DR. SMURL TO HEAD NEW RELIGIOUS STUDIES PROGRAM

A leading scholar and teacher has been selected to develop new courses in religious studies at IUPUI. Dr. Joseph T. Taylor, dean of the School of Arts and Sciences, has announced the appointment of Dr. James F. Smurl as associate professor and chairman of the Program of Religious Studies.

The new IUPUI program has been made possible with a grant from the Eli Lilly Foundation.

Dr. Smurl, author of Religious Ethics, published by Prentice-Hall last year, has been chairman of the faculty of humanities in the School of Humanistic Studies at Oklahoma State University at Stillwater since 1968.

He was selected as one of the "outstanding educators of America" in 1971 and 1973 and honored for outstanding teaching at Oklahoma State University in 1970-71.

Dr. Smurl received a B.A. in philosophy from St. Mary's University, Baltimore. He studied advanced theology at the Gregorian University at Rome, Italy, where he received the S.T.B. and S.T.L. degrees. He earned his Ph.D. at Catholic University of America at Washington, D.C.

Dean Taylor said that he is extremely pleased with Dr. Smurl's appointment to the IUPUI faculty. "He is a truly outstanding scholar whose presence on the campus will deeply enrich our humanities program," Dean Taylor said.

Dr. Smurl is a member of the Oklahoma State Task Force for Public Programs in the Humanities and has been involved in programs of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Announcement of plans and faculty for the Religious Studies Program will be made after Dr. Smurl arrives in Indianapolis in August.

PROGRESS REPORT -- SALARYWISE

Bachelors' degrees from IUPUI were worth as much as $975 a month in starting salaries for the Class of 1973, according to a report from the IUPUI Placement Service.

Placement Director R. Ray Hawkins said the top starting salary, $975 a month, went to a graduate of the IUPUI construction technology program. This program trains students for on-the-site supervision of construction projects. They are able to estimate costs, negotiate bids, contracts, and labor relations, and supervise sub-contractors.

Hawkins reported that business, engineering, and accounting graduates were having little or no difficulty finding jobs. "The demand for engineering graduates in central Indiana is high and the national publicity about not enough jobs for engineering graduates is not true around here. Anyone who completes our bachelor of science degree in interdisciplinary engineering should find opportunities for a good job and starting salary," he said.

Engineering graduates received salaries as high as $955 a month with the average starting salary being $870 a month.

Business and accounting graduates also did well. The top accounting salary was $967 a month, the low was $850 a month, and the average $907 a month. For the business majors in finance, management and administration, and marketing the salary range went from a low of $650 a month in marketing to a high of $925 a month in finance. The average salary for business graduates with these majors was about $780 a month.

Other new alumni doing well are the technology graduates. The computer technology graduates were averaging $740 a month.

The electrical technology graduates ranged from a low of $825 a month to a high of $905 a month with the average at $858 a month. The mechanical technology graduates had a high of $900 a month, a low of $750 a month and an average of $850 a month.

The demand for the graduates in the technology area has risen sharply after being off for the past several years.

The liberal arts graduate did not do so well as the specialized graduate. The average starting salary for all the liberal arts graduates who have taken jobs so far is $653 a month with the high being $900 and the low $500. The market has been stronger this year for the liberal arts graduate than in past years.
