Brief Description: (required)

The University Graduate School has offered doctoral students the option of designing and enrolling in a special individualized minor to provide additional depth and breadth to a student's program plan of study.

Rationale for new minor: (required)

In some cases, doctoral students working with their advisory committee have found a need to develop a more specialized or customized minor to enhance the depth and breadth of the student's major program of study. Such special individualized minors (12 or more credit hours of graduate work in two or more programs) or a minor not specifically listed in the University Graduate School bulletin may be approved by the Dean of the University Graduate School following a recommendation by the doctoral student's advisory committee. This approval should be requested prior to pursuit of any of the proposed courses of study within the minor. Examination procedures (if any) for this individualized minor or other requirements for the minor (for example, stipulation of the minimum grades acceptable) should also be specified by the student's advisory committee in the request to the Dean.

List of required courses: (required)

Graduate level courses should be taken from outside the major program of study. However, these may include courses from two or more programs as well as inter-disciplinary and intra-departmental areas of study.

List of electives or substitute courses:

The list of electives or substitute courses will be provided by the student's advisory committee in their request for approval of this individualized minor to the Dean or his representative from the University Graduate School.
