Lib. arts faces 6 percent budget cut

by John Emery and Susan J. Ferrer

I regard six percent as a very serious cutback in the School of Liberal Arts budget, but (Executive Dean Edward) Moore does not—that is where we differ. If we are faced with the six percent cutback again, God knows where we will find it. We will have to cut back our student credit hours offered in the arts.

That was how SLA Dean Martha Francois saw the situation, as members of the School of Liberal Arts Faculty Assembly met on Jan. 31 to discuss proposals for minimizing the effects of potential IUPUI budget cuts on Liberal Arts, the SLA faculty, and the student body at IUPUI.

On Jan. 30, the SLA Faculty Assembly had been informed that the School of Liberal Arts was requested by Moore to recommend possible cuts of up to $320,000 from its base budget for fiscal year 1979-80. This reflected a one percent decrease over earlier requests.

The proposals recommended by Francois included: the elimination of substantial cuts in the associate faculty budget, having a shortened (course selection reduced) summer session in 1980; eliminating some faculty positions for the 1979-80 fiscal year, and the elimination of miscellaneous items from the SLA base budget.

Arguments have been made both verbally and in writing against such cuts in the SLA budget, in which Francois asked for two years to plan for the necessary cuts, promising to recover even more than six percent if given that time frame. As of Jan. 30 no response was received from Moore on the subject.

Francois sent a written protest to IU President John Ryan and Vice President Edgar Williams, in which she reiterated her protest against Moore's budgetary requests and expressed her general philosophy of a kind of budget cutting, in a pick and parcel manner to have and without any foresight for the future. The latter emphasis the importance of the SLA and the kind of contribution it is making at IUPUI.

Francois concluded her statement at the SLA Assembly by saying, "I had to be practical in the matter of possible budget cuts, though it offends my academic nature and it does go against something I feel very dedicated to—that is making this an urban committed institution.

"The faculty Assembly passed a resolution on Jan. 30 condemning the action of the administration in its interpretation of the financial crisis at IUPUI. Special emphasis was placed on the lack of interest in faculty input in the matter and the effect of budget cuts on the university's goal of meeting the needs of the community.

"Arguments have been made both verbally and in writing against such cuts in the SLA budget, in which Francois asked for two years to plan for the necessary cuts, promising to recover even more than six percent if given that time frame. As of Jan. 30 no response was received from Moore on the subject.

"The latter emphasis the importance of the SLA and the kind of contribution it is making at IUPUI.

U.S. should help China, says prof

China may well become the country's fiercest competitor in world and domestic markets in the years ahead; yet an IU international business authority says the U.S. should take the lead in helping it become an economic power.

Professor Paul Marer, IU School of Business world trade authority, says it does not appear feasible or desirable for the U.S. to try to block China's modernization program.

Marer's comments are in an article on U.S.-China relations to the year 2000 that is due in a forthcoming issue of Business Horizons, a publication of the IU School of Business.

Marer says China's current campaign to modernize its economy at a fast pace and with the help of Western technology and credits has opened the way for massive U.S. participation in China's economy during the 1980s.

"America and the world may soon see a China of one billion people becoming a huge trading nation," Marer said, "and planning for that contingency must begin now."

"In 10 to 15 years China will have a labor force of about 500 million educated, adequately trained and disciplined people in the most productive 20-to-40 year age group—nearly twice the combined labor force of the U.S., West Europe and Japan—and receiving wages only one-twentieth of those paid to workers in the industrial West."

"The potential competitive threat is immense," he said.

Marer says U.S. and Western policy should be directed toward "weaving a fabric of commercial intercourse" with China that will help avoid major disruptions, either by China of Western markets or by the West of China's development program, a disruption which could hurt China once again toward isolation.

Marer says a first step could be to insist that China publish detailed economic data, for example, on the kept secret almost every piece of economic information other countries regularly publish.

"This should not be seen as an attempt to spy into China's affairs but as a mutually beneficial safeguard measure to avoid unforeseen excursions by China into world markets either as a large buyer or seller," he said.

Above all, Marer explained, the U.S. and its Western allies should define the limits of what they should offer China in technology, credits, market access, and the benefits they seem to return.

The West should devise new and mutually equitable rules of commercial intercourse between market economies and state-trading countries.

The U.S. should take the initiative in forming an international task force to study these problems and to make recommendations," Marer said.

"Without planning for an economically strong China, our short-term enthusiasm about finding a huge export market could give way to the rude awakening of competing with a heavily indebted and highly industrialized China of more than one billion people," said Marer.

Congressional Insight

In broad outline, Carter's budget looks like a Republican document:

Look at the winners and losers in the fiscal 1980 spending plan:

- Increases recommended for defense, foreign aid, Commerce programs...

- Cuts proposed in housing, jobs, environmental, urban programs...

- Emphasis on more private-sector involvement in reaching goals...

But many Democrats will find it possible to live with—if not easily. Certain programs were sacrificed to maintain others designed to help the most disadvantaged.

- Higher income students were cut from school lunch programs.
- General anti-poverty aid to states was pared. Some public service jobs were killed. But jobs for low-income, chronically unemployed people were saved.

The Pentagon budget is politically linked to a new SALT treaty. Big increases are slated for conventional as well as nuclear weapons. By emphasizing deterrence in offset of Russian numerical edge Europe, the administration hopes to key a fears the U.S. would lose ground under SALT II.

Here's our vest-pocket analysis of some other major budget areas:

- Foreign Aid: Increases reflect rising commitments to help underdeveloped nations borrow money from international lending institutions. Not counted in the budget are requested sums for aid to Israel, in the event they sign a peace treaty. That could amount to $8 billion.

- Welfare: A model plan for revision of the system would not cost any money until fiscal year 1981. Establishment programs like food stamps would go up, reflecting rising costs and more eligible people. Proposed cuts in social security benefits, nutrition programs face stiff opposition.

- Wage Insurance: If this part of Carter's anti-inflation program fails, as many believe, it could make $2.5 billion available elsewhere.

- Job: Major cutsbacks in anti-recession and summer youth jobs will be toughest to defend...especially if the economy heads toward a recession and Congress starts calling for return to government pump-priming.

- Education: Cutsbacks are a "permanently" to be foreseen where there are government installations to be faced area well-off areas such as Montgomery County, Md. But more money would go to low income school areas.

- Health: Failure to achieve hospital cost controls would upset some planned savings in Medicare and Medicaid. New health programs would meet much more spending money. Like public relations campaigns urging people to stay fit.

- Economic Development: Anti-recession aid would continue if the jobs rate rises above 6.5 percent. Carter renewed request for National Development Bank.

- Energy: Nuclear power, oil and gas development lost funds. Solar energy research gained...belief is private industry won't pick up solar yet.

- Natural Resources, Environment: Winners were a toxic chemical program; oil pollution liability fund; and urban parks rehabilitation. The losers included sewage treatment plants; conservation and land management funds; and acquisition by the federal government of recreational lands.

- Transportation: Highway mass transit programs were cut about equally. Amtrak expenses slashed. More money for safety-related items.

- Agriculture: Few changes proposed in farm policy. Unexpectedly good weather could drive down food prices but increase government spending due to price support payments. Bad weather would have the opposite effect.

- Housing: Cuts in housing programs like the Government National Mortgage Association aimed at slowing down housing sales, cooling inflation.

- Justice: Major cuts in local police assistance programs financed through the much-criticized Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA).

1980 election looked at

Election time is just around the corner, and 37 Americans have already officially informed the Federal Election Commission (FEC) that they will be running for the nation's highest office—president of the Teamsters Union or rather, President of the United States. Sorry, Jimmy.

A few of the aspiring candidates include Garrett Brock Trapnell, resident of the Marion, Ill. Federal Penitentiary, who is serving a life sentence for taking unauthorized control of a 707. That's a euphemism for hijacking a plane. Anyway, his party treasurer is in the same slammer, and word is that a contribution push has proven ineffective. His issue stance is unclear. And since he is unread for comment, one can only guess about his platform.

Merrill E. Riddick, of Phillipsburg, Mont., is running under something called the Pureitan Ethic Prohibition Magneto Hydro Dyanmists Party. Whatever.

And there is Peter F. Thy's "The Last Chance for America Without resorting to Chaos" Committee.

In any case, the race should be interesting. Fine ya at the polls.

Our View

Med Center U.

Budget cuts have been in the news quite a bit lately. On the national scene, President Carter proposed a budget that was called "lean" by some, with a lesser deficit than we've seen in recent years.

And on the local front, it looks like IU is doing some real trimming for the fiscal year 1979-80. Non-medical areas are experiencing budget cuts of anywhere from two to six percent, with the School of Liberal Arts losing about $385,000. The medical areas can expect cuts of around one percent.

The basis for these cuts is a formula which takes into consideration the enrollment of the school (both positive and negative), and the total amount of credit hours students in that school are taking.

Seems like a reasonable idea on the surface. After all, with decreased state support, money will be tighter and cuts will have to be made. But why so heavy on the non-medical schools and divisions?

The School of Law is a unique case in all of this. Apparently, the law school lost a total of 10 students from 1977 to 1978, but the total number of credit hours in that school increased 111 hours. And the law school got a budget cut of $86,000.

The School of Medicine (and Nursing and Allied Health) is important, to be sure. But the rest of us have to go here, too. It seems to us that the more money you cut from a school, the fewer amount of classes that school will be able to offer. With fewer classes, fewer students. With fewer students, less money. And so on.

Money has to be cut from the budget, but let's all share the burden. The rest of us can close shop and call this place the Medical Complex U.

Worm Farms

The Sagamore is your loyal, trustworthy, and forever true student newspaper, and you believe everything we tell you, right? Like if we tell you the IUPUI shuttle has scheduled stops in the Magic Kingdom, you believe us, right? And if we tell you that the Continuing Studies program at our university now features a course in Earthworm Farming, you don't bat an eyelash, correct?

We kid you not—the Continuing Study folks are indeed going to the worm farm, so to speak, and we say that it's about time. After all, earthworm farming has become increasingly popular in recent years, according to the class description. And with over 600 varieties, there can be no limit to the possibilities for study (though the course will center only on the six most commercially popular brands).

Oh, by the way—the course will be instructed by Maurice Willing of the Advanced Worm Brokers Exchange, a six-year veteran of the worm biz.

Now, when your Sagamore tells you that truth is stranger than fiction, you believe us, right??
Lack of funding hampers intramurals

by Scott Wilson

After nearly a month of play, the division races in intramural basketball remain tight. In Division I, Freshman Dental and the Pubs lead the pack with 3-4 records. Division III has D. H. and Co. and Nurse Pro Tune on top, also sporting 3-4 marks. The Medicine Men and Poor Boys top Division IV at 3-4.

Division V has the Professional Students alone at the top with a 3-0 mark. Division VI has the II Speedsters and the Physical leading with 3-0 records. Division VII has Deer and Cat and Nune Pro Time on top, also sporting 3-4 marks. Division VIII has the Professional Students alone at the top with a 3-0 mark. Division IX which is the faculty division leads by the Kaidert and Ryter Dental, both with 3-4 marks.

This year's volleyball season has been arranged to accommodate as much of a cross-section of people as possible. In the past, intramural volleyball has been split into coed play, power involving semi-heavy competition with officiating by the United States Volleyball Association rules with no variation from USUVBA guidelines whatsoever. Coed play involves USUVBA rules, structured, however, for a mixed women and men's atmosphere.

This year, there will be two divisions of competition—official and non-official. (Official) play, still probably involving teams desiring to play in a competitive atmosphere, and those who wish to play for fun, leisure or exercise will likely choose the non-official league. USUVBA rules will govern play in both leagues.

A managers meeting will take place on Wednesday, February 3rd, and the tentative starting date for the league is March 5th.

Despite the existing entry fee for each intramural sport, the difficulties caused by the lack of a university activity fee appears to be great. Although raquetball and track and field entry dates have been set, places to play haven't. According to Intramurals Director Jeff Vessely, places for these events are unlikely to be set until late February for raquetball and early April for track and field.

Currently, one-third of the intramurals budget comes from the entry fee for each sport, and the other two-thirds comes from the School of Physical Education.

Vessely stated that the lack of universal student funding hampers the growth of the intramural program. Therefore, he said, a pragmatic approach is needed to facilitate play. Vessely related two examples. For instance, he said, "I've had people come to me and suggest intramural hockey. Well, we'd have problems with scheduling the various ice rinks in the area. Also, at least $300 would be needed for each uniform, and that doesn't take into account replacement and maintenance. The average student can't meet this kind of financial demand."

"Some have come to me and suggested intramural bowling. Well, we don't have bowling leagues exist all over the city, and bowling is so accessible that it's easily underemphasized. I asked one fellow, 'If we did have this, would you give up one of your league nights to bowl in an intramural league?' He said, maybe. With that kind of attitude, the situation would be hopeless."

Vessely remarked that student feedback concerning intramurals is welcome and should be relayed to the Intramurals Office, 1016 W. 64th St. (312) 383-8011.

Intramural sports schedules are available at the Student Activities Offices in Cavanaugh Hall, the Union Building, and the Krannert Science Building.

Shiny Beast
Captain Beefheart
and the Magic Band
(Warner Bros. 3536)

I can't do it...yet. Let's finish up the daily playing of Shiny Beast first. Finished already? Well, the turtable looks a little dusty...and how about that cartridge? Do it now. No, let's listen to the radio a bit...nothing worth listening to? On Christ, I might as well get it over with...

So it went...constant delays of no fault but my own. I finally mustered up enough energy to drop Shiny Beast on the turtable (which really was dusty). I expected a lot of nonsense to roll from the speakers, but what came forth was more of a psychological experience than the two sides of plastic garbage I was prepared for.

There was a number of us out there who feed on the lyrical quality of music so much that in some cases the quality becomes secondary. Mucho fell out there once and, to bug, but it takes an artist to present words in a poetic and surrealistic fashion. Don Van Vliet (Captain Beefheart) is such an artist. He gives us surreal portraits of colorful pastoral beauty. I can feel that I have become the unknowing participant of a running joke.

Beefheart is cut from the same piece of rock that bore Frank Zappa and the Mothers. The quality is so similar, in fact; that I tend to think that the Zappa himself was standing over the project. Studio-wise, the group could tend to be more polished but it takes a true artist to present words in a poetic and surrealistic fashion, Don Van Vliet (Captain Beefheart) is such an artist. Goat people wise, gullible

The Chinese Lunar New Year is almost a month under way, and it seems an apt time to reflect back many moons ago when, legend has it, Buddha held a grand celebration for all the animals. Only twelve animals came to his party, though, as Buddha honored each by naming a calendar year after it in the order of their arrival. The animals were the Rat, Ox, Tiger, Rabbit (or Cat), Dragon, Snake, Horse, Goat, Monkey, Rooster, Dog and Pig.

The Chinese calendar cycle of 60 years combines these twelve animals with the elements of fire, earth, gold, wood, and water to make each year significant to the teller of fortunes.

1979 is the Year of the Goat in Chinese astrology, as were 1927, 1939, 1951, 1963, 1975, and 1987. People born in these years are said to be blessed with virtue of good disposition, mild manner, and compassion. They are basically wise, but their good nature may make them seem somewhat gullible. Perhaps as a result of this trusting inner nature, Goat People tend to become shy and pessimistic in their relationships, and may develop reputations as worriers.

Despite these flaws, the Goat's good points always win out. They are charitable and generous, as well as artistically talented. They tend to be elegant, fashionable, and in good taste at all times. As a marriage partner, the Goat is ideal, particularly when paired with a Rabbit, Pig, or Horse. Watch out for the Ox and Dog, however, as their traits are not always compatible with the whims of Goat People.

(Next Week: the charming and gracious Rat.)

Dec., Jan. prime crime time

by Tracy Pestut

"These are prime times for crimes of opportunity."

Captain Larry Propst, records section of the University Police-Indianapolis Division, maintains all persons on campus need to become more concerned with keeping the theft rate down.

"Even though 381 thefts were reported from December-January, I think 75 percent could be prevented by persons watching for "crimes of opportunity," Propst said, explaining that "sometimes otherwise honest persons see an opportunity to steal when merchandise is left unattended."

To prevent crime, Propst said to: make sure articles are secured or under immediate control; write serial numbers down and keep them filed; engrave social security numbers or put identifying marks on personal belongings, and report suspicious actions on campus.

"The department recovered $23,000 in goods of approximately $40,000 worth of stolen purses, wallets, CB radios, cash and other materials in 1979," Propst said. "Eighty-six percent of university property was recovered while 61 percent of personal property was returned."

"Of the $40,000, only $5,000 was cash," he said, "CB radios and other materials compile the list."

University Hospital has the highest theft rate with 70 thefts reported and Cavanaugh Hall is one of the lowest crime areas with 13 thefts last year, January and December of each year show a higher rate according to Propst, because "in December, persons are doing before-Christmas shop-lifting, and after vacation in January, people are more lax about watching for thefts."

About the same amount of property loss was reported in 1977, but because of inflation, Captain Propst believes less actually was stolen in 1979. Every time a CB radio is stolen (the most highly stolen article) it means a loss of approximately $400, according to Captain Propst. Although the department broke up a "ring" of credit card thieves in 1977, these and checkbooks are "popular" items. If these are stolen, upon reporting it to campus police, a person should notify their bank or credit card company for stop payment.

"Any time something is stolen, it should immediately be reported to us (campus police) because it is in our jurisdiction. We send a uniformed officer to the sight and gather information for our investigators," Captain Propst said.

To report a theft, call 364-7971.

40 courses for doctors offered

The latest ideas and techniques in the diagnosis, evaluation and treatment of patients with diseased coronary arteries that may lead to heart failure will be covered in a continuing education course for Hoosier physicians next week. The Cardiology Division of the Indiana University School of Medicine will present the program Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 7-8. This is one of more than 40 short courses being presented this school year by the Division of Postgraduate Medical Education of the medical school to help keep Indiana doctors abreast of the latest concepts and methods in a variety of medical fields. The entire program will be presented at the Hyatt Regency Hotel. It runs from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

Presentation the first day will deal primarily with ambulatory or outpatients. Management of patients with acute or unstable coronary heart disease will be covered the second day. The uses and limitations of echocardiography, radionuclide imaging, ambulatory monitoring and stress testing will be discussed and the current trends in medical and surgical management will be covered.

Residents and interns in approved training programs in Indiana may attend the program at no cost if space is available.

Course co-directors are Dr. Paul L. McHenry, professor of medicine and director of the exercise physiology laboratory at the Kraner Institute of Cardiology, and Dr. James C. Dillon, associate professor of medicine, director of the coronary care unit at the IU School of Medicine and research associate at the Kraner Institute. Nine other medical school faculty members will assist them.
I. Q. testing to be discussed

Legal challenges to intelligence quotient testing in the schools will be discussed by Greg Silverberg, staff member of the National Center for Law and the Handicapped, Inc., at an Alden Center Development Conference to be held on Thursday, Feb. 8, at 20:30 in the Alden Conference Room of the Indiana University Hospital in the Indiana University Medical Center.

The conference is one of a monthly series sponsored by the Alden Center Development of the IU School of Medicine. Dr. A. L. Drew, professor of neurology and pediatrics, is director of the Center.

The uses and alleged abuses of I.Q. tests scores long have been matters of controversy. In recent years the debate has moved from the abstraction of psychological theory to the practical applications of public policy. Dr. Silverberg, an attorney, will discuss one aspect of the debate which has moved into the court.

The National Center for Law and the Handicapped monitors state and federal regulations dealing with the handicapped. In some cases, it urges action where rights of the handicapped may have been violated. In other instances, it enters cases already filed as a friend of the court.

The Alden Center Development of the IU School of Medicine is a training and service center to apply the latest multidisciplinary approach to the problems of developmentally disabled Hoosier children. The conference themes are a part of this effort.

Black History Month declared

The second annual Black History Month Celebration was proclaimed for February by Indianapolis Mayor William Hudnut, as part of a nation-wide celebration. This year’s theme, “Education and Youth,” will be observed through a wide variety of special activities.

Celebrities such as Marvin Johnson, world lightweight boxing champion, Esther Rolle, star of TV’s “Good Times,” and Kevin Hooks as “White Shadow,” will be featured in the celebration programs, and a “Tribute to West Memphis Jazz Concert” is slated for Feb. 18.

Don’t be Left Out in the Cold

Winter, with its show and ice and cold, is finally upon us. For many people, this presents no real problems. But if you are one of those people that needs assistance with your vehicle, there is a service available to help you in your hour of need. If you have difficulties, while on campus, call 225-8688. Explain your problem to them, and the parking lot where your car is parked (the lot number is on the sign attached to light pole). The service is free, but they are not there to perform major repairs on your car.

Co-ops weapon against inflation

by Susan J. Ferrer

Where can you find fruit, vegetables, meat, grains, beans, and even organically grown produce for 30-70 percent less than in supermarkets?

Food co-ops.

How can co-ops have such great prices? Members deal directly with the wholesaler. There are no middlemen’s (grocery’s) profits.

Historically, buying in bulk was for large rural families who were buying, freezing, and drying. In the 60s, urban families came to form co-ops and communes. Each was the trend.

Now, for many, co-ops are real weapons against rising food costs.

Most food co-ops charge an entrance fee that either covers the cost of one's first order or the incidental costs of co-ops' operations.

Items are selected from an order sheet, and turned in or called in to a central location—usually a member's house. Those separate orders are totaled together, and co-op buyers go to their local producers or wholesalers for each.

For additional information regarding food co-operators, contact Ron Whitesur at 257-8693.

Despite the heavy snows Indianapolis has experienced of late, things will be looking up in the near future, according to Norman, the Indianapolis Zoo's resident groundhog. Norman (above) is less than a year old and when he awoke at 7:50 am on Friday (Groundhog's Day) and stumbled from his burrow, he failed to see his shadow, a sure sign that spring is on its way.
