

Feb. 20, 2014

INScope

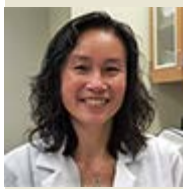

Weekly news for faculty, staff and students from the Indiana University School of Medicine

top headlines

Industry collaboration

A new project will boost IUSM collaborations with industry to leverage research into new products and therapies.

Game changer

Researchers at the IU School of Medicine have discovered a highly accurate, noninvasive test to identify benign pancreatic cysts.

IUSM-Muncie

Four years of medical education will reach all nine IUSM medical education centers in June as clerkship rotations begin in Muncie.

editor's picks

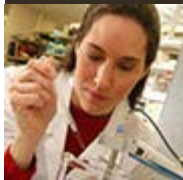

News to Use

Name change

Effective Feb. 24, IUSM Presentation Technology Services will become Multimedia Technology Services.

Grants

Grants and awards

IUSM researchers earned more than $1.8 million in grants and awards, excluding commercial projects, in January.

Opportunities

Nominations sought

features of the week

story

Leading the way

This Black History Month, InScope carries a Northwest Times of Indiana story on Deborah L. McCullough, M.D., the first African-American woman to graduate from the IU School of Medicine. An OB-GYN in private practice near Gary, Ind., Dr. McCullough was recently honored as a nominee for the Gary Frontiers Service Club Drum Major Award.

podcast

The deadlines to nominate individuals for IUSM Alumni Association awards and Trustee Teaching Awards are Feb. 21 and 26.

Kudos

Honors

Bernadette Rodak is among several faculty members recently honored at the IU School of Medicine.

"Sound Medicine"

This week, "Sound Medicine" explores issues related to tobacco use in America 50 years after a landmark surgeon general's report declared that smoking causes lung cancer. Topics include a history of the report's impact, current efforts to reduce tobacco use and the surprising statistic that 7 percent of nurses and 2 percent of doctors still smoke.

faculty & staff spotlight

Doctor turned novelist

Already well known in the field of cardiology, Douglas Zipes is pursuing a second passion as the writer of medical thrillers.

events & lectures

Center for AIDS Research grant planning meeting

02-24-2014

Are contact sports bad for the brain?

02-27-2014

Alpha Omega Alpha lecture and banquet

03-07-2014

Children's Health Services Research Symposium

03-10-2014

IU School of Medicine Calendar

student spotlight

Finding her voice

Singer and medical student Maria Solis has used her voice to comfort nursing home residents and to help fund her education.

IUSM campus links

Bloomington • Evansville • Fort Wayne • Indianapolis
Lafayette • Muncie • Gary • South Bend • Terre Haute

Submit your news

Subscribe or unsubscribe to this newsletter.

IU Communications | 251 N. Illinois St. | Indianapolis, IN 46204