SA announces platform

by K. L. Wagner

Announcement of the new Student Assembly platform and the second reading of procedure-modifying Bill No. 1 are included in the agenda for the next meeting of the SA, to take place Thursday, May 11, at 7:15 pm in Room 315 of the University Library.

Student body Vice President John Emley announced that the SA is inviting student input, either verbally or in writing, on the new platform at the meeting, which is expected to be limited to about two and one-quarter hours. Emley also emphasized that the assembly is still seeking nominations from the deserts of the various schools to fill the 11 divisional seats still vacant, as well as recruiting among student organizations and the general student body for the 11 al-large vacancies.

In other announcements, Emley stated that the SA plans to reactivate the defunct Inter-Communications Council (ICC), a group designed to coordinate the goals and efforts of ISU student organizations, as a source of input on university policies and programming for the SA.

“We hope to utilize the representatives of ICC’s 12 members of the Student Assembly,” he said, explaining that this would give them the right to speak before the assembly and to serve on committees. Whether they would have a vote on these committees, Emley indicated, would depend upon the nature of the committee.

The primary impact of the new ICC, according to Emley, would be in coordinating activities such as the Circle City Circuit, the First of Fall Festival (a planned counterpart to the CCC Spring Festival), the Student Leadership Workshop, etc.

Also expected to be included in the new SA platform is the formation of a Senate Committee on Academic Ethics, intended to oversee SA representation, two faculty members and two student body, and two faculty members, which would hear and investigate charges of academic misconduct on the part of faculty members, Emley said.

Labor disputes program’s target

Resolving collective bargaining disputes in the public safety services—police and fire fighters—before they lead to work stoppages is the goal of a labor relations program being developed at Indiana University.

Under a grant from the Indiana Commission on Higher Education, the Midwest Center for Public Sector Labor Relations will design and implement a series of regional seminars on conflict resolution concepts and techniques.

To be offered over a 12-month period beginning in September, the seminars will be aimed at both the public employers and the employee representatives.

Professor Richard S. Rubin, director of the IU Midwest Labor Center and project director, said, “The essence of the nature of the work performed by public safety employees, security concerns, and the nature of the performance of their jobs have serious implications. Both the employers and their employees must be made aware of how to resolve conflicts before work disruptions occur.”

Iranian executions called ‘revenge’

by Susan J. Ferrer

Three months have passed since the holy man Khomeni returned to the beckoning throngs of Iranian citizens. In that time 306 executions have taken place, the press has been censored, threats of assassinations have appeared, and anti-Western marches still continue.

In interviews with the Sagamore, Dr. Cyrus Behroozi, native of Tehran and IUPUI Associate Dean of the School of Social Work, and Payrooydood Dadkhah, IUPUI Iranian student, who discussed his homeland in our February issue, discussed the ongoing turmoil in Iran.

Recounting his memories of Iran under the Shah, Behroozi explained that his country was marked by “political repression, an autocratic and rigid economic policy, a high rate of inflation, the destruction of small crafts and agriculture, a mass exodus of the rural areas, and a rapid rate of social and culture changes superimposed to foreign influences.”

Behroozi summarized that the consequence of the Shah’s rule was “the breakdown of the social institutions” and his attempts to democratize the country were “too little, too late.”

Discussing the present situation, he commented that “the freedom of one group is likely to be at the cost of others,” that the post-revolutionary government is “traditional” and, at present, looking for the element that contributed to the revolution, such as is often the case after a revolution.

Qualifying his remarks as “in no way a defense of the system of justice,” Behroozi explained that the executions resulted from the fear of counter-revolutionary activities by Shah supporters and mass revenge by the populace.

Like Behroozi, Dadkhah described the situation as “traumatic,” likening it to the period after the American Revolution. He added that it was “too early to judge... don’t make final judgement until the government has shown that it’s in charge.”

Dadkhah explained the executions as a part of “the drastic changes” brought about by the revolution and emphasized that the threat of counter-revolutionary actions by pro-Shah forces was too real to go unnoticed.

Commenting on the anti-Jewish and anti-Western sentiments that are present in Iran, Behroozi described them as “political reactions” rather than religious or political motivations. Khomeni has said that he is willing to tolerate religious minorities, but they are religiously recognized by the regime as valid religions—Judaism is one of them.

He went on to say that Khomeni’s main concern in the anti-Zionist war, the PLO’s involvement in the Iranian Revolution, and the anti-Western cooperation between the Shah and Israel.

The anti-Western sentiment results from the fact that Shi’a, an Islamic religious sect, “embraces nationalism and thus rejects foreign influences,” he said.

Dadkhah also denied the existence of anti-Semitism. “Khomeni has said that Jewish people are just as Iranian as the rest. The state is against Zionism... the takeover of Palestine,” he was quoted as saying, adding that Iran aligns itself with the PLO because it has known political persecution. The Khomeinist religious illusion, he emphasized, stating that “Brotherhood is more the

The continued anti-Western feeling is fueled by Senator Jacob Javits’ (R-N.Y.) resolution condemning the execution, according to Dadkhah. “More than 300 executions and in a country where did you hear from Javits before that execution?”

Special emphasis, according to Rubin, will be given to a new concept in public sector labor relations—the organization of Labor-Management Councils that can be perpetuated mutually and resolve them in a non-adversary atmosphere.

Members of the staff of the Midwest Labor Center, a division of the School of Public and Environmental Affairs, will coordinate regional workshops and provide additional technical assistance in the formation and initial operation of local committees.

Fee for the course is $50. For registration forms and information, call the school at 633-3861.

Tornado...

A course teaching citizens how to "spot" tornadoes will be offered at 7:30 pm on Wednesday, June 6, by the Division of Emergency Planning and Civil Defense at the Children's Museum, 3000 North Meridian Street. Course instructors include staff members from the National Weather Service Forecast office at the Indianapolis International Airport.

The course participants will learn how tornadoes form and what symptoms to look for during severe weather. The course will include viewing unusual film footage of actual tornado formations and destruction caused as a tornado moved through both urban and rural areas. Such training is considered to be particularly important for residents of Indiana, which was among the leaders of the nation in tornado damage and death.

The two-hour course is open to the general public. Those desiring to attend should notify the Division of Emergency Planning and Civil Defense, 633-3860 prior to Monday, June 4. There is no registration fee.

IU decline in enrollment close to nation's average

The 3.7 percent enrollment decline which Indiana University experienced in the fall of 1978 was close to the average decline across the country, according to a new national survey. Conducted by the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges (NASULGC), the survey reveals that overall enrollment at state and land-grant universities dipped from 3,363,946 in 1977 to 3,231,948 in the fall of 1978, a four percent decline. The survey covered 304 campuses of the nation's principal state universities and land-grant colleges, institutions which enroll approximately 30 percent of all students attending U.S. institutions of higher education.

However, at 71 percent of these schools there was a slight increase in the total enrollment, an average of 3,577,372 in 1977 as compared with 3,582,789 in 1978. Out of the 10 largest institutions included in the NASULGC survey, Indiana University ranks eighth, with a total 1978 enrollment of 69,706. The largest is the State University of New York, with 346,725; the smallest is the University of Maryland, with 38,642.

IU graduate fellowships totaled over $2 million in 1977-78

During fiscal year 1977-78 Indiana University provided $2,172,327 in graduate fellowships to 1,781 students. This is an eight percent increase in funds and a 16 percent increase in the number of fellowships over the 1976-77 year.

A breakdown of funds and their distribution is in a fellowship report just released by H. Glison Ludlow, assistant vice president for administration at IU. The increase in both total dollars and the number of recipients ended a declining trend in fellowship support, Ludlow said in his report. He added that the increase, despite tight budgetary policy, represents the university's strong financial commitment to graduate education.

During the two fiscal years compared, federal government support increased 18 percent and the number of students supported with federal funds increased 57 percent. This shows, said Ludlow, that federal funds play a vital role in financing graduate education at IU and "must be maintained if the university hopes to adequately fund its graduate program."

The Bloomington campus used 65 percent of the total fellowship dollars to support 62 percent of the total number of students who received fellowships. The Indianapolis campus spent 31 percent to support 29 percent. IU-Northwest spent the remaining three percent to support 10 percent of the total number of students.

While state and private support suffered a slight decline during the two years, a significant increase in federal support more than made up the difference. If the university hopes to maintain its high graduate academic tradition, it must not only continue to receive strong federal support, but must also seek out new state and private sources, the report said. Rising inflation and decreasing enrolments create a "fermisible challenge."

Fellowships are monetary awards made to graduate students on the basis of financial need and academic achievement. The report does not include money given as compensation for services by students. With few exceptions, post-doctoral and undergraduate financial support are not included in the report. Included are 153 double-award and eight triple-award recipients. Thus, the number of awards is greater than the number of recipients.

Ask Jimmy

For those who may not yet be aware, President Carter is reportedly planning a visit to the Circle City on Saturday, June 2, to attend some Democratic fundraisers and generally to be seen with the local candidates.

It would appear, however, that Carter's Indy visit will not be all social affairs at $100 a plate. At least one group, the anti-nuclear Indianapolis Paddlewheel Alliance, is planning to picket the President outside the Convention-Exposition Center, where he will be attending an evening reception. Promising to "give President Carter A Message," the anti-nukers will gather at 5 pm to form a "legal, peaceful, informational picket line."

Though we don't plan a demonstration of our own, the Sagamore does hope to attend a rumored press conference while the President is here, and we would certainly appreciate the opportunity to "give him a message" regarding the concerns of students of this university.

Since we understand that IUPUI's urban setting results in the majority of students being primarily concerned with outside of school "walls," we feel that this is an excellent opportunity to address the real problems—the day-to-day-survival problems—of the people we are trying to represent.

If you have a question you would like to ask Carter (be it about the price you paid for gasoline last weekend, the court-ordered busing of your children, or whatever), put it in writing and send it by campus mail, hand delivery, or carrier pigeon to Cavanaugh Hall, Room 001 G. We'd like to publish as many of your responses as possible, but we'll certainly respect anybody's wishes not to go in print. At any rate, we'll do our best to voice your concerns in person to President Carter, given the opportunity.

As a concentration of upwardly-mobile, informed, and concerned individuals, the IUPUI student body's opinions are important. Our concerns are viable ones; our needs are representative of the needs of a large segment of Americans. Let us speak our piece now, before the 1980 elections, and before it is too late.

Slow goin'

Difficult as it may be to admit, fall semester is not that far away, and progress on the Sagamore's Fall Orientation Issue is moving right along, and we...

Well, actually, progress on the Orientation Issue is rather slow, but...

Look, we haven't exactly done a whole lot on our Fall Orientation Issue, but that is to the advantage of all those concerned and active student groups and university services who have not yet had the opportunity to contact us with information about your group, its goals, activities, membership, and so forth.

Do yourself a favor—increase your membership or exposure by being included in the 1979 Orientation Issue. We look forward to hearing from you as we continue our diligent efforts to keep ahead of schedule on the fall special (ahem)....

The Sagamore welcomes letters to the editor. Letters should be limited to 300 words, be to the point and include the name and phone number and address of the writer. No letters will be printed unless they are signed. Only the name will be published with the letter unless the writer requests anonymity. The editors reserve the right to edit all letters and to reject those letters they feel are objectionable. All letters should be typed and addressed to the editor, Cavanaugh Hall, Room 001 G.

Friend graces Sagamore

To the Editor:

I've been reading the Sagamore for years now, and I must say that the quality of your publication has been steadily rising. Your articles are informative, imaginative, and always well-written. I especially like your center-spread features which keep me abreast of the out-of-the-way and unusual happenings in Indy. And your Midwest Arts Gazette, even though I don't like disco, has kept me well-informed as to the record scene. I never go to plays, so your coverage of those events helps keep me culturally informed and able to carry on conversations with my friends.

Your coverage of IUPUI's Metro basketball was very good, and although I didn't attend any of the games, through your articles I felt as though I had a front-row seat. Even your classified section is to be applauded. I just love reading who needs help and who has a house to rent. And those personals are really great... STOP! I can't continue this.

Sincerely,
A Friend

After the Sagamore interview, Hubbard joined his company in its last performance to grade schoolers for this year. Then the dancers "stripped" the set of props, portable floor, sound and lighting equipment and packed it all in the IBT equipment truck.

They were off to St. Louis, but Indianapolis audiences can see them under the stars on the concert terrace at IMA July 15 and 16 (sponsored by the Festival of Music Society.)

Joining the IBT in December will be the young stars of the Russian Bolshoi Ballet, Their appearance will be the only such stop in the Midwest.

Season subscriptions for five performances are on sale at 20 percent savings, $20 for the night performances and $10 for Saturday matinee shows (plus an added 10 percent discount to students and teachers). For more information call IBT at 923-3037.

Student fares make foreign travel cheap

By Jimi Beasle

You breathe a sigh of relief—your finals are over. Visions of sandy beaches, blue skies, and warm sea breezes begin to drift through your mind. Yes, you decide, it's just about time for a vacation.

Thrusting your books aside, you scrape together all available funds, call the airlines, reserve a flight, and take off the next day for Fort Lauderdale.

You've just done it all wrong—that is, if you're looking for ways to save money and enjoy a vacation at the same time.

There are several ways a penny-pinching traveler can save money, according to Charles Herron of Herron Travel. The first is to plan ahead. "It sounds stupid," observed Herron, "but very few people do that."

Planning ahead allows a person to take advantage of the special fares which airlines offer. For example, the lowest possible fare offered in the U.S. is Super saver. This fare leaves midweek at night, between Saturday and Monday, and must be booked at least 30 days ahead of time. Making plans in advance is wise, however, because a roundtrip ticket from Indianapolis to Los Angeles costs $352 and the Super saver fare is only $312.

Although time-consuming, traveling by bus can also be very economical. Greyhound Bus Lines offers a package ticket, called America pass, which gives unlimited use of Greyhound Bus Lines for a specified period of time.

The ticket can be bought for 7, 15, or 30 days, and costs about $100 for 7 days and $200 for 30 days. According to Carl Edwards, Terminal Manager at Greyhound, a person can travel continuously 500 miles in a day so that, conceivably, a person could travel 15,000 miles for $300 on the 30 day pass. With the high price of fuel, a more inexpensive mode of travel would be hard to find.

Herron explained that staying out of big cities while vacationing is another way to avoid exorbitant travel costs. A smart strategy is to choose the major cities during the day and then to stay in a hotel outside of the city at night. By getting a hotel room 25 miles outside of New York in New Jersey, a person can pay 50 per cent less, according to Herron.

Where should students desiring to see some surf at a cheap price go? "Good old Florida," said Linda Mennech of Rosas and Babcock Travel. She also agreed that the vacationer should avoid larger cities.

Instead of going to Fort Lauderdale, where prices are higher, a student could save money by visiting a smaller city such as Venice Beach, which is between West Palm Beach and Daytona, as Herron suggested. The same rules for economizing when traveling at home apply to traveling abroad. Students should plan ahead and definitely not go to Europe in the summer, when airfare is most expensive.

Herron named the budget fare as the best buy. Flying overseas is surprisingly inexpensive. A budget fare round-trip ticket from New York to London costs £279. A comparable round-trip ticket to Los Angeles is $211.

However, only a casual traveler—someone who does not need to arrive at his destination at a specific date—can benefit from this fare. If you used this fare, you would tell the airlines the weeks which you wanted to fly, and 10-12 days before departure they would inform you on which day you were leaving.

One outside factor affecting the price of airline tickets is the sky rocketing cost of fuel. Due to the increasing cost of all fuel surcharge will more likely become effective before June 1, said Herron. This would raise ticket prices 4-7 percent, which Herron called "a big jump."

A disadvantage but necessary inconvenience of air travel is "bumping," which occurs when the airlines oversell a flight.

Even if you have a prepaid ticket, it is possible that when you arrive at the gate there won't be any seats left on the plane. Herron said overselling is necessary to keep the cost of air travel down. To avoid being bumped, a passenger should arrive at least an hour early for overseas flights and 45 minutes for domestic flights.

Bumping can be advantageous for a student, though. If someone who is bumped absolutely has to be at his destination at a specific time, the airline will offer a cash premium to anyone who is willing to give up his seat. One student gave up his seat to a businessman and earned $150 in addition to another ticket, Herron said.

If considering crossing the ocean by ship, time and money must be taken into account. Time is important to most students and a cruise can last five days whereas flying takes only eight hours. Herron also pointed out that food and lodging must be paid for on a ship in addition to transportation costs.

When in Europe, the vacationer should also avoid the major cities, because "just like in the U.S. it costs more to buy breakfast in New York City than in Noblesville," as Herron remarked.

"Stay out of Paris," Herron said. "Sights are there during the day and stay elsewhere at night."

One opportunity open to students which can further diminish vacation expenses is staying in hostels. Hosts offer low-budget lodging for the casual traveler, who is not part of a tour.

"Hosteling"—backpacking by day and sleeping in hostels at night—is very popular among students.

"Students are a different breed," said Suzanne DeCullis of AAA World Travel. "They don't feel badly about getting over there as cheaply as possible and then just roughing it."

"Most students backpack and stay in hostels," observed Memmich. "I've seen thousands of American kids over there backpacking. They meet each other and have a great time."

Hostels provide bedding and shower and toilet facilities. Beds are generally in one large sleeping-dorm and hostlers need to keep valuables under lock and key at all times.

There are two kinds of hostels—student and youth. Youth hostels are often located in university areas and

If advertising hype made movies, Alien would be one of the best efforts of the decade, if not the best ever. But as it always seems to be, the more extensive the advertising campaign, the poorer the movie turns out to be.

Billed as one of the best science-fiction movies to be produced since 2001: A Space Odyssey, Alien more closely resembles a Jaws plot—Star Wars meets the special effects hybrid.

The film revolves around the crew of the space-tug Nostromo, who are out in deep space gathering minerals. Along the way, they receive radio transmissions from a planet and, through a series of events, take aboard a creature who is a perfect life form, and cannot be killed.

Once the creature is on the ship, the crew decides to hunt it down and capture it but, as can be expected, this course of action doesn't quite work out the way they expect.

The plot is typical B-grade sci-fi from the 1950s, and almost every decision that the crew members make is totally opposite of what a human would do in that situation. (Example: Who would crawl into an air duct alone looking for a creature that cannot be killed, as did the ship's captain?"

Some of the special effects in Alien, though, aren't bad. Director Ridley Scott assembled an Oscar-winning costume-designer John Mollo, and art directors Les Dilley and Roger Christian—from Star Wars to work on Alien. Also brought from Star Wars was Dan O'Bannon, who worked on the special effects in that movie, to write the screenplay for Alien. (O'Bannon also co-wrote the original story.)

It's too bad that the plot of this movie is so poor, because the acting jobs turned in by actresses Sigourney Weaver (Ripley, the ship's warrant officer) and Yaphet Kotto (Parкер, the space-tug's engineer). Weaver is a veteran of off-Broadway productions, and is currently starring in the original production of Gemini, which is running on Broadway.

Kotto has made movie appearances in many films including Rasputin on Earth (in which he played 1st Antimius and Live and Let Die). Other members of the cast are Tom Skerritt (Dallas, the Nostromo's captain), Veronica Cartwright (Lambert, the navigator), Dean Stanton (Brett, the engineering technician), John Hurt (Kane, the ship's executive officer), and Ian Holm (Ash, the science officer).

Even with the good acting and special effects, Alien really doesn't warrant the price of the ticket.

'In space, no one can hear you scream,' but the hyped Hollywood publicity for Alien is deafening—and empty.

A search party from the space-tug Nostromo discovers the source of the unidentified transmission in the film Alien, now showing at the Eastwood Theater.

5/30/79 Sagamore 7
Test prep services investigated

by K. L. Wagner
(revised in a series)

What type of person enrolls in test coaching courses?

Anita Costin, administrator of Stanley H. Kaplan's Indianapolis Educational Center, reports that a large percentage of the local market is comprised of minorities who have been motivated to enroll in such courses for a number of years. She went on to mention that a 25 percent discount is available to lower income students upon proof of need.

Kaplan himself stated that 65 percent of his clientele are referred by high school or college advisors, or by some other word of mouth.

One Kaplan student told the Sagamore that he decided to take the MCAT course after his friend received a "D" in Physics, went on to pass the MCAT after taking the preparation course.

Another student reported two friends who had taken the course and had subsequently passed the bar exam. Having been out of the educational system for some time, she indicated that Kaplan's methods effectively "condensed" the material for her, and that the sample testing had eliminated some of the usual tension which made her "choke" when she took the actual test.

Both students, when asked if they felt the Kaplan course to be too expensive, indicated that they would have to wait for the results of their tests, remarking that if the course helped them to pass the MCAT, the expense would have been worthwhile.

Statistically, both Kaplan and TotalTape are armed with a battery of support for the claims and objectives of their programs. TotalTape reports a 90 percent passing rate on the CPA exam, while Kaplan reports an overall 90 percent average increase in scores on retests. Kaplan goes on to point out a Boston study in which 13 of 15 minority individuals were accepted into Medical School after going through his test course.

Potential students, however, will not hear these stats quoted to them by Kaplan officials. As Costin explains, quoting statistics, however impressive, seems to give the impression of a guarantee in the mind of the student. She emphasizes that the courses are not guarantees, and that to give that impression would be a mistake.

A mistake indeed, say ETS officials, who disagree with the score-improvement claims of test preparation services.

"Coaching does not make a significant difference," according to Jennifer Brittel, executive director for program planning and consumer affairs for the Princeton, N.J., firm. She noted that anyone taking the ETS tests for a second time will improve his score by 60 points, due to his familiarity with the test format.

ETS Law Program Vice President Tom White stated in a Collegiate Consumer Reporting Service interview that ETS "is unaware of any evidence that would indicate that study courses are any more effective than a person diligently going through the materials that are provided free (by ETS) to prepare for the test."

He advised against taking the test "cold," but felt that individual study of the review materials provided would be adequate preparation for most people.

White did indicate, however, that those for whom a "do-it-yourself" approach is not effective might find a more structured approach "more advisable."

Stanley Kaplan, on the other hand, looks upon the sample tests and notes furnished by ETS as recognition that "preparation is both necessary and advisable" for aptitude tests.

have the drawback of maintaining specified curfews. The nightlife in many major European cities is nonstop and students are sometimes reluctant to observe a curfew.

Student hostels have exceptionally low rates—about $3-$4 a night—and no curfews. To stay in a student hostel an International Student ID card is required. Applications for these cards are available through colleges and universities (International Programs office at IUPUI).

Hostels are also available in the US. but to use them membership in American Youth Hostels is necessary. By joining AYH you are allowed access to over 500 hostels in 50 countries.

There are about 175 hostels in the US. and the average cost is $2 per night.

Most parts of the US. have hostels and special hostel circuits are in New England, the Great Lakes region, the Rockies, and the Pacific that are geared for hikers and bicyclers.

A wise purchase for a student travelling is a Eurail Pass. These passes cost $200, are good for two months and give unlimited travel by train on the continent.

"It's a great buy for someone who wants to jump around and travel for a couple of months," said Heron. And the savings are substantial.

Without a Eurail Pass, a round-trip second class ticket from Paris to Rome costs $119.

What about those books advertising Europe for $10-$15 a day? While these books do contain numerous tips on inexpensive hotels and restaurants and can save the students a lot of money, Heron believes that there are drawbacks.

"My main concern with those books is that unless you speak the language of the country, you'll see half as much."

There are definite advantages to going on a tour. "For people who have never been, there's only one way to see it, an escorted tour," DeCillis claimed.

She said that, overall, tours are better economically. Tours take care of meals, transportation, sightseeing, baggage handling, and all the details.

According to DeCillis, one reason tours are valuable is because it's hard to estimate the cost of food. She pointed out that a cup of coffee can cost $2.50 in Frankfurt, Germany. She also said that transportation can be a hassle and a "real pain."

Try and get a taxi in France," she added, "and if you do get it, they'll charge you whatever they want."

Heron offered some advice on student tours. He said that while it appears no guarantee, students should check to see if the tour operator belonged to the American Society of Travel Agents (ASTA).

Members of ASTA "supposedly subscribe to a code of ethics," Heron said. "They won't run off with your money, and if they advertise three meals a day, first-class hotels, they'll give them."

Last year, Heron advised travelers on a budget to make use of a travel agent's services. DeCillis concurred and said, "Contrary to widespread misconception, a travel agent's services are completely free of charge to the customer."

Heron said that the customer gets expert advice and unbiased advice from their travel agent. He explained that for instance, TWA wants to sell you a customer a TWA flight and won't try to find a less expensive or more convenient flight with another airline.

Travelling on impulse may be enjoyable, but if you're like most students, your wallet won't join in on the fun. It's best to plan ahead and save some money.
