June 13, 2013

INScope

features of the week

Research consortium
The Big Ten Cancer Research Consortium joins 11 research universities and cancer centers in the fight against the disease.

Breast cancer risk
An IU cancer researcher and a collaborator have discovered how normal breast cells may be genetically vulnerable for cancer.

Doctor Camp
Doctor Camp and Camp Medical Detectives aim to inspire a love of science and medicine in the next generation.

editor's picks

Kudos
Showalter Scholars
IU School of Medicine has named four scientists as Showalter Scholars, a new program to recognize young researchers.

News to Use
CME fee structure
The IU School of Medicine Division of Continuing Medical Education will implement a new fee structure on July 1.

Opportunities
Nominations sought

story

Advancing children's research
The new Children’s Clinical Research Center at the IU School of Medicine will advance research to benefit children such as Tillie Waibel, who underwent a new treatment for newborns deprived of oxygen at birth.

podcast

'Sound Medicine'
This week's program features an interview
Faculty nominations are sought to select fourth year medical student inductees into the Gold Humanism Honor Society.

Imaging grants
The National Cancer Institute is seeking applications for early phase clinical trials in imaging and image-guided interventions.

Graduate leadership
Randy R. Brutkiewicz, professor of microbiology and immunology, has been named associate dean for graduate studies.

Renewed dedication
The IU Radiologic and Imaging Sciences Program has renewed Sarah Postlewaite’s dedication to helping the homeless.

Health, Disability and the Law
06-14-2013

Transforming Research Initiative Town Hall
06-17-2013

Writing for Success in Medicine
06-19-2013

Dean Brater Retirement Reception
06-25-2013

IUSM Newsroom
News and headlines from Indiana University School of Medicine.