PRESIDENT NAMES SCHNEIDERMAN TO COUNCIL

Leonard Schneiderman, dean of the I.U. School of Social Work, has been named to the President's Advisory Council on Adult Education, it was announced Tuesday (Aug. 28) by President Carter. Schneiderman was one of 10 appointments announced for the council and the only one from Indiana.

The 15-member group advises the president on the need for developing national policies and programs relating to the education of adults.

Commenting on his appointment, Schneiderman pointed to basic social changes taking place which the president must consider in advancing educational policies.

"The notion of education as preparation for life has already been substantially replaced by the reality of education as a way of life," he noted. "The belief that education is primarily an activity for children is clearly out of date. For a variety of complex reasons, education will become an increasingly important part of the average adult's total life experience. The urban public university must become a major educational center responsive to the need for lifelong education.

"The reasons for these changes," he added, "are clear and compelling. They include issues of national economic planning, the expanding demand for flexibility and choice in adult life styles, and the urgent demand for greater equity in access to economic, cultural and social opportunities for previously disadvantaged groups."

Schneiderman cited other circumstances that are contributing to the explosion of adults enrolling in higher education: The need to keep abreast of constantly changing technologies, the availability of leisure time which is being used more often in education activities, and the increasing instances of mid-life career changes that require further education.

Schneiderman has been dean of the Indianapolis-based school for two years. Previously he was professor of social policy and chairman of the Social Policy Faculty at the Ohio State University School of Social Work.

The author of many articles in national professional social work publications and journals, Schneiderman also is an expert on the social welfare systems of other countries. He has traveled and studied extensively in Great Britain, Japan, the Soviet Union, People's Republic of China, Puerto Rico and the Philippines.

WATT WATCHERS CUTTING ELECTRICAL CALORIES

Figures for all buildings on the campus for a comparison of electrical usage from June to July of this year reflect a savings not so great as that in the partial report in the Green Sheet two weeks ago.

According to Ralph Bennett, chief electrical engineer, the average kilowatt hour consumption for June to July is down only 4.03 percent in all the 34 buildings which are measured. The partial report showed consumption down 13 percent from July 1978 to July of 1979. But that did not include four electricity users away from the University Quarter Campus.

The reduction is still commendable, Bennett says, but he urges everyone to be an active Watt Watcher by reducing when and wherever possible, as well as by sending in suggestions for general and permanent reduction. Send your suggestions to R.K. Bennett, Room 202, Physical Plant. And don't forget that pot of $500 in prizes which will be awarded to the suggestors of the best ways to cut consumption.
