

EMILY HOLMQUIST TO RETIRE AS NURSING DEAN

Dean Emily Holmquist of the School of Nursing of IUPUI has requested retirement from the deanship of the School. As a professor of nursing, she plans to continue to teach and conduct research.

Chancellor Maynard K. Hine said: "Dean Holmquist's request to retire as dean has been accepted with considerable regret and after much study. She has demonstrated remarkable educational, professional, and administrative leadership in the post. Under her direction, the School has made many significant advances in both quality and quantity."

Dean Holmquist, who has headed the School of Nursing since 1957, said: "After administering the School for a relatively long period, I decided to request this change. In the near future, with a new building and expanded programs, a number of key decisions will be needed. This seemed to be an appropriate time to recommend that a new dean be named."

Chancellor Hine has appointed a Search and Screen Committee to nominate a candidate for the deanship. Members of the committee include faculty members, administrators, and students. Chairman of the committee is Professor Helen Weber of the School of Nursing.

Dean Holmquist's retirement as dean is to become effective July 1, subject to the committee's recommendation and approval by the I.U. Board of Trustees.

When Dean Holmquist first assumed the post, the School's enrollment was approximately 250. The fall 1971 total is 1,094. During the 1960s, the I.U. graduate and undergraduate programs in nursing were unified within the School. Ground was broken last year for a $5.2-million building for the School.

Dean Holmquist also took part in establishing two-year Associate of Arts in nursing degree programs at I.U. regional campuses, including those at Gary, Jeffersonville, and Kokomo. Last summer, the Associate of Arts programs at IUPUI divisions became part of the School of Nursing.

Dean Holmquist joined the School after serving as chairman of the department of nursing education at the University of Pittsburgh School of Nursing. She holds an M.A. and a B.S. from the University of Pittsburgh and received an honorary Doctor of Humanities from the University of Evansville in 1966.

She recently was re-elected to a two-year term as president of the Indiana State Nurses Association. She has served as a consultant to Federal agencies and has been active in national professional associations. Many of her publications and speeches have concerned educational aspects of the profession of nursing.

PHYSICIANS PRESENT MEDICAL SCHOOL WITH $110,000

The Indiana Medical Education Foundation, representing Indiana's practicing physicians, has presented a $110,000 gift to the Indiana University School of Medicine to support program development and fellowships for medical students.

The grant from the foundation, which is affiliated with the Indiana State Medical Association, provides $45,000 for the new Department of Family Medicine, $30,000 for the school's new program in nuclear medicine, $15,000 for medical student fellowships, $4,000 for lecturers and the joint ISMA-School of Medicine medical civics course, and $16,000 for the school's surgery department.

"We are most grateful for the exceptionally generous support which continues from the foundation and the physicians," said Dr. Glenn W. Irwin Jr., dean of the school.

"The School of Medicine is in the most crucial period of transition in its history with the development of the statewide education program, and the establishment of new programs in family medicine, community medicine, and nuclear medicine. The gift will be well spent to improve health care for the entire state," said Dean Irwin.

These funds all represent gifts from physicians to support the School of Medicine and its programs. Since the foundation was organized in 1953, its supporters have provided more than $811,000 for the School of Medicine.
