DEAN LAWRENCE TO RETURN TO FULL-TIME TEACHING

Dr. Richard G. Lawrence, who in his nine years as dean of the Indiana University School of Social Service has seen its expansion to a school of national stature, has asked to return to full-time teaching and research by the end of next year.

During his deanship, the school's programs have grown to include I.U. campuses throughout the state and the offering of both graduate and undergraduate degrees.

"I seek a change from administrative duties," he said. "With the support of an excellent faculty and administrators of the university, the school has advanced in many ways. After contributing what I could to organizational progress, I feel that new leadership will benefit the school."

Dr. Glenn W. Irwin, Jr., I.U. vice-president-Indianapolis, said: "Under Dean Lawrence's leadership, the School of Social Service has moved ahead impressively, attaining national stature. He has combined professional excellence and service to a remarkable degree. We are gratified that he plans to remain as a member of the faculty."

Since Dean Lawrence assumed his post in July, 1967, the school has added bachelor of social work and associate of science in human services degrees to its master of social work program. Classroom and field instruction has been expanded to communities throughout the state. The school also has assumed responsibility for social service programs throughout the eight campus I.U. system.

FRIENDLY GREEN SHEET'S FRIENDLY AD SERVICE

Yes, folks, there is an actual -- albeit informal -- policy which governs the goodies that appear as ads in your Green Sheet. When space permits, ads are run as a free service to IUPUI staff, faculty, and personnel. As for real estate ads, we are delighted to have them, but they must be for sale or rent by the owner. We do not serve as an outlet for real estate companies' ads. Sometimes we have more ads than space, and the inclusion or exclusion of some ads, we admit, can be arbitrary, but the decision is generally based on the editor's assumption of the urgency of the ads. We try to run ads as soon as possible but, as a general rule, if your ad does not appear for two weeks and you're still trying to sell-rent-swap-or-whatever, please resubmit the information. The deadline is 5 p.m. the Wednesday before the publication date. Please note that ads are accepted only via mail and not over the telephone. Send to the News Bureau, Administration Building, Room 139.
