

HERRON SCHOOL of ART + DESIGN FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Wednesday, February 26, 2014

Call for session proposals for 2015 FATE conference has a March 17 deadline

PRESS CONTACT:

Glenda McGann

Assistant Dean for Development and External Affairs
Herron School of Art and Design,
IUPUI

gmmcgann@iupui.edu

317-278-9477

735 W. New York St., HR224A
Indianapolis, IN 46202
herron.iupui.edu

fATE / 2015 TECTONIC SHIFTS

Indianapolis—2015 FATE—Foundations in Art: Theory and Education—conference organizers are calling for session proposals. All entries must be submitted by midnight, March 17, 2014.

Tectonic Shifts: Breaking New Ground, is the conference theme, and the epicenter will be Indianapolis, where Herron School of Art and Design at IUPUI will host the biennial event from March 25-28, 2015.

The theme invites an examination of how the forces of change are shaping the foundation studies landscape. Organizers are looking for proposals from a broad spectrum of studio artists and academics who have an interest in foundation studies. Proposals are welcome from all who contribute to the foundation experience, including teachers from studio and academic areas such as art history and other liberal arts, lab technicians, librarians, AP teachers and graduate teaching assistants.

- How is your program breaking new ground in teaching practice?
- What innovative teaching models and possibilities are forming?
- How has experimentation shaken up old ideas about how artists and designers are educated?

What matters. Where it matters.

HERRON SCHOOL of ART + DESIGN

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Applicants may submit up to two session proposals. Session length is 90 minutes, which can accommodate three or four presenters, and allows for an introduction and question and answer segments. Approximately 100 sessions will run during the three-day conference. Session proposals should not exceed 200 words and may be submitted online. A current CV is also required.

For more information, visit <http://www-foundations-art.org/conferences>.

-30-

What matters. Where it matters.