direct the newly formed Indiana Education Policy Center which is made possible by a $2.3 million grant from Lilly Endowment. To begin, the Center will examine the amounts of money allotted schools, types of management, curriculum, the education of teachers and the way teachers teach. The restructuring of schools and the way children learn also will be investigated. McCarthy will oversee operations at Bloomington, where she directs the Consortium on Education Policy Studies. Lehen will direct the IUPUI site, where he directed a School Finance Project in SPEA. They are developing a data base that will be used by legislators, educators and others in establishing education policy in the future. The resources and specialists in more than 18 schools in the IU system will also be utilized and, according to Lehen, "The Center can have a profound effect on education reforms, decision making and planning." McCarthy said that while the Center will operate objectively and in a nonpartisan way, "I would like to see the Center take a leadership role in shaping the education agenda in Indiana."

SWISS PIANIST DOBLER FIRST IN CONCERT SERIES— Acclaimed Swiss pianist Charles Dobler will present a free concert of traditional and contemporary music Oct. 21 at 4 p.m. in the auditorium of University Place. Dobler is first in the 1990-91 concert series and his performance is sponsored by the School of Music, University Place and Pro Helvetia, the Foundation for the Endowment of Swiss Art Abroad. Considered a champion of contemporary Swiss composers, Dobler often plays "first" performances and premieres works that are often dedicated to him. A gifted teacher, he lectures in many universities and is a member of the jury for diplomas in Swiss conservatories and for international competitions. IUPUI faculty, staff and students and their guests are welcome.

There is no charge for any event and all are welcome. For a complete schedule, call Karen Marks, 4-3931.

IUPUI JOINS WORLD IN WORLD FOOD DAY OBSERVANCES

Two years ago the world's people ate more than they grew, the world food surplus is steadily diminishing and this year more than 500 million people will die or suffer for lack of enough to eat. Consideration of these problems and their solutions will be presented during an interactive teleconference Oct. 16, 11 a.m.-3 p.m. in the auditorium of the Nursing Building. Titled "Food for the Future: Science, Policy and Ethics," the conference is set to coincide with the United Nations World Food Day also Oct. 16. Learning Technologies is assisting with the interactive program that will be telecast live from the studios of George Washington University in Washington, D.C., and will feature experts from across the country. There is no charge and faculty members are urged to bring classes that may come and go as necessary throughout the afternoon. Sponsors are International Affairs, Div. of Continuing Studies, School of Social Work and the Center for Global Studies. For more, call Gretchen Schirmer, 4-6999.
