Summer wrap-up

By R.J. Cooper

For those who were "unable" to spend the summer at IUPUI, there were some developments that might be of interest to you.

At the university level, enrollment at IUPUI was down 3.7 percent, but this drop was a little under the national average. Graduate fellowships totaled over $1 million in 1977-78 and were awarded to almost 1,800 students.

The Faculty Council voted that the two six-week summer sessions be scrapped in favor of one eight-week session, with expenses given as the reason for this move. Dr. Irwin's office embarked on a "Wait-Watcher" energy conservation program for IUPUI, with a 10 percent reduction as its goal.

Also reported this summer were the Student Assembly's plan to set up a "confour study room," which will be in operation this fall in the Union Building. William Mohr, a first-year medical student at IUPUI, was chosen to fill the student representative spot on the IU Board of Trustees.

A comprehensive report on the epidemic rise of rape in Marion County (40 percent increase in the past year) offered suggestions on prevention, what to do in case of attack and how to cope if you become a victim.

And there was the story of the man who paid his back taxes—$4,254.25 worth—in pennies to protest what he thought was an unfair assessment against him.

Plans that were reviewed during the summer included Players, which was described as a dime-store romance; The Main Event, a light comedy, and A Little Romance, called one of the best films of the year.

The Hollywood horror-shows reviewed were Prophecy, "unsatisfying"; Alien, "all hype"; and Nightwing, "didn't get off the ground."

A response to a Department of Health, Education and Welfare audit of Indiana University research and identifying support material to answer questions raised in the report have been completed.

IU's response will be sent to HEW as the next step in a negotiation process which the university hopes will negate the adjustment of $425,000 asked for by HEW.

Answering HEW's questions about IU's payroll system, Mulhoolland claimed that the questioned procedures had been found acceptable in a 1976 HEW audit and had been approved by both the U.S. Defense Contract Audit Agency and the Indiana State Board of Accounts, the (hop was performed our over all audit.

The guidelines for the accounting procedure have no material changes since the 1976 audit. Mulhoolland said, and added that IU's accounting systems have not made any material changes since that time.

IU's audit response said that the university's salary distribution system goes one step further in the verification process than the federal government requires.

Both HEW and IU do agree on some areas that need improving. However. Special service centers, such as central stores, need greater control, as do the purchasing and receiving operations, according to the audit report.

IU is also meeting HEW's recommendations for a better review of meal and travel expenses for employees.

In IUPUI-related business, a contract for $113,964 was awarded for the construction of three temporary parking lots for students. The lots, which will be south of New York Street, will provide 542 parking spaces. The lots will be built to offset the loss of spaces due to various construction projects on campus.

Also, the Campus Minister was a contract for $1.6 million for the construction of a fourth and fifth floor on one wing of the Medical Science Building.

Registration figure over 20,000

by Susan J. Fenn

Approximately 18,500 enrollees braved long lines of registration in order to attend classes today on the state's third largest university campus.

The total is expected to climb above 30,000 after the professional division and late registrations, surmises the office of the Registrar. Of that total, more than 11,000 students reserved courses during advanced registration periods in April and July.

And, according to Neil Lantz, director of administrative affairs, over 6,500 persons were expected to enroll during walk-in registration, which ended Monday at 7 pm.

During registration, the offices of the Registrar and Registrars employed nearly 500 additional workers to assist in the process. Other divisions such as student services, financial aids and parking services also enlisted the help of at least 30 temporary workers.

More than 30 new courses were added to the fall program, including 26 new Weekend College courses and 25 Learn and Shop classes. And undergraduate students discovered that they had to pay $2 more per credit hour.

Looking ahead, students are reminded by the Office of the Registrar that Drop/Add begins Thursday, August 29, and ends on Tuesday, August 31. Late registration, the last chance to enroll in IUPUI fall classes, occurs on Friday, August 31.

Knight's behavior criticized

by Jeni Steele

"Coach Bobby Knight's profane language and the caustic, racial slurs he has publicly thrown at the Puerto Ricans are an embarrassment to Indiana University and a cause of serious concern to myself," said IU Student Body President Chris Gambill at the August IJU Board of Trustees meeting.

According to Gambill, the reaction of the university to Knight's behavior at the Pan American Games in Puerto Rico, where he shoved a policeman and was jailed briefly, has been to "support him 100 percent and express no reservations." Calling for the Trustees to set "parameters" on the basketball coach's behavior, Gambill said, "We're well aware of the demands he places on players and fans. He should display the same integrity of the court." However, the Trustees told Gambill that the issue would be better handled in an "administrative area," and that the Trustees meeting was not the "proper place." Gambill disagreed, saying, "It's come to a point where the only people in a position to draw the lines on Knight's behavior are the Trustees."

And in rebuttal to Trustee Joseph Black's claim that there are "other proper channels" for such a matter, Gambill said, "Evidently one of those channels has a brush pile in it." Gambill said that he has always been an adamant supporter of Knight's coaching philosophy and regretted having to bring the issue up.

"Coach Knight has been very successful and held very high standards, but we hear what you're saying," Trustee Charles S. Black told Gambill.

"I would welcome assistance of that type," said Richard B. Stoner, chairman of the Student Affairs Subcommittee. However, Trustee Joseph M. Black pointed out that he is an elected trustee and represents not only students, but also faculty, alumni andfaculty.

The Trustee called for the Student Trustee to "actively represent the interests of students" and for the Board of Trustees to inform student body president of "issues up for consideration."

Regarding the recent Faculty Council decision to support one eighth summer session rather than two six-week sessions, Brinkman complained to the Trustees that students were not consulted and that he "hadn't heard anything about it." He told the Trustees that the proposal was "greened and slid right through" and that it was "full of self-interest."

IU is a commuter campus with many working students who need the two summer sessions to graduate as quickly as possible, Brinkman maintained.

Several of the Trustees attending the meeting speculated that such a decision could not be reversed without a vote of the full Board.

SA bill presented to Trustees

by Jeni Steele

A controversial bill designed to increase communication between the Indiana University Board of Trustees and IU student leaders met with favorable response at the August IJU Trustee retreat-meeting in Nashville, Indiana.

The bill sponsored by the IJU Student Government Assembly, has a two-fold purpose, according to Student Body President Frank Brinkman. The Trustees will be "tackling difficult and complex problems in the future," said Brinkman, and students who are involved with the Board by gathering information, giving viable student input into the process.

"I would welcome assistance of that type," said Richard B. Stoner, chairman of the Student Affairs Subcommittee. However, Trustee Joseph M. Black pointed out that he is an elected trustee and represents not only students, but also faculty, alumni and students.

The bill calls for the Student Trustee to "actively represent the interests of students" and for the Board of Trustees to inform student body president of "issues up for consideration."

The students consider Beckley's comments as "reckless and gross misstatements tantamount to fraud." An Aes-emby spoke-onesman declared that the students realize that the IMA faculty, staff, and administration have a high opinion of them-seves, but for Beckley to label them as "pure" is a monumental exaggeration.

Furthermore, according to the spokesman, Emley and his Aes-emby learned from an "impeccable" source that their opponents could not be called "representative" or have been chosen in a "democratic manner" because women, who comprise over 10% of the faculty/staff workforce, had been "excluded from the team."
This gave rise to the student outcry of "sex discrimination." But, the students may have mistaken selfish motives under the guise of their noble intentions. According to an undentified Aes-emby player, the students were really more upset by the news that Carol Dillow, School of Physical Education secretary, might not play.
Despite the fact that she was a mem-er of the opposing team, the students voted Dillow their own Most Valuable Player after the last game.

Contrary to Beckley's assertions that the "true make-up of the faculty/staff team would only be revealed just prior to game time," the Sagamore has uncovered a roster sheet which indicates that women have been included in the squad: Dillow and Natalie Trusnick are listed as players, along with Vensel, Bunnell, Kellum, Beckley, Neil Lantz, Dr.
Edward C. Moore, Michael Nay,
Rodney Shepard, Bob Martin, Dave Jaynes, John Hazer, Joe Deems, and John Perkins. Nevertheless, the accusations of "sex discrimination" may still have a kernel of truth in them. For Dillow in an exclusive bug interview disclosed that she and Trusnick have been relegated to the outfield and "won't be taking any turns at bat—at least I don't think so."

If the faculty/staffers are "intentionally wantonly, and willfully precluding Dillow, Trusnick, and other female players from active and full participation," says student coach Emley, "the students will call for an investigation into this violation of constitutional rights." In addition the Aes-emby coach declared that his team could no longer participate in the furthersure of such an illegal act and threatened a student boycott of the game.

Our View

Merchants of greed

Everybody talks about it, but nobody does anything about it. We're not referring to the weather, but rather the economy, which, like a thunderstorm on a sunny afternoon, grows darker and darker.

"Experts" the world over have offered a deluge of reasons for our present state of affairs, and although they may have good intentions, they have failed miserably in discovering the real source of our problems.

It seems to us that we need only look at the marketplace for the real reason behind today's runaway inflation. First, there's the case of the light beer, which although it is "less," somehow costs more.

And then there are the oil companies, who tell us that it's expensive to find the new energy sources that we need in an effort to justify their astronomical profits. We think that by this time the American public has caught on to this scam, and no amount of advertising dollars is going to convince anyone that they deserve our trust.

Last is the situation at the supermarket, which at this time has even the President riled.

IUPUI lost one of its best liked instructors and most unique individuals last week.

John Riteris, an instructor at IUPUI since 1967 and head of the Department of Philosophy for the past two years, died last Friday.

Only 43 years old at the time of his death, Riteris had the distinction of being the longest-living kidney transplant patient and the only one to survive delicate coronary by-pass surgery.

Riteris was born in Latvia and came to the United States in 1960, moving to Milwaukee and earning a degree from Marquette University. In 1969, he underwent surgery and received a kidney from his brother Andrew, whom Riteris credited with saving his life.

Despite insurmountable odds, Riteris survived dangerous surgery in 1974 for a heart condition.

As an instructor, Riteris was known for being demanding, yet fair, to his students. He was good enough in his field to be considered IUPUI's logician.

IUPUI may find an instructor of his calibre, but never one of his stature.
Dear Phone Company:

Just thought I would write you this little note to tell you about a recent experience. I moved a couple of weeks ago (yes, you have my new address) and in preparing for that move I called my service representative to change my phone, billing, number, etc. to my new home. That is when the problem began.

My service representative suggested I visit a local Phone Store Center Store, those plush dens of exotic colors and expensive toys. My trip to the Phone Store on a Saturday afternoon, however, was not the high-pressure sales encounter I had expected. The girl who helped me offered no heavy sales pitch to buy the Mickey Mouse phone, or a unit that reminds you to brush your teeth. She didn't try to sell any of the phone company's exotic services, like call waiting, call forwarding or the girl who helped me offered no heavy sales pitch to buy the Mickey Mouse phone, or a unit that reminds you to brush your teeth. She didn't try to sell any of the phone company's exotic services, like call waiting, call forwarding or

First thing Tuesday morning I called the repair number provided by the Phone Store people. The lady at the other end of the phone was quite nice, but she had never heard of my order. I then gave her the magic code number provided by the phone store in case of mix up.

"That's a very nice number," she said, "but we still don't have your order. Why don't you call the Phone Store and see if you can straighten it out."

Have you ever tried to call one of Indiana Bell's Phone Centers? Well, you can't. Phone Centers do not have telephones handy.

Another call to my service rep, the lady responsible for this whole mess, seemed to get things rolling again. She made me repeat the entire order for her.

"They like to work with people face-to-face," she explained.

I then asked her if the information she had taken from me couldn't have been done the first time I called. She mumbled something about another call on the line.

To make this epic tale a little shorter I will tell you the ending. The phone did not get turned on by 5 pm Tuesday, as promised by the service rep. Another call to the service number revealed they did indeed have my order this time and when pushed, the lady at the number promised the phone would be operational sometime after 8 pm Tuesday.

"Have we ever lied to you before?" she asked me. I suggested she didn't want to hear my answer.

Sometimes between 8 and 9 am Wednesday morning the phones came to life.

The strange part of this story, however, is why Phone Stores exist at all. Through millions of dollars of advertising the phone company encourages us to "let your fingers do the walking through the Yellow Pages." Not all the piggies go to market

by Jozi Steele

This little piggy may have gone to market but Miss Piggy—along with Kermit, Rowlf, Dr. Teeth, Fozzie and the whole gang—is off to Hollywood. A nursery rhyme gone wrong? Hope, it’s the Muppet crew carrying their way through a Muppet musical, and the resulting soundtrack might not make musical history, but it could very well let you leave some of your history behind.

These little Muppets can be disarmingly sophisticated and even big kids will chuckle as Kermit the Frog, and Rowlf the Dog, croon out a torchy history behind Kermit, the Dog, croon out a torchy evolution. "There’s no solution; it’s part of the world’s oldest problem. "Anyway, “the nights are too long to do with out ‘em.” Conclude Kermit and Rowlf to the world’s oldest problem: “There’s no solution; it’s part of evolution.”

If you remain unconvinced that Muppet-fun and Muppet-music aren’t somehow deserving kid, herd him off to see the Muppets and present him with a copy of the soundtrack. Of course, you might be your favorite kid.

'Egg' called Wings' best

By Bob Higgins

Since the break-up of the Beatles nine years ago, each member—John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr—has released various solo albums. All four have gone through various trials and tribulations with these LPs, trying to get a fresh start on their solo careers.

None of the other three have had the phenomenal success that McCartney has had. He has used his outstanding talents as a singer, songwriter, musician and producer since his 1970 debut LP McCartney, and now, the pilot of Wings, this ex-Beatle has released his 10th album—and that's best yet.

Back to the Egg, Wings' latest, is the most promising material the band has put forth since Venus and Mars. Ironically enough, this is also the first LP Wings has released under the Columbia label following the multi-million-dollar contract with CBS McCartney signed last year. A much better contract and a much better album—wouldn’t ask for more?

Egg comes to us in two ways: Over easy and sunny-side up. Similar to Heart's Dog and Butterfly album in this division, the sunny-side is easily differentiated from the rock.

One of the tunes that Wings fans will enjoy hearing is "Getting Closer." Released as a single, the song has McCartney talking with a samllander—but it's not as wild as it sounds. Give the song a listen, because McCartney has a reason for everything he does, and this is no exception.

Some of the better cuts on the album are: "We're Open Tonight," a cut that should be well on its way up the charts; "Spin It On;" "Again and Again;" and "Old Siam Sir," in which McCartney's vocals are reminiscent of "Oh Darling" on the Beatles' Abbey Road album.

To make the album even better, Paul has some friends (Pete Townshend, Kenny Jones and David Gilmour, to name a few) join him on "Rachael Theme." Maybe what makes this album a champion over Wings' past efforts are the additions of drummer Steve Holly (replacing Joe English) and guitarist Laurence Juber (replacing Jimmy McCulloch). These personnel changes allow McCartney to devote more of his time to songwriting and less time to worrying about his band.

Children's Museum world's largest

by Susan J. Ferrer

What can you do on a rainy summer afternoon? Discover the world's largest children's museum. It's located at the corner of North and New Jersey streets in downtown Indianapolis.

Entering the impressive brick building, happy sounds of children on field trips score the impressive scene. Children wait in line to board the 1,000-square-foot operating layout of trains furnished log cabin that actually shines, leaves you smiling as child and ecology of Indiana. Visitors are divided into exhibit areas of the geology, botany, zoology and fossil remains. Mudbanks, stalactites and stalagmites.

The main level contains an exhibit of rocks, minerals, leaves, seeds, mounted insects and fossils.

A few brave souls venture into a simulated Indiana limestone cave with its dimly-lit 130-foot long passageway. A map guides the explorers past steam passages, domes, mudbanks, stalactites and stalagmites.

Level three recounts the story of earth—the dawn of life, dinosaurs, and the coming of man. The curious peak into a room where the Children's Museum skeleton is being reconstructed. An unearthed mummy, African masks and bushmen's drums, Eskimo artifacts and Indian tepees fill the onlookers with a deep sense of the past.

A furnished log cabin that actually stood on the north side of Indianapolis during the mid-1800's dominates the fourth level. Across the "road" is an 1800's-style cabinetmaker's shop with 400 ways, planes, boring instruments and other hand-and-foot-powered tools.

The exhibit "Going Places" shows off bicycles and cars from the turn of the century including an early sports car, the racy Cole Roadster.

A minitheater presents "Through the Camera's Eye—Our Changing Community," a multi-image sound and slide presentation of a changing Indianapolis.

Arriving at level five, anxious youngsters wait in line to board the 1917 Broad Ripple Carousel. Authentic hand-carved wooden animals, booming music and a myriad of lights beckon the child in all of us to the carousel spin round and round.

And then there's the overwhelming 1,000-square-foot operating layout of trains. The object of this Christmas fantasy that some of us will harbor.

The Children's Museum, rain or shine, leaves you smiling as children memories come rushing back and you realize it's never too late for simple pleasures.
Pre-teen mothers ‘almost common’—physician

by Shirley A. Coons

"Indianapolis made headlines around the world in June, and it was bad news," says Helen McCalment, director of the Indianapolis Organization of Planned Parenthood. She calls the report of a ten-year-old Indiana University Hospital abortion patient a "horror story" that points out the need for early sex education.

The multiple birth, which was said to be the first to a mother that young in this area, is under investigation to determine possible sexual abuse. However, 10-year-old girls have given birth at Wishard Memorial Hospital in recent years, and 11-year-old mothers are almost common," according to Dr. Robert A. Munsie, staff physician at IU Hospital and professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the Indiana University School of Medicine.

"When a child can get pregnant at the age of nine, as this girl did, who can say that we don't need to educate children about sex. Anyone who feels that way must have blinders on," comments McCalment.

The U.S. birthrate for adult women is declining, yet one out of five newborns today is a teenager. 30,000 per year are below the age of 14. The rights of teenagers to obtain birth control information and, in some cases, contraceptives, are often sacrificed by antiquated laws and parental apathy or fear.

On the other hand, abortions for teenagers may be somewhat easier to obtain. According to statistics over half of the teenage pregnancies are carried to term but 300,000 end in abortion. The law governing service to minors is subject to state interpretation because Federal guidelines are absent, according to McCalment.

The law governing service to minors either must have blindness or fear, according to McCalment. "For that reason, the law which was written in Roosevelt's days is out of date. The state can do interesting things to it. For example, it is interpreted to mean a teenage girl who is married must have her husband's consent. If she has had several children or abortions, she is still not considered emancipated according to the statute, I consider any girl who is in danger of becoming pregnant as emancipated."

"The teenagers that we see have been taking risks for months before they come to a Planned Parenthood Clinic. Often their first introduction to the need for contraception is one of our school programs. They have been flirting with disaster for months already. These are not promiscuous teenagers, either. For the most part they are only mothers." Only one percent of the teenagers who seek information, counseling, or contraception from Planned Parenthood are not already sexually active.

"Women aren't starting kids out, as their parents fear. They are lucky to get here before they get pregnant. Parents are not comfortable with the subject of teenage sexuality. They would rather have the decisions regarding it legislated for them. Unfortunately, politicians listen to the loudest voice. Parents who can't talk to their kids don't get out and march either. They lose to the special interest groups," she says.

An abortion is easily obtainable for the pregnant teenager. Doctors in two Indianapolis abortion clinics say that their only prerequisite for service to minors is the presence of a responsible adult. One doctor said, "It is an arbitrary decision, to treat a minor, that the doctor can make at his or her discretion." It is not uncommon for abortions to be performed on girls under the age of 15. The youngest were 11 years of age.

"I doubt if anyone could have gotten information about birth control to that ten year old," concludes McCalment. "No parent wants to face the possibility that their nine-year-old daughter could be ovulating. We seem to still have a Puritan streak that lets us sweep the situation under the rug. The answer is not in handing out contraceptives or abortions. Girls are still getting pregnant in spite of the existing programs."

IUPUI baseball becomes varsity sport

by Ann Miller

With school now in full swing, IUPUI intercollegiate teams are gearing up for their approaching seasons. With varsity teams seeking players, IUPUI Athletic Coordinator Dr. Robert Bunnell reminds prospective athletes that they must meet all NAIA eligibility requirements; for example, the athlete must be enrolled as a full-time student for the fall semester.

The tennis Metro will compete in several matches over the next few weeks with an eye on the upcoming NAIA District 31 Tournament in late September. Coach Willard Mays hopes that an IUPUI invitational tourney—held in the magnificent new Indianapolis Sports Center—will be arranged before the NAIA tourney.

Tennis practices will start almost immediately, so those men and women interested in playing intercollegiate tennis should contact Mays at 633-7508 (days) or 786-9804 (evenings) as soon as possible. Tryouts for the women’s volleyball team are slated for this Friday, August 31, at 3 pm in the School of Physical Education gym, 1010 W. 64th St. Those intending to try out for the squad should call Coach Marilyn Reinhardt at 264-3744 (days) or Mrs. Reinhardt can also be reached at 786-9804 (evenings).

Friday, is also the day for a team meeting of the new varsity baseball squad. Men interested in joining the team are to meet with Coach Bunnell at 8 pm at the School of Physical Education. Anxious to get started on their initial year of intercollegiate competition, the baseball Metro start practice on Monday, August 27, at 4 pm at Arsenal Park (48th St. and Indiana Ave.). For more information call Dr. Bunnell at 264-3728 (days) or 251-4764 (evenings).

Dr. Bunnell is also issuing an urgent call for golfers to help rescue the struggling IUPUI golf team, which was inactive this spring because of low turnout. Interested golfers should contact him at the above numbers as soon as possible. Bunnell said new men’s intercollegiate basketball coach Mel Garland will hold tryouts for aspiring varsity notters beginning on Monday, Sept. 10, at 8 pm in the School of Physical Education gym. Prospective basketball players may contact Garland at 264-3728.

The women’s basketball squad won’t start preparations for their season until sometime in October, but female students interested in trying out for the team are asked to call Mrs. Kathy Tucker at 264-9775 as soon as possible.

Those interested in trying out for the women’s softball team next spring may put the wheels in motion by calling Dea. Nick Kellum at 264-3764.

We Are Ready, Jeff!

The Student Team for the annual Student vs. Faculty/Staff softball game is ready to go. We’ve got it together: we’re psyched up and ready to go.

Thursday night, August 23rd at 6pm, the student team is prepared to soundly thrash Jeff Vessley’s Faculty/Staff team. NO mercy will be shown; NO prisoners will be taken.

The student body is invited to come out and watch the carnage, as the students do in the faculty, led by such notables as Drs. Irwin, Moore and Kellum, Jeff Vessely and Carol Dillow.

The Game is set for Thursday, August 23rd, at 6pm, right before the Indians’ vs. Redbirds game. Tickets are only $1 for grandstand seats and $2.50 for box seats, and the same ticket admits you to the Indians’ game.

Tickets are on sale in CA 322, the Union Building Lobby and in the University Relations Office.

Looking For An Apartment?
The Sagamore’s 1979 Indianapolis Apartment Guide and Consumer Handbook is currently out on the streets. Look in the bottom tier of the Sagamore racks at or at several Merion Center locations.

In the Handbook you’ll find one of the most complete listings of apartments and mobile homes parks in Indianapolis, banking and utilities information, suggestions on how to shop for an apartment or mobile home, a section on tenant’s rights and responsibilities, and more.

Merchants or anyone who would be interested in obtaining copies of the 1979 Indianapolis Apartment Guide and Consumer Handbook for distribution should call 264-2539.

Pregnant?
There are caring people ready to help.

Inflation is taking a bigger and bigger bite out of your dollar every day and the only way to keep on an even financial keel is to continually bring in additional cash. If you’re the type of person who enjoys dealing with people and would appreciate a liberal 15% commission rate, the Sagamore can use your talents as an advertising salesman.

Got any bright advertising ideas? Why not put them to constructive use and gain valuable selling experience at the same time? Contact our advertising manager, Room 001G, Cavanaugh Hall, 264-3456, for further information.
People have been asking us why it is that we have such a spectacular sale every August. Why is it, they ask, that during the August Sale, you’re going to slash 10% off of your regular Green Sheet Prices on every display model? And why sell all your ’78 and ’79 models at, or below, dealer’s cost?

These questions we can answer with just one word. Tradition. It’s just like the Graham's tradition of saving you money every day. And you don’t spend your time asking questions about that, do you? You spend it taking advantage of bargains like these:
