MEDICAL SCHOOL IN "AMBULATORY CARE" PROJECT

The I.U. School of Medicine has been selected as one of 10 institutions to participate in the Association of American Medical Colleges' project for the development of models for the provision of "One Class" ambulatory care services in university-affiliated teaching hospitals. The project is directed toward institutions in which the clinical faculty and administration of the college of medicine and the hospitals are committed to the provision of accessible, comprehensive, continuing one-class ambulatory medical services and to the improvement of physician education in the ambulatory setting.

Funded by a one-year contract from the Health Resources Administration of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the project is designed to help plan and implement model hospital-based ambulatory care systems by means of workshops and on-site consultations.

DIRECTOR-HUNTING

The Consortium for Urban Education (CUE) of Indianapolis is accepting applications for a half-time director of community services.

The director should be knowledgeable about the Indianapolis social service and education setting, possess program administrative capabilities, be familiar with government grants procedures and capable of proposal writing, plan to have the entire community service division self-sustaining, including own salary, through outside funding in 18 months. The guidelines note that community service activities all carry an educational component.

Interested persons should send resumes to Dr. John C. Buhner, vice-chancellor and dean of the faculties, Administration Building, Room 108. Because this is a half-time position, an applicant should have prior agreement with his or her immediate supervisor that a half-time release can be arranged.
