Observations -

Two-year J program

Last Saturday, the IU Board of Trustees met in Indianapolis. Among the issues voted upon was the system-wide School of Journalism. The Board of Trustees voted and approved a two-year journalism degree program to be established at IUPUI and the six regional campuses. After finishing the two-year program at the regional campuses, the students will then have to transfer to IU-Bloomington to complete their degrees.

To quote the Indiana Daily Student, "The system-wide school will be coordinated by a dean in Bloomington. Either one full-time or two halftime associate deans would aid the journalism school dean." Ralph Holsinger, a journalism professor and chairman of the committee which recommended the system-wide school, was indirectly quoted by the IDS as saying the control over journalism classes offered at IUPUI and the regional campuses was one of the reasons the plan was proposed .

A direct quote of Holsinger in the IDS said, "I think we have something pretty special here at Bloomington and we would just like to make sure that we have that something special at Indianapolis and the other campuses.

The system-wide plan will also establish a master's degree program at IUPUI that will allow professional journalists in Indianapolis to take advantage of the courses.

A two-year program at IUPUI will only hamper the efforts of IUPUI to establish a journalism major. The new program will possibly mean a loss of classes all ready in the curriculum. Not only that, but it will possibly mean a loss of faculty currently at IUPUI. The step toward a system-wide School of Journalism feels more like a step backwards for IUPUI.

The demand here is for a journalism major, not a two-year program. Several of the students here are forced to attend IUPUI because of convenience, work and family and are not able to transfer to IU-Bloomington to finish a degree. Realistically, there is no reason for them to have to go to Bloomington. The demand is here and the students are here. The only thing that isn't here is the journalism major—a full, four year. journalism major.

If the program is to be run from Bloomington, then why not use Bloomington faculty to teach the courses here? If the curriculum is going to be the same as Bloomington's, then why not put more than two years here? If the faculty and curriculum are from Bloomington, then why not put the major here? What it really gets down to, is the location of the program. Even though Bloomington will be running the show, designating the changes, hiring the faculty and controlling the curriculum, the journalism degree will still be granted only in Bloomington.

Should fourty miles make that much difference? Should IUPUI be granted only a twoyear program? Should the students wanting a journalism major at IUPUI stand for any of this? The answer to all of the questions is an emphatic.

There are channels the students and faculty can go through to protest the program. The first step is to talk to Dr. Richard Gray, the head of the journalism department at IU-Bloomington The second step is to talk to Vice President Kenneth Gros Louis, also of IU-Bloomington. The third step is to talk to Dr. Ryan, the president of the IU system. The fourth and final step is to talk to the Board of Trustees.

The two-year journalism program will probably be put into effect this fall. That gives students wanting a journalism major at IUPUI almost five months to make their desires known. If the students band together and make a positive stand for the journalism major, then possibly the necessary persons will be reached.

What's in a name?

To the editor:

What's in a name like Indiana University Purdue University at Indianapolis? Perhaps a more pertient question is "What's in an acronym like IUPUI?"

Some element of humor seems to exist in the grouping of the initials I-U-P-U-I. Some individuals insist on mispronouncing those initials to sound like "ooey pooey."

One suggestion for a new name is "State University at Indianapolis." This would call for an acronym of SUI. How long would it be before someone called it "sooey?" (If any pigs came running, you pronounced it right.)

Since acronyms seem to bring out the Don Rickles in people, perhaps an expert on linguistics should be consulted on all proposals for new names and their accompanying acronyms.

On the other hand, we could insist on a new name only when such a change would mean improvement in the school itself. We could spend less time worrying about acronyms and more about quality education.

So, here's a little less "fooey" and a lot more "dooey."

Parking

Car lots being moved by Dana Daugherty As part of a plan to beautify the campus, parking lots along

Michigan Street from West Street to the White River are being moved 40 feet from the curb, and those along New York Street from the bridge to Blake Street are being moved 60 feet back. Sidewalks are being moved six feet from the curb According to Robert Timenstein, director of Parking Services, the land strip between the lots and the streets will be landscaped with trees and shrubs. "Eventually the entire length of the campus will be outlined by a corridor of trees, said Tirmenstein.

Contractors will start work to plant trees in May the first of June. This means some parking spaces will be temporarily lost. Tirmenstein said this summer they plan to "increase lot capacity and recover those spaces lost in the beautification project." The wooden fence in front of the Engineering and Technology Building will also be removed. At the same time New York Street is being adjusted, the city will widen the street 10

"Driving will probably be limited to one and two lanes along New York Street," said Tirmenstein, "but this is no different than what happened a year ago with Michigan Street.'

The present, landscaping will be completed by this fall.

Trudy Bernath threw a two hitter in the Metros season opening 7-1 victory over Marian. Marty Kalb led the Metros hitters with three hits in as many plate appearances. Kalb also had three runs batted in and scored a run. Tina Masengale had three RBI's while Mary Taylor, Judy Cummings and Judy Pluckebaum each scored two runs.

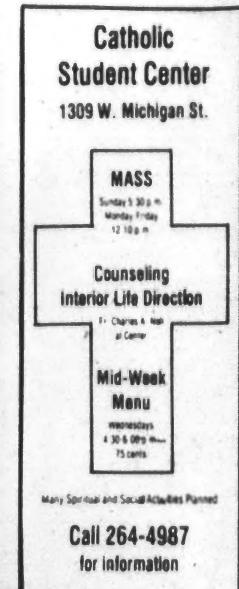

Shelly Joyce threw a no hitter in the Metros 7-0 second game win. IUPUI traveled to Terre Haute where they routed host St. Mary's 38-0 and 20-7. Vicki Ford threw the Metros second no hitter of the year in the first game of the double header. IUPUI scored eight runs in the first, 12 runs in the second, 14 in the third and four runs in the fourth inning as the game was halted after five innings.

Indiana Central put the Metros perfect record in jeopardy in the first game of the double header Thursday. The two teams went into extra innings with the score tied 1-1. ICU scored two runs in the top of the eighth to open up a 3-1 lead. IUPUI's first two hitters in the bottom of the eighth made outs to make things worse.

'Gamma' grabs audience

by Tim Barnett

You can't judge a book by its cover is a trite expression that can most effectively describe the University Theaters production of "The Effect Of Gamma Rays on Man-In-The-Moon Marigolds." The near sell-out audience was deeply touched at Saturday nights performance as the five female cast members portrayed each character with professional excellence.

The play, written by Paul Zindel, is the story of a mother, Susan Rosencrans portrays the teen-age daughter Tillie. Tillie pours her love on a pet rabbit that her mother eventually murders.

who have given outstanding

The awards to be given are: The Top Administrator Award, in which students nominate administrators who have demonstrated concern for the welfare of students; The Outstanding Educator Award, an award given that recognizes the qualities of an educator who creates a need for the student to participate in the educational process; The Lola L. her two daughters, and a boarder. The youngest daughter Tillie, played by Susan Rosecrans, is an introverted young lady still in high school and very interested in science. The eldest daughter Ruth, played by Mary White, is also in high school and has a history of mental problems. Beatrice the mother of the two daughters. is played to the hilt by Wanda Sewell. Beatrice displayed much depression, alcoholism, and frequent mood changes. Nanny, the boarder, was played by maria Russell. Her portrayal of the line-less part is very effective as she plays an elderly invalid.

Sewell's first entrance in the play seemed almost too powerful; however, much to the surprise of the audience, she developed the character even further. Her frequent mood changes made her a colorful character in the sense that it displayed her total acting ability. In this reporters opinion, the part was played to its highest possibilities.

White provides the audience with low key comic relief. Her portrayal of a young woman, up on the times, comes across very humorous, but she also displays much dramatic ability in Act I Scene IV. Here, she and her mother share memories of the past after she (Ruth) has a nightmare. In this scene she comes on strong with her past mental problems which shows her expertise on the stage.

Excellent, touching, and firstclass are adjectives that can best describe Rosecrans portrayal of Tillie, the youngest daughter. Although she has very few lines, she is on the stage throughout the entire play with the exception of a few scenes. Her stage presence is excellent along with her characterization. Again her character became stronger as the play progressed.

The technical aspect of the show cannot pass without mention. The set is superior to any sets this reporter has seen in quite awhile. The special effects, tape recording at the beginning and end of each scene, is very appropriate. James Walker, technical director, deserves applauses for his excellent work.

"The Effect of Gamma Rays
On Man-In-The-Moon
Marigolds," directed by Dr.
Dorothy Webb, will run this Friday through Sunday. The show goes up at 8 pm Friday and Saturday and at 2:30 pm
Sunday.

Ruth is played by Mary K. White. On the right is Wanda Sewell, portraying the mother.

Intense play at IUPUI

A short, intense play, "The Effects of Gamma Rays on Man-In-The-Moon Marigolds," will be performed April 10-12 by the University Theater at IUPUI.

The Paul Zindel, Obie Awardwinning drama about 20th Century living, is directed by Dorothy Webb, professor of speech-theater-communications in the IU School of Liberal Arts.

The all-female cast from Indianapolis includes Wanda Sewell as Beatrice—a bitter, dissatisfied but occasionally loving middle-aged mother. Susan Rosencrans plays her sweet, bright teen-age daughter, Tillie. Mary K. White portrays the other teen-age daughter, Ruth, who has suffered a nervous breakdown.

Also in the play is Maria Russell, 21, who plays the role of Nanny, a 90-year-old woman. Nancy Peterson portrays a teen-age classmate. Michelle Shady, an IUPUI student from Cicero, is assistant director.

The play will be performed in the Marott Building, 902 North Meridian Street. Curtain time is 8 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, 2:30 p.m. on Sunday. Tickets are $3 for adulta, $2 for students and are available at the IUPUI theatre box office in the Marott Building. For more information call 264-2094.

21 to 91 in an hour

Aging from 21 years old to 91 should take about 70 years, but 1UPUI professor J. Edgar Webb used paint, powder and brushes and in less than an hour turned this attractive IUPUI student, Maria Russell, into a sick, old woman.

"Stage make-up is the same as painting a portrait," says Webb, "Except that it's three dimensional." The process is neither gentle nor kind to an actress' face. The young woman must wince, frown, laugh, grimace, so that Webb can find on her nearly flawless face where her aging lines will someday be. The make-up is thick and must be rubbed in and then pushed on brushed to blend into a believable mask.

Great clouds of dust go up when Webb dusts ample amounts of loose white powder on the near-final "canvas." The dust whitens the skin, sets the paint and gives a dry, parched look to the girl's young skin. Finally, a special sponge dabbed into dark brown paint is dappled over the face, and large pores seem to appear.

This same make-up will be used on Maria Russell when she appears as a very old woman in Paul Zindel's dramatic play, "The Effects of Gamma Rays on Man-In-The-Moon Marigolds," to be performed April 10-12 by the University Theater of IUPUI. Dr. Webb's wife, Dr. Dorothy Webb, also a professor in drama at IUPUI, is directing the play.

to bring Cummings up with two outs and the Metros down 3-2. Cummings responded with a triple deep into the left field corner to send the game into another extra inning.

Bernath opened the bottom of the ninth with a single and ended up scoring the winning run on a single by Kathy Presnal. Bernath was the winning pitcher for the Metros by throwing the full nine innings.

IUPUI's second game win was a great deal easier as the Metros scored six runs in the second inning and went on to win 10-4. IUPUI had just two hits but 17 walks proved the difference as Joyce won her second game of the season.

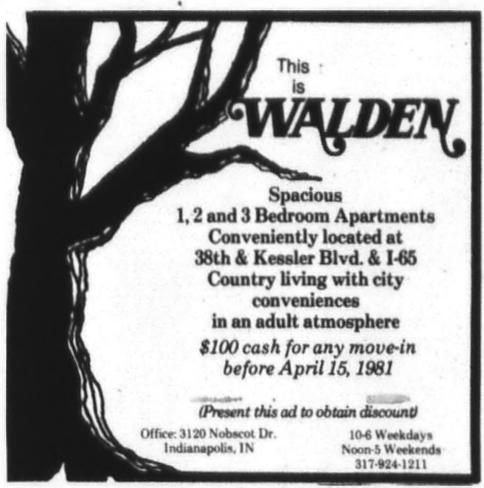

Cummings is the Metros leading hitter through six games with a .647 batting average. Kalb is close behind with a .636 average while Bernath is currently hitting .500. As a team the Metros are hitting .319 and have scored 86 runs in six games.

Cummings is also the Metros leader in RBI's with 10.
Masengale has eight RBI's and

Kalb has seven RBI's.

Monday the Metros faced Butler and split the double header and the Metros will host Taylor today at 3:00 at located at 2005 North Sherman. Friday the Metro's will travel to Evansville to play ISU—Evansville and Saturday afternoon IUPUI will visit the University of Evansville.

Metros

The young IUPUI Baseball team has had a rocky start this spring. On their spring break trip to Florida, the Baseball Metros posted a 1-6 ledger overall. However, because five of their opponents were Junior Colleges, their official record was 1-1. Against 4-year colleges, the team squeezed past Edward Waters College (Jacksonville FL) 6-5, and lost to Ashland 8-0.

"The trip was cut short when Coach Bob Bunnell came down with a kidney infection. Seeking medical attention, he was directed to the only doctor on call at a small-town hospital." "Honest," laughs the now-recovered Bunnell, "his name was Jose Jimenez."

Returning home, the Metros were pounded 12-1 and 11-2 in a doubleheader with strong Butler, then were blown out by Marian College, 17-5.

"Our pitching has been the primary problem," Bunnell says of his 1-4 ballclub. The metros have three freshman hurlers in their starting rotation, all of whom have some adjustment to make in switching from high school to college ball.
"They're not used to pitching to nine good hitters in a row," cites the coach. "They're losing concentration in the middle of the batting order."

"Although he terms the infield defense as 'excellent' and the overall defense 'not that bad,' he points out that the outfield has had difficulty. "Our outfield play has not been very good. There's a lack of communication. Nobody is taking charge out there."

Coach Bunnell is also concerned with the team's hitting. Sean Corrigan, hitting .375, and Dave Decker, hitting .364, have been batting exceptionally well. But the team needs more power from Steve Dixon, Terry Dorris, Cliff Kelly, and Ralph Skaggs. "The teams collective batting average is about .190, and we've been leaving a lot of men on base," notes the coach.
