

March 20, 2014

INScope

Weekly news for faculty, staff and students from the Indiana University School of Medicine

top headlines

Faculty education

Kathleen "Kiki" Boyd will lead efforts to prepare faculty to teach curriculum supported by IUSM's $1 million AMA grant.

DNA screening

An IU and Regenstrief study in the NEJM says a DNA test could deliver a new non-invasive colorectal cancer screening.

Basic science

The Indiana CTSI has awarded grants to 17 scientists across the state in support of basic science research projects.

editor's picks

News to Use

Addressing wage gap

The IU National Center of Excellence in Women's Health will host a networking event to address the gender gap in physician wages.

Grants

Summer scholars

The IU Simon Cancer Center seeks applications from third- and fourth-year medical students for summer research scholarships.

Opportunities

Faculty promotion

features of the week

story

Climbing for a cause

IU and Moi University physicians recently scaled the second highest peak in Africa in support of the Academic Model Providing Access to Healthcare. The climbers raised funds for a new facility in Eldoret, Kenya, that will be the first in the region to focus on chronic conditions such as cancer, diabetes, cardiovascular disease and mental illness.

podcast

The deadline to submit IUSM faculty promotion materials for next year is July 3.

Kudos

Scientific advisors

Two IUSM faculty members have been named associate scientific advisors to the journal Science Translational Medicine

faculty & staff spotlight

New contributor

IU health policy expert Aaron Carroll will be a regular contributor to The Upshot, a new online venture from The New York Times.

student spotlight

Standing firm

Former Marine Christopher Sinsabaugh is an organizer of a new IUSM student-led symposium on the issue of physician burnout.

IUSM campus links

Bloomington • Evansville • Fort Wayne • Indianapolis
Lafayette • Muncie • Gary • South Bend • Terre Haute

Submit your news

'Sound Medicine'

This week, "Sound Medicine" focuses on the connection between sleep and health, with interviews about how sleep disorders can cause obesity, high blood pressure and mood disorders, and how some dentists are helping treat sleep apnea.

events & lectures

2014 Match Day

03-21-2014

IUSM Campus Blood Drive

03-24-2014

Glick Eye Institute Basic and Translational Science Seminar

03-27-2014

Sixth Annual Hunger Banquet

03-28-2014

IUPUI Research Day

04-11-2014

IU School of Medicine Calendar

Subscribe or unsubscribe to this newsletter.

IU Communications | 251 N. Illinois St. | Indianapolis, IN 46204