Parking solutions given

by David Edy

"With registration and people using the bookstore and [attending] classes, the problems [with parking] were compounded the first day," says John Gilbert, associate director of parking services.

Since the beginning of school, a number of cars have been illegally parked on the grass, on the shoulders along Vermont and Patterson Streets and along the driveways of Lots 80, 89 and 58.

Gilbert contends, "It takes about 10 days of parking for people to get situated."

As an immediate solution to the problems along Agnes Street, Gilbert recommends that students use Lot 84 on the east side of the new SPEA building.

"If students will go in there, they will find a space with no problems. This will save the problems of circling at the Agnes lot and will get them to class quicker," said Gilbert.

Students coming in from the west should use Lots 90, 91 and 92, just southwest of Lecture Hall. According to Gilbert, there were 600 empty spaces in these lots on August 27 while students parked on the grass.

Robert Tirmenstein, director of parking services senses that students might be afraid to park in these lots because of several old buildings in the vicinity.

"The old, burnt-out house should be torn down soon, and the old bakery [Mid City Salt] is almost gone." He imagines that students might be more willing to use these lots once they are visible from Lecture or Cavanaugh Hall.

Also to ease the parking problems, the East Garage (at Blake and Michigan) has been

APO invites new members

What do the members of Alpha Phi Omega have in common?

According to Jim Jones, APO president, the common element is "wanting to help others."

—Friendship and service—that's Alpha Phi Omega, a national service fraternity opened to all comers. IUPUI's APO chapter will hold its annual rush party to solicit new members Friday, Sept. 12, at 7 p.m. in the Roof Lounge of the Union Building. All are invited to attend.

APO has been on campus for over a decade. Its purpose is "to give students a helping hand," explains Jones.

With 50 active members, APO runs a semesterly book exchange free of charge for fellow students. APO also sponsors campus blood drives and Reno Night, an evening of lawful gambling. This year APO might sponsor an IUPUI skating party as well.

Each December, this service fraternity also provides Christmas cheer to local needy children with gifts of clothes and toys.

"We do have a lot of fun," confesses Jones, adding the fraternity has at least one social function over summer break. This year APO members travelled to Chicago to see Richard Burton in the revival of Camelot.

The organization also goes on weekends twice a year to prepare Camp Ransburg, Bloomington, Ind., for visiting Boy Scout troops.

Jones, elected president last May, concludes, "Joining APO is a good way to meet people and facilitate communication between your fellow commuter classmates."

Membership fees, which include national and local dues, are $30 for new pledges and $10 annually for active members. For more information on APO and its activities, contact President Jones at 356-0449.

opened temporarily to blue, green and red permit parking.

"Students now simply take a ticket when entering and simply hand that ticket to the attendant when leaving. There is no cost [other than a permit]," said Gilbert.

The garages are not open for garage card permits as yet, because electronic card reading devices are not available for installation. When these are ready, the garage will be open only to those students and staff who purchase a garage card.

"Students can apply sticker cost to the card. The card cost will be pro-rated for this semester," says Gilbert.

Because of construction, a number of green lots have been closed, forcing a number of green-permit holders to park in the red lots. Plans now call for the reopening of old green lots [37 and 36].

"At least 500 red spaces will free up, when 36, 37 and the garages open up," says Gilbert.

According to Tirmenstein, the problems seem worse this year, because there appear to be more students at IUPUI in the morning.

He adds, however, that "we have never yet, except for a snow eight inches or over, had a time when there weren't parking spaces available in all permit categories."

Nuclear waste on campus contained

by Susan J. Ferrer

The radioactive by-products of nuclear medicine and research are stored in a basement room of the Clinical Building on IUPUI's Michigan Street campus. At capacity, the Med Center processing facility contains 60 55-gallon barrels of nuclear waste.

How safe is the IUPUI community from contamination? "I think the hazards regarding waste have been magnified," remarks Mack Richard, radiation safety officer for IUPUI.

Much of the waste could simply be thrown out with the regular trash. There's no doubt in my mind that the majority of it produced here could be incinerated, but when you tell the public you're going to incinerate, they go bananas," says Richard.

"The bottom line is the burial sites are going to be closed," contends Richard, adding "someone has to come up with disposal alternatives."

Currently, radionuclide by-products are stored in drums and shipped every six weeks by truck to a burial site in Richland, Wash.

The radioactive waste, solids, liquids and contaminated animal carcasses, are the by-products of nuclear medicine and the research of health physics. Approximately 100 scientists, "principal investigators," are authorized to use radionuclides in diagnostic work and laboratory research.

According to Richard, researchers work with "relatively low activity levels; levels for nuclear medicine are more elevated."

He adds, "Any level handled correctly is safe."

Richard, a Purdue graduate and master's degree holder in health physics, contends that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has gone "overboard" with regulations regarding the handling and disposal of radionuclide waste. He suggests that the NRC treats the field of nuclear medicine with the same obsessive caution it treats the nuclear power industry.

"We get new [regulations] all the time," he adds.

As radiation safety officer, Richard is responsible for making sure pertinent laws and regulations are being observed. Regulations come from the NRC, the Food and Drug Administration, the Indiana State Board of Health, the Department of Transportation and IUPUI's own university committees on radiation safety.

(Richard also teaches nuclear safety and reviews all uses of isotopes on campus. His office conducts regular inspections of X-ray machines and radiopharmaceutical labs.)

Low-level radioactive by-products are transferred to the holding room at designated times. The floor of the facility is "essentially seamless" to prevent the possibility of seepage through floor crevices. The waste is packed in vials, bags or other containers before they are sealed in utility-size drums.

"It will cost $70,000 to ship waste this year," reveals Richard, adding that the cost has doubled since last year. He blames the increase in costs on fuel prices and an active discouragement from governors whose states are used for dumping grounds.

The shipping cost for each drum—$170 for radioactive vials, $161 for solid waste and $178 for contaminated animal carcasses—is "incentive to look for a [disposal] alternative," claims Richard.

"The cost we are incurring on waste is on the ridiculous side.

State incineration is more feasible," he contends.

Remarking that radioactivity levels of waste handled by IUPUI are comparable to background levels produced in nature, Richard charges, "People get so excited about waste. The truck could spill on the highway, and the actual radiation hazard would be slim to none."

He maintains that the public must look at potential waste hazards in relative terms. "The benefits" of a science that utilizes radionuclides "far outweighs the risks involved," says Richard.

He admits the biggest problem is "public relations"—diminishing the public cynicism about all aspects of nuclear industry.

The radioactive by-products of nuclear medicine and research are stored in a holding facility in the basement of the Clinical Building on IUPUI's Michigan Street campus. Every six weeks some 60 barrels leave IUPUI for their final dumping destination. (Photo by David Edy)

Einstein's life to be celebrated

The life of Albert Einstein will be celebrated during a 10-day period being set aside in September at IUPUI. Einstein, whose ideas about mathematics and physics changed all of science, was born March 14, 1879 and died in 1955. The centennial year of his birth is being observed still.

Dr. Erwin Boeschmann, professor of chemistry in the Purdue University School of Science at IUPUI and coordinator of the Einstein celebration, pointed out that while Einstein may be the best known scientist of our time, there is much confusion about him.

"For example, many think he was involved in developing nuclear weapons," Boeschmann said, "but all he did was write a letter to President Roosevelt urging immediate steps toward that end. We hope to clarify those minor points and put some emphasis on his real significance."

Several events are planned at IUPUI for the celebration Sept. 15-24.

A display of 18 free-standing panels which graphically describe Einstein's history will be set up at two IUPUI locations—in the faculty lounge of the Krannert Science Building on the 38th Street campus and the main floor of University Library on the West Michigan Street campus.

Einstein the Man, a one-man play, will dramatize the connections between Einstein's scientific, political, philosophical and religious concerns. It is scheduled for two free performances in the IUPUI Lecture Hall Sept. 23 at 4 p.m. in Room 103 and Sept. 24 at 7:30 p.m. in Room 100.

Written, produced and played by William Landry, managing director of the American Educational Theater, Einstein has been seen by nearly 200,000 persons in 33 states since it premiered at Oak Ridge, Tenn., in 1977. The play will be followed by a discussion led by Landry and members of the IUPUI faculty.

Landry, who takes on the character and appearance of Einstein to a remarkable degree, requires two hours for make-up application alone. Because of the unusual nature of his make-up, which transforms Landry's face into Einstein's, students of theater and others who are interested are invited to observe the process before each performance.

Landry will make up and discuss the technique he uses from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the IUPUI theater department.

Plan to spend an enjoyable day at the Physical Education campus (64th Street) campus. Registration forms are available in CA 322 or Union G023.

Bunnell predicts baseball success

by Ann Miller

With one stand against Purdue-Northwest behind them, Coach Bob Bunnell and his Baseball Metros are looking to improve over last spring's win-loss record. IUPUI ballplayers garnered only two wins in their first varsity season.

According to Bunnell, "Last year, pitching was non-existent. We had only one bona fide pitcher."

For the autumn program, Bunnell has assembled a sizeable stable of promising moundmen. Among these newcomers are two of the top prep performers in the county. Ron-calli's Tom Davis and Scott Corrigan of Lawrence North.

Southpaw Corrigan sported an amazing 5 ERA last spring. Davis, a righthander, was the scourge of the better's box in high school, compiling an 18-2 record over the past two seasons on his way to all-city honors.

Another frosh hurler that Bunnell is counting on is Steve Dixon. Dixon was undefeated (8-0) during his senior year at Lafayette Jeff. Also shoring up the pitching staff are Jim Payton, an Indianapolis native from Broward Junior College in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Gary Stephenson of Cascade High School, and Pat Ehret, Northwest Pioneers.

All will join Tony Rogers, who pitched the two winning games for the Metros last spring.

Some of these pitchers will be seeing double duty. Corrigan, Davis and Dixon all play outfield and first base. Ehret also is an outfielder, while Stephenson may take a turn at shortstop.

Turning Davis and Corrigan "highly sought after," Bunnell nevertheless calls his "biggest coup" the signing of ex-Ben Davis shortstop Jeff Fleisherty. Fleisherty will start at this position, moving Mike Quinlan to second base. Returns Cliff Kelly will hold down third.

The lone senior on the Metros, Terry Doris, gets the nod at first. In addition, Doris will back up regular catcher Ralph Skaggs. The outfield is not yet set, and Bunnell indicated that he may rotate his outfielders, depending on the pitcher.

Last spring's team was woefully error-prone at times, but Bunnell expresses confidence in this fall's defense. According to Bunnell, "The infield is very tough; Quinlan and Doris will be a super double-play combination."

Despite several excellent hitters on the squad, notably Skaggs and Kelly, the team's batting average last spring was a flat .182. Bunnell expects this to rise considerably. The veterans now have a year's varsity experience, and the freshmen "are all good hitters," explains Bunnell.

The 27-man Metro team (19 regulars with eight on the "taxi" squad) will play four games this fall, plus a number of scrimmages with Indiana Central, Marian and Franklin. Bunnell has drawn up a 31-game slate for next spring including an 11-game stint in Jacksonville, Fla., over Spring Break.

Returning home, the Baseball Metros will once again be playing several games at Bush Stadium as prelims to the Indianapolis Indians' contests.

Despite the fact that his team, with regular games and scrimmages combined, will be playing over 60 games, Coach Bunnell is not concerned that his Metros will tire.

"I don't think that baseball players burn out like, say, basketball players do," insists Bunnell.

"The hitting should be better and the defense could be excellent," concludes Bunnell. "We now have eight, nine or 10 kids who are capable of pitching college ball, and this will help tremendously."

"The pitching will be good; maybe better, depending on how fast the freshmen mature. I don't think anybody who played us last year will recognize us," remarks Bunnell.

Meco

Empire Strikes Back
(RSO RO-1-3086)
Boris Midney
Empire Strikes Back
(RSO RS-1-3079)

With the release of Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back, it was anticipated that the record company with soundtrack rights would make a fortune. RSO managed to get those rights, plus the rights to all other Empire albums. Consequently the two competing disco versions appear on the same label.

There is, however, very little competition. Meco came out of his slump to produce one of his best albums. Boris Midney, coming off the success of his disco rendition of Evita, fails miserably. His Empire dies before the "Main Title" ends.

Midney has tried to create a more avant-garde sound. Familiar themes suddenly shift into atonal sound patterns, breaking back into another theme. It seems that Star Wars is of little importance—Midney imposes his musical ideas on John Williams' music once too often.

It's obvious that Midney wants to be his own man. He has good ideas—much of what he imposes on this music could make some electrifying original dance music. Here, Midney is out of his element. You simply cannot make something profound and relevant out of music that wants to be fun.

And fun is the exact reason why Meco's Empire succeeds. Meco realized that this music was not to be taken seriously and wrote his arrangements accordingly.

The main themes were spliced together so as to recreate the film on the dance floor. X-wing and TIE fighters battle furiously, weaving in and out around the disco beat. Artoo screams as Luke and Darth Vader battle with light-sabres.

The brief sections of sound effects are only part of the fun. The music presented here is electrifying. The pace never lets up. And the playing is fairly inspired—Meco finally ended his slump to create a Star Wars that rocks hard and fast.

Both Midney's and Meco's albums are candidates for hi-fi awards. While Midney's Empire is billed as a high fidelity production (the excellent sound is about the only thing it has going for it), Meco left it unsaid—his albums are always well produced.

I suppose Midney felt he needed something to sell his record. Meco's record is also less expensive. At $5.98 list, the ten-inch disc gives the same playing time for less money.

you ask good friends.

When you ask good friends for a favor, you know what they're going to say. So you tell them you're moving again and then wait for the groans to stop. They may not like the idea, but you know they're going to be there. When you're finished, these people are going to deserve something special. Tonight, let it be Löwenbräu.
