Economist to speak at IUPUI

Present-day black political movements will be the theme of a series of three lectures at IUPUI by Manning Marable Tuesday, Nov. 18.

Marable is a political economist and social theorist of the Afro-American experience. Currently he serves as a senior research associate of history and political economy at the Africana Studies and Research Center, Cornell University.

Marable also writes a nationally syndicated column primarily for black newspapers and is on the executive committee of the National Black Political Assembly (NBPA). Along with other NBPA members, including the Rev. Ben Chavis, he is currently heading a drive to form a new black political party which, in his words, "would concentrate on mobilizing the black community for political and economic empowerment." The founding convention of this party will be held in Philadelphia, Nov. 21-23.

Marable's schedule and topics are as follows:

10:11 a.m., "The Miami Rebellion: The Political Economy of Race and Class," Cavanaugh Hall, Room 227

2:30-3:45 p.m., "Martin Luther King and the Nonviolent Revolution," Cavanaugh Hall, Room 227

6:15 p.m., "Black Politics for the 1980s: Choices and Confrontations," Lecture Hall, Room 103.

This lecture series is sponsored by the Department of Political Science, the Department of History and the Black Student Union, with the support of the Lectures and Convocations Committee.

Errata

In the Oct. 22 issue of the Sagamore, "Library below 'minimum standards,'" the names of Robert J. Bonner, director of university libraries, and Jeannette Matthews, university archivist, were misspelled. We regret the error.

In the Nov. 5 issue of the Sagamore, "Biomedical ethics award to be given," Jo Ellen Meyers Sharp was incorrectly reported as a former student of Prof. John Ritteria. A graduate of IUPUI, she was a former friend of the late professor of philosophy. Also incorrectly identified was Ritteria's kidney donor. Riteria received his kidney from his twin brother Andrew. Eric is his son.

Finally, the Sagamore regrets misspelling with some regularity the name of Dr. Glenn W. Irwin, Jr., vice president, Indiana University (Indiana-Police).
'Womankind' editor IUPUI instructor

by Dana Daugherty

"If we had known all the pros and cons beforehand, we probably wouldn't have started Womankind," said Judith LaFoureat, editor of the totally woman-operated newspaper. LaFoureat, a part-time IUPUI faculty member, was taking a Journalism course at Free University when she seriously considered starting Womankind.

"The first day of class," she said, "the instructor asked everyone what his or her class project was. When I told him about a paper by women for women, the class was very supportive."

LaFoureat continued, "I asked Mary Osborn, now Womankind associate editor, if she would do a newspaper with me. She agreed, and we operated from her kitchen. With $100 and very little equipment, we began our first issue. Womankind first appeared July 1977 just before the International Women's Year conference in Indianapolis. LaFoureat and Osborn distributed copies.

To learn about bulk mailing rates, permits, taxes and other publication matters, they attended a small business administration meeting. "The rest, we learned by experience," said Osborn. "We got advertisers by making cold calls, and sometimes those weren't pleasant. One man saw the title, grabbed the paper and shook it in my face."

LaFoureat and Osborn faced other oppositions to Womankind. "For a while, our subscribers weren't receiving their issues," Osborn said. "We felt that we were being 'trashed.' We kept complaining, and eventually conditions improved."

Another opposition, according to LaFoureat, has been press coverage. Despite press releases, no major Indianapolis newspaper has run a story about Womankind. "It's disappointing," she remarked, "because we're trying to get more credibility in our hometown."

However, Womankind's popularity is spreading. Distributors are now in Cincinnati and California. In August, the Port Wayne Gazette ran a two column article about the paper, and recently, after "Picking up" the paper and "dropping" it, Koch News is distributing it again.

Womankind is an independent newspaper supported by subscriptions and advertising. The "supportive subscriptions offset charity expenses to the Woman's Prison," explained the editor.

LaFoureat added, "We always call to find out how many women are at the prison and send copies. I think each should get her own copy. It reflects our personal feeling."

All articles and photographs are done by the readers. LaFoureat and Osborn manage the operation. "We owe it to the writers, especially those who have been with us from the start, to get them before the public," said LaFoureat.

She continued, "Eventually, we would like to become a full-time business and pay salary to ourselves and our writers."

Womankind, a 12-page bimonthly publication, sells for 76 cents a copy and is sold at most B. Dalton, Bookland and Gallery bookstores. It is also available in the Volunteer Gift Shop at Wishard Hospital, the IU Medical School Bookstore and the University Hospital Gift Shop.

Mel Garland Interview
by Ann Miller

Q. From my observations at practice this year, the team seems much farther along than they ever have been, especially this early.

A. I think we are much farther along than last year. Last year we had a difficult preseason, because it was a learning experience for everybody. Everything then was new to the players, and I felt that maybe, for the first half of the season, each player was not only feeling out the other players on the squad and learning their game, but he was trying to learn his own game as well.

You have to know your own skills and abilities, know the skills and abilities of the people you play with, and fit the two together. Last year at this time we were basically a one offense-one defense type of team. Right now, this year, we are in a position where we can run two or three different offenses and at least two or three different defenses.

Q. Everyone is back, with the exception of Lawrence Gross, and you have a number of new faces...

A. Yes, we have a lot of veterans back, and three or four of them are seniors. The ones who are having a little more difficulty now are the new kids, and they are picking things up very well.

Q. Last season, although it was a learning experience for all concerned, the 10-21 record wasn't totally indicative of the way you were playing on the whole. During the last part of the season, you gave most of your opponents a real experience for all concerned, the 10-21 record different defenses.

A. Yes, we have a lot of veterans back, and three or four of them are seniors. The ones who had been down three or four points, and when you get yourself in that kind of situation late in the game, you need to make some changes in order to try and get yourself back on top.

We had a lot of difficulty doing the things that we needed to do to get ourselves in the position where we could win. We hadn't learned some of the things we should have, and I think also we hadn't developed enough confidence in ourselves.

I don't think that confidence came until the very end of the season. We finally reached a point where we felt, in a close game situation, that we could win it.

Q. Do you think 'lack of confidence' will be a problem this year?

A. Ending last year by winning three games in a row, we are starting out in a pretty good frame of mind. I think we felt at the time that we were playing our best ball. Incidentally, we are not looking back any farther than those last three games!

Q. Okay, then, let's look at this year. You mentioned that you have been working on some new things. What are you going to be doing, offensively and defensively? Will you continue to be primarily man-to-man?

A. Well, it's about half and half anymore. We finished the season out last year by playing a lot of match-up zone defense. The players and myself both felt that it was our best defense. Coming into this year we want to play as much man-to-man as possible, but I really feel that at the present time the strong zone defense in the end is going to be our match-up zone.

Offensively, we're pretty much set on a passing game. I think we do some things a little differently right now than most of our opponents. One thing I see as different from a year ago is we are a little more team-oriented; we're getting a lot of good ball movement, and we're quicker.

Ron Angeline, soph., 6'8", 165 lbs.
Angeline played high school basketball for Mel Garland at Evansville Harrison. As a freshman guard last season, he averaged double figures. "But I have a tremendous amount of ability," Garland states, "and I know he will get the job done." A business management major, he is married and the father of a two-year-old girl.

Scott Boles, frosh., 6'5", 195 lbs.
A forward, Boles is a product of Lapel High School, where he compiled a 13.5 ppg average as a senior. He is studying business management, "Scott may be the best defensive player among our newcomers. He is a good shooter, and picks up things very well."

Kevin Braun, soph., 6'8", 180 lbs.
Braun came on strong at the end of last season, working his way into the starting lineup at forward. Out of South Spencer High school, he is majoring in education. Braun is a newlwyed, and his wife Patti is also an IUPUI student. "He is a real aggressive player," comments Coach Garland. "He has good 'ball sense', good timing, and he can get up in the air pretty well for a player his size."

Reggie Butler, junior, 6'9", 174 lbs.
His Metro teammates have chosen Butler as their honorary captain for the 1990-91 season. Last campaigiden he was the Metro's second-leading scorer and rebounder. A sociology major from Chicago, the Metro's center holds the record for the most points scored in a single game—38 against Franklin College last Dec. 13.
"Coach Garland says Butler has made some improvement, especially in his inside game around the basket. Also, although he hasn't gained any weight, he is a little bit stronger and more efficient than last year."

Stan Ferguson, junior, 6'9", 185 lbs.
Ferguson became eligible at mid-semester last year and saw action as both a pivotman and as a forward. Originally from Trenton, N.J., he first played at IUPUI in 1977-78.
This physical education major is never at a loss for words and is a real spirit booster on the team, according to team mates.
"Stan has made a 100 percent improvement over last year," comments the Metro's coach.

Heywood Garrett, senior, 6'4", 170 lbs.
Garrett may be the best defensive player on the team. He also provides some exciting moments offensively, tipping in a last-second shot against Franklin in March to end a long losing streak. A Metro's forward, he is aiming for a degree in industrial relations and management.
"The strongest part of Heywood's game is his defense and his play on the boards. I feel that I can depend on Heywood, and you play the players that you have confidence in, especially in tight situations," comments Garland.

John Herr, soph., 6'2", 180 lbs.
Heywood led the Metro's in both scoring and rebounding last season. He also converted a team high three-point percentage. A Kokomo native, Herr played at Daytona Beach Junior College before coming to IUPUI to play forward. He is majoring in electrical engineering.
"Mike is a hard-nosed ballplayer who, although small, gets underneath and fights and gets the job done," says Garland. "He is also a good outside shooter. One thing Mike has worked on and needs to work on—as all of our players need to work on—is his defense."

Larry Joplin, junior, 6'9", 215 lbs.
Joplin is 27 years of age and is a transfer from Elgin Junior College. A native of Forest City, Ark., he entered Elgin after a stint in the Navy. A physical education student, Joplin is married and father of two sons.
Says Garland, "Larry is just now getting into really good shape; he has improved tremendously in the last two weeks. Being an older player, he brings a lot of maturity into our program."
Competitors to offer challenges

by Ann Miller

With quite a few teams, including the IUPUI Metros, returning three, four and even five starters, NAIA District 21 promises to be more competitive than ever. Most of the opponents on this year’s schedule should match-up fairly well with the IUPUI squad, according to Mel Garland, coach of the Metros. However, the 1980-81 slate is not without its real challenges.

The Metros play a home series with defending champ Franklin, ranked 18th nationally in one preseason poll. Franklin lost only one starter; All-American Gordy Cleamons is back.

In addition to the Grizzlies, Garland’s cagers will vie against two other schools that hold dual membership in the NAIA and NCAA Division II—Wright State and Chicago-Circle. Circle boasts another small-college All-American in Tom Goodalis and is coached by Tom Meyer, son of Ray Meyer of DePaul fame.

Wright State, a powerhouse last time around, figures to be just as formidable. The Dayton squad is rated second nationally in NAIA preseason charts.

In tournament action at Cedarville, the Metros may run up against Eric Mounts again. Mounts, who scored more than 40 points against the IUPUIers last year, is consensus NAIA All-American. Two weeks following Cedarville, the Metros have drawn traditionally strong Gardener-Webb as a first-round opponent in a tournament in Nashville.

First-timers on the schedule include Goshen, Heidelberg and crosstown rival Marian, who ended up ninth in the NAIA in team defense last year. This year’s slate has been trimmed to 26 games, down five from last year’s total. For the first time ever, there’s a balance between home and away games. Out of 20 single-game dates, 12 will be played in either Market Square Arena or Indiana Central’s Nicoson Hall.

The other eight contests, as well as three tournaments, will be on opponent courts. Tournaments include Cedarville Nov. 21-22, Carson-Newman (Nashville) Dec. 6-6 and Tri-States annual holiday bash Dec. 29-30.

The Pacer-Metros doubleheader line-up is just short of sensational, according to Metros boosters. With the exception of Golden State, every Pacer opponent in the dual match-ups was in the playoffs last year. Both NBA finalists, Los Angeles and Boston, will be part of the Pacer-Metros package.

Increasing enrollments cause business faculty shortages

While most university administrators are worrying about declining college enrollments over the next decade, business school deans are concerned about just the opposite—increasing enrollments in the face of a growing shortage of faculty.

According to Schuyler F. Otteson, dean of the IU School of Business, the new surge of students enrolling in business schools has created a shortage of qualified faculty members that shows signs of becoming worse.

Otteson is also president of the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, the national accrediting body for business schools.

"Nationally, we're graduating 200 less young B.B.A.'s (doctors of business administration) and Ph.D.'s in business than we did five years ago," Otteson told a group of business people from the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, "and the pool from which faculty members enter their careers with about $3,000 less salary than they would earn in the business world, and face a $15,000 to $40,000 difference after 15 years.

It is hard to attract and retain faculty in the face of such a difference, he said.

Nationally, enrollments in the business schools have climbed from 60,000 undergraduates to more than 160,000 in the past 15 years, according to the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business president. Graduate enrollments have gone from 10,000 to close to 50,000 in the same period.

Otteson suggested that professional business people could help meet enrollment growth by taking temporary lecturerships in the business schools. At the same time, he said, business professors could update their knowledge by serving a few months in private business.

He added that it is becoming difficult for the universities to keep up with many of the changes taking place in business today.

"In many ways, the leading business firms are far ahead of us when it comes to being on the cutting edge of knowledge about certain aspects of business," he said, citing trade with the Chinese and computerized methods and advanced modeling techniques as examples.

For their part, business schools could serve as "knowledge brokers" for the business community, bringing together business people and academic expertise from all departments of the university.

Otteson has spoken before several meetings of business school deans across the nation in the past month delivering a similar message.

Listing restrictive funding and growing external controls that impede change as two other problems facing the business schools, Otteson said that the alternatives are either lower quality education or putting more rigorous cops on enrollments.

I always felt that the best part of our game last year was our running game, but I think, basically, we'll be the same type of offensive ballclub that we were last year—we'll just have more material to work with.

Q. Where do you need the most improvement?
A. I feel the biggest improvement needs to come in our defense. When we play well defensively, we play well offensively—never vice versa. We've been working very hard on this. I think we are going to be a bit more versatile this year. Our familiarity with the match-up zone is going to help us, and we will have a few more defenses to use as well.

Q. Then as I see it, you have a lot of players who do a lot of different things. Each player may not be able to do everything, but he will be able to do a certain number of things to contribute. Do you intend to vary your line-up, alternating the players depending on the opponent or the situation?
A. Yes, I think so. We will have different skills in different areas, and we will have to take advantage of this. One of the keys to our success this year will be each individual on the squad knowing his role and realizing what he can and can't do when it comes to playing.

I don't see any one player standing out head and shoulders above the rest as far as his role or responsibility in the offense. We have people at all positions that I feel are capable of scoring and contributing in a lot of ways.

So I think that the players are playing well together, and I feel that they are 'together—at this point. That's what we are striving for in both our offense and our defense—a team game. We have to have a team effort from everybody.

Q. Is team spirit good?
A. Yes, and I don't think we have any selfish players. We don't have anyone who feels that he is going to 'carry the load' for the team. In my opinion, we just don't have that kind of talent on the team anyway.

Q. One of the major shortcomings of last year's team was the inability to keep a handle on the ball, especially at critical points in the game.
A. Yes, especially during the losing streak last year, I felt our biggest problem was that some of the players on the squad didn't know the material as well as they should have, and they made mistakes in crucial situations. Sometimes, it was an offensive or defensive mistake that made the difference in a ballgame.

This especially hurt us late in the game. I saw it happen not with one player, but with several. It was a basic problem with the entire squad.

Q. But you expect improvement in this area. Do you think they will be more consistent?
A. Oh, yes, they will be more consistent, and consistency, I think, is the key to success as far as any team goes.

Q. Back to personnel. It seems, that with a team this large, depth will be one of your strong points. Where will depth's greatest impact be?
A. Last year I felt I had more flexibility with the inside people. This year I'll probably have more flexibility with the guards. I look for Kim King, Ronny Angevine, Randy Wilkee and Joe Leonard to split the playing time at guard.

As far as center goes, hopefully some of our new players will help fill this position. I look for Larry Joplin and Stan Ferguson to back up Reggie Butler. The forwards are fairly well established. I don't see much of a change at the present time. However, a lot depends on how some of our younger players in this position come along.

Q. And Dave Weatherford is back as your graduate assistant?
A. Yes, he's back, and this year he's been given a little more responsibility, because he's learned a lot, too, especially learned a bit more about the players.

Q. What about other improvements in the program?
A. I think we've made some strides in a number of areas. One of the definite improvements in the program is Jay Bradley, our new athletic trainer for the school. Now, when we need attention for players with injuries, we've got it.

It's going to make a big difference—to me this is one of the most important improvements. Jay has a number of student trainers helping us—Cliff Kelly and Terry York will be travelling with the team. Also this year we have a student manager, Chris Hadley, and he is really helping us out.

Our booster club, under Mike Carroll, has definitely improved over the last year or so. Our season ticket sales are going better this year than they have ever before.

Q. That's good. You still need to put a lot of people in the stands. A winning season will do a lot of help.
A. I don't think they're going to 'tear the doors down,' whether we win or lose this year, but I'm sure that if people will come out and watch us play, they will be pleasantly surprised with what they see in the squad.

I think once they do come out and see us play, they'll come back no matter what the situation is, win or lose. I really feel like we've got a fine group of young men here that play the game the way people like to see it played. We feel that we have a team, and we think that if we can just get some people out to watch us play, those people will be, like I said, pleasantly surprised.

Q. So you think that there will be quite a difference this year, including your final record at the end of the season?
A. We know we can play with a lot of people, and we know we are capable of beating a lot of opponents this year. All we have to do is go out and do it!

If we play up to our capabilities and do our best, we can improve on our record of last season. I'll be honest with you—I'm looking for the first winning season IUPUI has ever had.

Is it true that Metro-Health Plan is opening another medical office at 21st & Franklin?

Yes! In early 1981, Metro-Health Plan will open a third location to serve its members. The newest office will be at 21st and Franklin Road in the Braeburn Village Shopping Center. This office is convenient to the Shadeland and Post Road exits of I-70 East and I-465. This latest addition will allow MHP to serve an additional 12,000 members. Located in the heart of the rapidly expanding east-central edge of Marion County, it is less than five minutes drive time to Fort Harrison, Western Electric, Chrysler, Ford and many other large Indianapolis employers. It is midway between Castleton and Washington Square and thus in the middle of the eastside traffic flow. The Shopping Center location will allow easy access, ample parking for MHP members and plenty of room for further growth.

The Architect for the project is Antone Kohler, a nationally recognized specialist in HMO design. He currently works for Kaiser (the nation’s largest HMO) designing medical offices in Cleveland, Ohio, Hawaii and Northern California. The Franklin Road offices will have twenty-four exam rooms as well as Lab, X-Ray, Optometry Department and Pharmacy.

The goal of MHP is to begin using the Franklin Road offices by January 1, 1981; the entire project should be completed by March 1, 1981.
