CLAY COURT CHAMPIONSHIPS COMING

Two of America's teen tennis sensations -- Andrea Jaeger and Kathy Rinaldi -- will be competing in the 72nd Annual U.S. Open Clay Court Championships, according to Tournament Director, Stan Malless.

Miss Jaeger, a 16-year-old from Lincolnshire, Ill., was runnerup here last year and is currently ranked among the top five women in the world. The 14-year-old Miss Rinaldi, from Jensen Beach, Fla., made history recently when she became the youngest player ever to win a match at Wimbledon.

The tournament, which will begin August 3, is held at the Indianapolis Sports Center and annually attracts world class tennis players. Last year's singles champions were recent Wimbledon titlist Chris Evert Lloyd, who has won in Indianapolis six times, and Argentina's Jose-Luis Clerc. Clerc's victory broke a seven-year string of titles by Jimmy Connors and Manuel Orantes of Spain.

Tickets are on sale from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Sports Center, 725 West New York Street. Qualifying matches are scheduled to begin on Friday, July 31, and the tournament will culminate with the finals slated for Sunday, Aug. 9. For further information call 637-4788.

SERIALS ALERTING SERVICES

The School of Medicine Library offers alerting services to the medical faculty members, staff and students to make them aware of the latest articles in journals in their fields. Four different services are available to help them keep abreast of developments in their special areas of interest, two computerized and two manual, each for a moderate fee.

The computer-produced bibliographies are a monthly updating by author or by subject. For information on them contact Ann Van Camp, search analyst, Ext. 2272. The two manual alerting services cover tables of contents of serials and subjects as listed in INDEX MEDICUS. In the former one automatically receives a copy of the table of contents of selected serials as each new issue is received in the library. In the latter one receives a copy of selected subjects with the citations as they appear in the monthly issue of INDEX MEDICUS. Those interested in subscribing to either or both should contact Nina S. Campbell, associate director, Ext. 7182.
