Ceramics now offered at Herron

This fall, Herron School of Art will add a three-credit, 300-level caramic workshop to its list of elective studio classes open to non-Herron students. The class, C360, will mark the first time a ceramica class at Harrow has been offered to the general student population. of IPPPER

According to Mark Richardson, hand instructor of curamics, the course will be designed to expose non-art students to the world of con-temporary caramics as a fine-art medium. "Instilling an awareness of the use of clay as an expressive material, as opposed to the material used for utilitarian pottery, will be a primary concern," Richa workshop in the fall will hopefully lead to a more expanded offering in the

The elective art-studio courses at Herron are a popular humanities requirements in most of the university's degree programs. Students who plan to take them, and who are considering applying for admission to a Herron dagras program, should note that the studio courses listed as open to nor art majors are, in general, not transferable to a Herron degree. According to Maria Herron School of Art. the Herron Portfolio Review Committee "very rarely allows credit from such courses to be applied toward Herron degree requirements.

Specific questions about elective studio classes, or classes applicable to a Herron degree, ould be directed to Lois Hackleman, Admissions Office, Herron School of Art.

Workshop illuminates 'Third World'

hy George Curter More than 65 students from various schools in the IU system recently participated in the third annual Third World Study Series workshop, held June 27 to July 13. The work shop, entitled Women in the Third World," concentrated on the dilemmas facing women in economically deprived countries.

Sponsored by the Office of International Programs and the Division of Continuing Studies, the workshop presented discussions on nutrition, changing sex roles, women's liberation, population growth and control, and women in medical practica.

Leading the discussions were professors from the IU system who are expert on Third World conditions. Participants from the IUPUI faculty were Dr. Rahim Khavidi, Geography; Dr. Irene Tajalli-Amal, School of Social Work; Dr. Elizabeth Choi, Professor Rebecca Markel and Dr. Nathalie Fedynskyj, School of Nursing; and Dr Zacharie Brahmi, Medicine.

The workshop offered optional credit through the departments of Political Science, Anthropology and Geography and the School of Nursing.

Fedynskyj, chairperson of the International Steering Committee initiated the workshops to spread knowledge about the Third World in this country. Until 1981 there were no educational opportunities on this subject available in the IU system. "Our people here," Fedynskyj stated, "don't know what the Third World is," even though it comprises one half of the world's population and nearly 100 countries.

The major problem facing America, according to Dr. Fedynskyj, consists in "the differences in culture" between America and the Third World.

These people [of the Third World] are very proud," she continued. "They have their own culture and values. When dealing with other people, we think they're just like us."

Yet nothing could be further from the truth, she said. "Men are a little more exposed to changes in culture. Women have been more deprived culturally and are more abaltared Fedynskyj attributed the turmoil we have recently witpessed in the Middle East to this general lack of understanding.

Dr. Fedynskyj expressed hope that this workshop series will provide a previously unavailable opportunity to learn about the problems facing women in deprived countries

The first workshop. presented in 1981, explored Food and the Third World." In 1982, experts discussed Population in the Third World," and next year's workshop will focus on health.

Peirce Project director. former dean to leave IUPUI

by Goorge Carter
Dr. Edwin C. Moore, director of the Peirce Project, retired executive deen and deen of faculty, announced this past week that he will be leaving IIIPUI at the end of August. He recently accepted the position of Vice Chancellor for academic affairs, planning and budget for the University of

Since his retirement at the nd of the 1982 spring term Dr. Moore has been acting dean for academic affairs at IU Kokomo, special assistant to IU vice-president Glenn Irwin.

Dr. Moore spent many years in the IU system as a professor of philosophy and since 1976 has directed the Pairce Project.

Parking rates increase hy Aubrey M. Woods Effective July 1, parking rates were increased for students and faculty on the IUPUI campus. Along with the rata increase came a change in the designation system for parking lots.

The new rate for full-time students is $13.50 per semester. Part-time students will pay $6.75 per semester. For purposes of assessing park-ing fees, students enrolled in 9 or more credit-hours will be regarded as full-time. Parking rates were formerly $12.75 for full-time students and 86,40 for part-time. According to the Green

Sheet, the newsletter for IUPUI staff, lot designations were changed in order to make IUPUI designations the same as those at other IU-system lote. Signs bearing the letters A, B and E are currently replacing the blue, green and red signs formerly used to distinguish the lots.

An 'A" parking permit now costs $9.50 per month, and a "B" permit $4.40. "E" (evening) permits are $1.50

Rates for garage parking also were raised. An "A" garage permit card now costs $15.40 per month, and a "B" card $14.85 per month.

Reader spots error

A sharp-eyed Sagamore reader, Lies James, brought to our attention an error in the July 13 issue. The amnouncer at the White River Park State Games said that the Center Grove High School marching band is the current state champion, and we referred to it as such. James stated that The Green Regime. the marching band of Lawrence North High School, is the champion.

A call to Don Lain, band director at Lawrence North, confirmed James' assertion. The Green Regime is the 1982-83 champion, and was 1981-82 champion as well.

We regret the error, and appreciate James' pointing it out.

Hopefuls strive at rookie/free agent camp by Abby Marmion Wednesday, July 20 marked the opening of the Indiana Pacers' Rookie/Free Ages Camp at the IU School of Physical Education/ Natatorium. The camp continued through July 22 at Market Square Arena.

The 20 participants included rookie draft choices LeRoy Combe, Jim Thomas, Ray McCallum and free agents David Magley and Chad Kinch. Steve Stipanovitch and Sidney Lowe, the Pacers' top two rookie choices, were not present and have not yet signed contracts with Indiana.

During the opening two days of the camp, Head Coach Jack McKinney and Assistant Coach George Irvine led the rookie players in running and stretching exercises and worked with them on dribbling, passing and shooting drills. The players then took part in a scrimmage game at the end of the practices

The camp culminated on Friday night at Market Square Arena, where the rookies and free agents were divided up and went head-to-head in an intrasquad game. Coach McKinney then chose 11 of these athletes to play in the Indiana Pacer-Los Angeles Summer League.

The players selected, and their schools, are: LeRoy Combs, Oklahoma State; Lee Cunningham, Utah State; Andrew Fields, Cheyney State; Greg Jones, West Virginia; Stove Lingenfelter, South Dakota State; Ray McCallum, Ball State; Larry KcKinney, Boise State; Russ Schoene. Tennessee-Chattanooga; Roger Stieg, Mississippi; Jim Thomas, Indiana; and Jose Slaughter, Portland.

This summer league is for pre-training competition prior to the start of the official training camp in the fall. From the league McKinney will make further cuts.

The top rookie draft choice from an Indiana college was IU graduate Jim Thomas. (See related story on this page.) Thomas, a guard at 6'4" 190, was also a draft choice for the National Football League's Green Bay Packers and a United States Football League pick as well.

The soft-spoken Thomas competed in track and field, foothall and basketball in high school. He chose to concentrate on basketball in college when coach Bob Knight recruited him, "I wanted to excel in basketball, more so than in other sports," Thomas said "At first, I was uncoordinated with the ball, then it became easier - so I stuck with it."

Easier it must have been, as Thomas, in his career at IU, was a member of one NIT, one NCAA and three Big Ten teams. Thomas feels, however, that going from college to pro ball involves a major transition. The main difference, he said, is the psychological aspect: "There are so many good players that can fill your position and you really have to be on your toes."

"On your toes" describes Thomas perfectly. Going for a rebound, he jumps as though he has springs built into his legs. His agility enables him to handle the ball very well.

From three Big Ten cham-pionships to an NCAA Basketball crown, Thomas now is leaping for higher goals. His goal now is a barth on the Pacer team next fall. As one of 11 chosen for the Pacer summer league, he's already leapt the first obstacle.

Thomas confident despite stiff competition

by Matt Shrum

On Thursday, December 30, 1982, Jim Thomas first set foot upon the gymnasium floor at IUPUI's School of Physical Education as a member of the Indiana University basketball

IUPUI hosts Clay Courts

by George Carter
The 74th U.S. Clay Courts Tennis championships begin on July 31 at the Indianapolis Sports Center on the IUPUI campus. The eight-day competi-tion will feature Jose Luis-Clerc and last year's champion, Jose Higueras. Defending champion Virginia Ruzici returns this year, along with number one seeded Sylvia Hanaka of West Germany.

The purse for this tournsment will exceed $589,000.

Tournament director Stan Malless fielded questions from the press last week regarding the failure of top tennis players to appear here.

He stated that the topranked players - Jimmy Conners, John McEnroe, Martine Navratalove and Chris Evert Lloyd - demanded appearance money, which is in conflict with the tournament organizers' policy. McEnros, who appeared here in the past, never advanced beyond the semi-finale and doesn't like to play on the clay surface.

Citing Andrea Jeager's lob-sthon two years ago as an exception, Malless expressed con-fidence that the women's play will be exciting as always.

seven months later, Thomas returned to the IUPUI hardwood - only this time he was one of 22 hopefuls looking to make the play-for-pay league. The IUPUI gymnasium was the site of the opening day of the Indiana Pacers' rookie/free agent camp.

After the first of three two-a-day workouts was over, Thomas seemed confident. "I feel my chances of making the Pacers) are as good as any. I think I came from a pretty strong program, having attended Indiana University," he said.

As a sophomore at Indiana, Thomas was the sixth man on the Hoosiers' National Championship Club and was named to the All Final Four team. He then stepped in as the Hoosiers' point guard his final two years when Islah Thomas declared hardship.

One of the toughest aspects of being a rookie is learning a new system, Thomas said.
"Right now I am just trying to learn the different aspects of the game Coach McKinney Paper coach Jack McKinneyl in trying to stress. Like if I pass the ball, I pass and look to break towards the basket for an easy lay up." He added, "I'm looking for the things Coach McKinney wants executed on the floor.

The major difference Thomas has noticed so far between college and pro baskstball is the competitiveness. "We have so many guys that have similar abilities. They can all run, jump and shoot very well," he said. "In contrast to playing college ball, I think the progame is more physical.

While in college Thomas was coached by one of the top college coaches in the United States, Bobby Knight. Pacer coach McKinney is regarded by his peers as one of the top pro-coaches, and Thomas has also been impressed with him.
"I think Coach McKinney is a good teacher. He is very patient and he is a very organized coach," Thomas said.
