Visitors from IU recapture Big Ten swimming title

by Chris Albright

After two years without the Big Ten Swimming and Diving crown, the Indiana University Hoosiers regained the title this weekend at the IUPUI School of Physical Education-Natorium building.

Coach James "Doc"

Counsillman, who had a twenty year string of Big Ten victories running from 1961 until Iowa took the crown in 1981, said, "I'm real pleased. This is like winning the first one all over again."

He said that he missed being thrown in the pool, a tradition that was upheld after they won on Saturday night. (After the coach went in the water the team followed, splashing and throwing each other in the pool. When they tired of that, team members went after the diving coach, the student helpers and many other innocent bystanders.) "I've been looking forward to this for two years," the coach said.

IU captured championships in five events. Their strength, however, was due to their competitiveness in almost all the events. Only in one event, the 200-yard backstroke, did they fail to place someone in the top eight. In the eighteen event meet the only race in which they failed to place more than one swimmer was won by a Hoosier, John Waldman.

Waldman, a sophomore from New Jersey, captured titles in the 110 and 200-yard breaststroke. He broke the meet record of 56.6 in the 100, and the pool record of 58.18 in the same event. "It's nice to win," he said, "this whole meet was for the team, and I'm really happy that I could win for it."

The Hoosiers also had a double winner in the 500 and 1650-yard freestyle, freshman Rojer Madruga of Brazil. "This is a big competition; you never know what's going to happen. I was very happy to win two events and help Doc and the team toward the championship," Rojer said.

the 200-yard free. "I was really tired on the last lap, and Graeme was catching me," he said. Although his legs were tired, he tried to bring it home. Carroll's final time was 1:37.14, and McGuffie's was 1:37.26.

IU qualified 13 swimmers for the NCAA competition at the Natatorium on March 24-26, 1983. Purdue University qualified one, sophomore Alan Bassett in the 100-yard backstroke. He finished second in that event behind Charles Kaiser, a senior from Ohio State. Bassett, of Fort Wayne, was the highest placing Boilermaker.

Counsillman said that despite strong showings by many of the meet's swimmers, "the Big Ten is not ready to vie for any national championship."

The big job for the veteran coach is recruiting. He said that he is looking at home state swimmers. "We're looking at the state champions. If we recruit the Indiana kids this year, we'll be this good next year," Counsillman said.

NEWSBRIEFS

The IUPUI Debate Teams won first and second places at Ball State University in the novice division and placed second in the junior varsity events. With five trophies and seven top-speaking awards, the debaters won twelve of sixteen debates for their day's effort. Teams competing were from Indiana University, DePauw, Northern Kentucky, Ohio Northern, Anderson and Ball State.

The Indiana State Higher Education Association met Sunday at IU-Kokomo to elect interim officers and plan activities. ISHEA representatives, who come from many of the private and public colleges in the state, will continue their efforts to serve as an information source on issues relating to higher education by compiling voting records of elected officials and a calendar of events of interest to student advocates. Holding office until May 1983, the leaders of this group include: Keith Howard, DePauw chairman; Mike Hawkins, Manchester College, vice chairman; J. R. Cumberland, IU-Bloomington, press secretary; Kevin Ault, Butler University, secretary; and Karen McCloskey, University of Notre Dame, treasurer.

The School of Nursing will hold its fifth Primary Health Care Conference on March 11, offering lectures by health professionals who have worked extensively in other countries using primary health care. The program will also feature panel discussions by groups of political scientists, theologians, environmental affairs experts and health care professionals. Films on primary health care in Mexico and India will be shown at noon in Rooms 242 and 245 and again at 3:45 p.m. in Rooms 110 and 112.

A recent Department of Political Science survey, conducted by department head Richard A. Fredland, indicates that about $67 million is spent in Indiana every year by foreign students. Indiana's "hidden export" went to about 7,500 students of foreign citizenship who were enrolled in schools throughout the state in 1982. These students return to their home countries well-educated and Fredland suggests, that the Indiana and U.S. economies will benefit because the American-trained are more likely to buy from this country with which they are familiar.

The gymnasium of the School of PE will be the site for the 1983 Central Indiana Regional Science and Engineering Fair March 15-17 for exhibitors in grades 4-12. IUPUI, Butler, Indiana Central and Marion College alternate hosting of the event with the host institution usually offering a scholarship as one of the prizes.

Iranian regime's days numbered, students assert

To the editor:

This is a response to the Feb. 16 letter that appeared in this column concerning the anniversary of the Islamic Republic of Iran. We believe that the views expressed in that letter do not in any way represent the views of the majority of the Iranian students at IUPUI. Furthermore such letters are written by government officials and passed on to a small number of students who then publish them as their own.

In February 1979 the Iranian people finally succeeded in overthrowing the despotic Pahlavi dynasty with the hopes of establishing a democratic government. Khomeini and a group of his supporters succeeded in filling the political vacuum that followed the fall of the Pahlavi regime. Lacking a history of a democratic political system, Iranians trusted their religious leader (Khomeini), who at the time, seemed to espouse the creation of a free society as they did.

Soon after, many people came to the grim realization that another dictatorial regime was ruling the country. Four years after the glorious revolution that toppled the Shah, those who replaced him left a legacy of murder, torture and denial of basic human rights which will not be forgotten for years to come.

The opposition of the majority of the Iranian people to the blood thirsty is evident in the number of political prisoners (estimated at 60,000), executions of their opponents (Amnesty International estimates that to be 12,000) and the exodus of thousands of Iranians from the country.

Since their rise to power by force and deceit, they have murdered many of the most promising segment of the educated Iranians opposed to their rule and sent the rest hiding for fear of their lives. They have closed the institutions of higher education and have sent large numbers of teenagers to die in the mine fields in the war with Iraq. They have sent executioners overseas where they attempt to murder Iranian students opposed to the regime (as an example two Iranian students were killed in the Philippines and India last year).

However, the days of this regime are numbered, simply because they have lost their support in Iran. The rest of us in the U.S. and elsewhere in the world know this very well and are counting the days to the fall of the dictatorship in Iran.

Plaudits for professor

4AM.

Maintenance employees picking up litter often are visible on the IUPUI campus but the university seems reluctant to allow any of its people to amass great fortunes by recycling aluminum cans. The staff has been told not to gather the cans on the grounds. While employees still may collect aluminum stashes from inside the buildings, out-and-about gathering is out.

While we're on the subject, the grounds crew's job of cleaning the campus seems to be of gargantuan proportions. A nice day draws hordes of students to the Library Mall but the morning-after accumulation of litter left by the sun-worshippers rivals that of any outdoor rock festival.

On being black

Pulitzer winner to read works at IUPUI

Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Gwendolyn Brooks, whose poetry has remained socially significant through several generations, will present a free public reading and commentary on her works March 10, at 8 p.m. in Room 101 of the Lecture Hall on the campus of IUPUI.

Described by one critic as a poet who wrote about being black before black was beautiful, Ms. Brooks began writing at the age of seven, after being encouraged by her mother. Brooks' mother wrote her own autobiography at the age of 82. Brooks is poet laureate of Illinois, succeeding Carl Sandburg.

Visiting about 50 college campuses a year, Brooks nearly always allows time during her visits for discussion or workshops with university students and local poets.

Among her famous works are "Annie Allen" (1950) for which she won the Pulitzer Prize, "In the Mecca" (1968), "Riot" (1969), "Beckoning" (1975), "Maud Martha" (1953) and "Desembar" (1981); a passionate record of her interactions with the struggles for black solidarity and redemption. Her works in progress include "Sequel to Maud Martha" and "Report from Part Two," a continuation of her autobiography that was first published in 1972.

When recently asked what is in black poetry for white people, she said that it is a matter of looking into the motivations and feelings of a race of people with whom whites do inhabit the world. Whether one meets blacks in an executive boardroom or come across them in a dark alley, "it behooves you to know what is going on in their lives," she said.

The recipient of more than 40 honorary doctorate degrees, she is currently a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters. She received the Shelly Memorial Award by the Poetry Society of America, the Society of Midland Authors Award and the KUUMBA Liberation Award.

Her appearance at IUPUI is co-sponsored by the IUPUI Distinguished Lecture Series and the Black Student Union.

Out of the darkroom

For the third time this year students at the Herron School of Art have put together an independent public exhibition of student work.

This latest exhibit features black and white photographs taken by students enrolled in second through fourth year photography. Following the lead of student-organized painting and printmaking exhibitions, the show provides a forum for the work being produced in the studios and darkrooms at Herron. Most of the work would otherwise never be seen by other students or the general public.

The show was organized by Jon Tower, Steve Neale, and Tessa Ostermeyer. As Jon explained, "When the show was first conceived, there was some doubt as to how practical or successful it might be. None of us had ever put together a show before and, quite honestly, the initial response of fellow students was mixed."

Undaunted, the exhibit committee, assisted by photography instructors and Janica Yoder and Tom Whitworth, solicited work, distributed invitations, and worked out the logistics for displaying the photographs in the lobby of the photo lab at 18th and Illinois. At the request of the committee, professors Steve Mannheim and Robert Eageron selected the photos for display. Only 39 spaces were available for the 140 works submitted for consideration.

A very general theme of "people" gives the show some common direction while allowing a wide variety of genre to be represented. As with any art exhibition, viewers will love some images and tolerate others. Some of the most successful artistic images are Tony Popceff's "Country Girl," works by John Wyatt, and the manipulated images by Jeff Reed. In Reed's "Rhino Shadows," the viewer first perceives a group of shoppers passing to and fro in front of a downtown department store entrance. On second glance, the viewer notices that the shadows cast by the "consumers" are not quite right. They do, in fact, fall in the shape of rhinoceroses.

Some photographs in the exhibit were made to document a specific person or event. One of the finer pieces of conceptual documentation is the work by Tessa Ostermeyer, a sophomore in the visual communication program at Herron. The work is captioned, "Darts were thrown randomly at a map of the U.S. The darts were then mailed to the points (indicated on the map). The postmasters of those cities were asked to return the darts... they did."

The photograph depicts an individual in the act of throwing the darts mentioned above.

Of course, viewers will find some images that simply don't work. This is to be expected in an exhibit of this type. Certain instructors who blindly defend each image as a successful artistic or intellectual expression miss the point. As Jon Tower explained, "Providing a space for students to be exposed to one another's work, and drawing some attention to the photography department were our primary goals. The fact that the photos were gathered, selected, and hung makes the show a success as far as the committee is concerned."

The show will be on display until March 11 in the photo lab at 18th and Illinois. On the evening of March 11, an opening reception will be held for the annual Herron Student Show in the Herron Gallery, 16th and Pennsylvania. The public is invited.

Garland succumbs to illness

Mel Garland

by Matt Shrum

IUPUI men's basketball coach and athletic director Mel Garland lost his 14-month fight with leukemia Saturday.

Coach Garland was born June 23, 1942 and was an Indiana All Star out of Tech High School. He played basketball and baseball for Purdue University where he graduated in 1964.

In 1964 he began teaching and coaching at Greenfield Central High School. In 1967 Coach Garland joined the staff of Indiana State University as a physical education instructor and assistant basketball coach. In 1976 he became basketball coach at Evansville Harrison High School.

In 1979 Coach Garland came to IUPUI to try and turn around a losing program. In his first season the Metros finished 10-21 but in his second season at the Metro helm IUPUI had its first winning record in men's basketball at 14-12.

In December of 1981 while the Metros were on a road trip in New Orleans Coach Garland first noted symptoms. He was forced to step down as basketball coach to begin treatments but remained athletic director.

Coach Garland remained in close contact with his team as the Metros advanced to the NAIA District 21 play-offs for the first time in the school's history.

This year Coach Garland was again kept from the bench due to his illness but he was able to go to many games and observe as the team that he recruited managed the schools' second winning season and second play-off appearance. Coach Garland was in the hospital last week when the Metros won their opening round game against Huntington Tuesday and then fell to top seeded Grace, Thursday.

Coach Garland came to IUPUI to bring respectability to the men's basketball team but he played an important role in making IUPUI's athletic program among the best of Indiana NAIA schools. Coach Garland refused to use excuses whether dealing in IUPUI athletics or with his illness.

Possibly the greatest tribute to Coach Garland's work at IUPUI is that all three Metro athletic teams have advanced to district play-offs, women's basketball and volleyball and men's basketball, and IUPUI's baseball and softball teams are expecting banner seasons. That is proof of Coach Garland's insistence on results, not excuses.

Melvyn (Mel) Garland, 40, died at 12:45 p.m. Saturday, March 8 in IU Hospital. Survivors include his wife, Betty; two daughters, Lisa (age 18) and Erin (age 13); and a brother, Myron.

In lieu of flowers, the family has asked that memorial contributions be made to the Indiana University Foundation, 356 North Lansing Street, Indianapolis, IN 46203, for the Mel Garland Memorial Fund to benefit IUPUI athletes and physical education students, or to the Leukemia Society of America.

West Street to close south of campus

by Mark Goff

After Tuesday morning motorists who travel to the IUPUI campus by driving north on West Street from area south of the city will detour their route.

The Department of Transportation has begun a $20 million road reconstruction program which will close West Street between Washington and South Streets, until August of 1984.

The 19,000 motorists who gain access to downtown via this portion of West Street are asked to use South Street (west-east bound), Illinois Street (one-way north) and Washington Street.

Those students who approach the campus by way of Kentucky Avenue should turn north on White River Parkway, according to a DOT detour specialist.

From I-70, westbound drivers are urged to use the McCarthy Street exit, and eastbound motorists should use the Illinois Street exit ramp.

The reconstruction project is designed to improve access to the Hoosier Dome and the Convention Center expansion, as well as the renovated Union Station Project. Construction will eventually connect West Street to I-465 and I-70 by way of an interstate exit-entrance ramp.

Financial backing of the project is coming from the funds originally set aside for the construction of the canceled I-166 which was supposed to link Castleton with downtown. Construction will in no way hinder the development of the White River Park which borders the northwest portion of the project.

Student government ele

Tamara Calhoun

I have been involved with student government for two years as the Divisional Senator for SPEA and the President Pro Tem of the Senate. I understand the Assembly's potential for activities and service, but few things will be accomplished if the senators are not organized into a cohesive unit, with good communication and planning. Thus, my primary goal is efficiency in student government. As vice president, I will be in charge of an almost totally new Assembly because few of this year's senators are running for re-election. I want to insure an orderly transition, so that the programs and progress made this year will not be lost in the shuffle of a new administration.

Tamara Calhoun

Jim Malles

Bill Bankston

IUPUI is an institution experiencing rapid growth.

What affect this growth will have on our campus will be largely determined by us, as students. What service, programs and activities this campus will offer depends on the interest and support the students display. As a result, the Committee for Campus Wide Consensus (CCWC) has been developed to seek out the pertinent issues and provide an effective framework of communication through student government.

The CCWC, "QUICK" if you will, advocates the following three plank platform.

Plank I. Development of a long-term growth policy including development of facilities students consider most desirable and deciding as to what kinds of services, programs and activities are to be encouraged and at what level should they exist.

Plank II. Increased emphasis on student organizations.

Plank III. Task Force approach to important issues. CCWC believes there is a significant lack of communication between students, student government and the administration. With a task force approach, information concerning certain issues and recommendations in regard to these issues can be more effectively communicated to those affected. Issues which will be addressed include: student activity fee; administration of athletic facilities; campus services such as food service, vending, shuttle services; and availability of class evaluations.

Essentially, the platform of CCWC stands for increased communication and cooperation on campus. Through teamwork and involvement, the following slate hopes to provide an effective apparatus for communication of student interests through student government.

The candidates are Bill Bankston, president; Jim Malles, vice president; and Theresa Parli, Jassjit Singh, John Hider and Gary Strodman for senators at large.

ction campaigns begin

Vasilis Kouloulas

It goes without saying, how many different ways the students of IUPUI would benefit by having a campus radio station. The problems caused by lack of communication concerning IUPUI's class cancellations during last year's blizzard prove that a radio station would be a very useful information tool for the students.

Because of their complexity, there are many problems which even a student body president is not capable of handling. For this reason, a student trustee representing IUPUI directly on the Board of Trustees would be essential in initiating new programs and implementing change in the university.

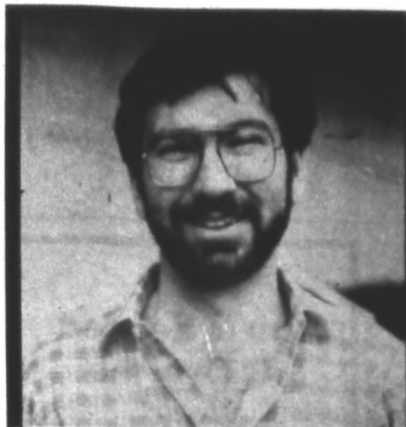

IUPUI student organizations are in need of a facility in which they can better plan activities and programs which are fundamental on any campus. The creation of a student center will provide campus organizations with the means to function effectively and provide a sense of community which is absent. I am very familiar with problems created by the lack of such a central facility being Chairman of the Student Organization Board and President of the Hellenic Student Union.

Another program that is essential to high quality education is a faculty evaluation system. The students should have a hand in keeping good, effective faculty at IUPUI and voicing discontent with poor instructors through this evaluation process.

These are the major issues which concern me and which I plan to work on in the upcoming year.

Keith Owens

My past involvement with the Student Assembly here at IUPUI has made me aware that one of the most important functions of the Student Body President is to be the liaison between the students of IUPUI and the student government. In order to do this, there has to be a continuous outreach program from the Student Assembly to the students. The SA here at IUPUI has not lived up to its potential because there hasn't been the necessary level of communication between the SA, the students, and the administration. My belief is that I could change that policy with your support. Many of the problems we students share here at IUPUI would simultaneously be solved if you would help me consolidate the students into a cohesive, interdependent student body. I hope you'll support me for Student Body President, and I hope you'll bring your problems to the Student Assembly and be willing to help us find solutions to all of our problems.

George T. Graves, Jr.

I'd like to thank all of you who supported me in my bid for the 1982-83 vice-presidential spot for the student government elections. Needless to say, I won, thanks to you, and I believe that my term was and is a significant one. As vice president I have taken the opportunity to learn and to grow in my responsibilities as a student government leader. I believe that the learning and growing that took place qualifies me to be a viable candidate for the 1983 election for president. With your support, it can be done. George T. Graves, Jr.

Former CIA director to speak here

William Colby, the former director of the United States Central Intelligence Agency, will speak at IUPUI Sunday, March 20, at 3:30 p.m. in Lecture Hall Room 101. Colby will discuss "Why we need a nuclear freeze" in his free talk which is open to the public.

Colby, who headed the CIA during parts of the Nixon and Ford national administrations, presently works as a government consultant and attorney in Washington D.C. In the past year Colby has become an influential supporter of the demand for a bilateral nuclear freeze.

As formulated initially by a number of nationwide peace organizations, the nuclear freeze calls for both the United States and the Soviet Union to "adopt a mutual freeze on the testing, production, and development of nuclear weapons" as an "essential, verifiable first step toward lessening the risk of nuclear war and reducing the nuclear arsenal."

Popular sentiment in favor of the nuclear freeze has increased in response to the Reagan Administration's nuclear build-up, which includes production and funding of the so-called

"new generation of nuclear weapons." These weapons, which many in the American peace movement regard as first-strike devices, include the much-debated MX missile, the Trident submarine, the Pershing II and cruise missiles, and a number of delivery systems.

Colby is only one of a number of prominent former high-ranking federal officials who have spoken in favor of a nuclear moratorium. Last year, for example, retired Admiral Hyman Rickover — the "father" of America's nuclear submarine fleet — expressed regret over his prior involvement in building a nuclear navy and called for immediate negotiations with the Soviets to achieve a halt to the production of all nuclear weapons.

Former ambassador to the Soviet Union George Kennan has endorsed the freeze and called for an immediate 50 percent reduction in the arsenal of both superpowers. Kennan is the author of the "Mr. X" document which, immediately following World War II, helped define much of American foreign policy for the subsequent three decades.

A groundswell of popular support for a nuclear moratorium and for eventual disarmament had its greatest expression in last summer's demonstration in New York City where nearly one million persons gathered in Central Park during the United Nations' Second Special Session on Disarmament.

As an important spokesperson for the nuclear freeze, Colby has appeared on national debates with members of the National Peace through Strength group, an organization affiliated with the right-wing think tank Heritage Foundation which developed much of the Reagan Administration's military policy.

William Colby's appearance at IUPUI is being sponsored by the IUPUI Progressive Student Union and the Metropolitan Indianapolis Nuclear Freeze Committee. The latter organization is a coalition of individuals and peace organizations in the Indianapolis area who have united in their support of an immediate, bilateral nuclear moratorium.

Essay contest deadline announced

Entries are now being accepted for consideration for the history department's Thelander Memorial Award to be announced at the Honors Day convocation in late April. The $300.00 award for the best essay entered is in memory of Professor Theodore Thelander, Jr. who taught history in Indianapolis for Purdue and IUPUI from 1947 to 1971.

The contest is open to all students in any undergraduate program, however, the subject must be of historical interest and should display qualities of good historical analysis.

Copies of instructions as to proper form and judging criteria are available in the history office on the 5th floor of Cavanaugh Hall. Deadline for entries is Friday, April 8.

Response low to measles vaccination

by Tom McCain

Immunization against measles continues at the IUPUI Student Employee Health Service but an official there expressed concern about the low response to the free program.

"They're going on spring break and they need this protection," Administrative Assistant Virginia Stratton said.

Of the campus population of nearly 30,000 only 776 students and 200 employees had been inoculated as of Monday, though Stratton added the center was "quite busy" Tuesday.

Students at the Bloomington campus may need to show proof of immunization before returning to classes after spring break, a measure advocated by the State Board of Health. In the March 8 issue of The Indianapolis Star, IU Vice President Kenneth Gros Louis said the university there would cooperate with the health agency in such a program.

"I'm not aware of any measles in the Indianapolis area," said State Health Commissioner Ronald G. Blankenbaker but he indicated an outbreak of rubella at IUPUI could lead the state board to recommend an exclusionary policy here.

Blankenbaker added he is pleased with IUPUI's "positive response" in offering the vaccination program.

Although immunization currently is not required before admission to college, the Board of Health will ask this session of the Indiana General Assembly to mandate such a requisite.

Whether the legislature would act on such a proposal is uncertain but Blankenbaker suggests it is the only way of protecting against epidemics on university campuses.

The health service will offer the vaccination to IUPUI students and employees throughout this week and next. Open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., the center is located on the first floor of the east wing of Coleman Hospital, 1140 W. Michigan St.

1983-84 Speakers

If you could bring anyone you wanted — of local through international reputation — to IUPUI for a talk, maybe a press conference and a reception, who would you bring?

Many university organizations bring speakers here each year and more informed choices can be made if the organizations know who has the most appeal.

Your suggestions are needed.

Please write the name and achievements or interests of persons who you would like to see at IUPUI and return this form to the Sagamore office in the basement of Cavanaugh Hall, 001G.
