Nursing-liberal arts hold prep sessions

The IU School of Nursing will hold an informal administrative meeting with the IU School of Liberal Arts administrative team. All currently enrolled students in the School of Nursing are eligible to attend. The extra-curricular faculty/student-administrator meetings are dubbed “prep sessions” by the School of Nursing’s department of student services. The “prep sessions” are organized within the department to facilitate the preparation of the nursing student to the nursing curriculum. The Nursing/Liberal Arts session will take place on Monday March 9 from 4-6 p.m. The participants from the School of Nursing are: Dr. Sharon Alger, Dr. Margret Applegate, and Joyce Martin R.N., M.S.N. The participants from the School of Liberal Arts are: Dr. Edmund Byrne, Dr. Edwin Casebeer, Dr. Barbara Jackson, Dr. Gary Krepa, and Dr. Bryan Vargas.

Why college papers?

What is the purpose of a college newspaper? Is it truth, light and justice, or is it more?

The traditional college paper was developed to inform the student body of extracurricular activities—places to go, organizations and employment, campus activities—places, times and people involved, problems students are having and changes being made on the campus.

The information aspect is important, but is it the only reason for having a campus paper? No, it’s not. A college paper is not only to inform, but also to educate and from which to gain experience.

The college paper is there to educate business, advertising, art, journalism, graphics and photography people. It’s a place to show you what the real world is like out there. And sometimes, it’s not too pretty—but the finished product is.

The traditional college paper was developed to inform the student body of extracurricular activities—places to go, organizations and employment, campus activities—places, times and people involved, problems students are having and changes being made on the campus.

There is a lot to be gained from the student newspaper besides information. But, there is still truth, light and justice. A college newspaper must stand for truth and honesty. If the information can’t be believed, then it won’t be read. Credibility is extremely important.

It has been stated many times that the newspaper must bring light to the multitudes. What this gets down to is to show the reader if he’s being taken advantage of; cheated upon; prejudiced against; or “bruised, used and abused.” It is meant to “cut through the fog and haze to let the sun shine through.”

One other thing a paper should do is to bring justice to the student body. The justice is for the students. It is determined by careful analysis of situations and regulations that are deemed unfair to one or all of the students. The injustices can be caused by organizations, faculty, the school itself or other students.

In summation, a college newspaper has many purposes. They are for the students, whether in knowledge or experience. A newspaper must serve its audience honestly and with their concerns in mind.

Hostage coverage analyzed

by Dana Daugherty

"Coverage of the hostage situation was outstanding overall," said Ken Beckley, director of the IU PUI News Bureau. "The media overcovered some of the families, but as long as the families consent, then the media hasn't intruded into their lives." "Some people locally and nationally, think that the hostages' return received more coverage than the POW's did when they returned. People have short memories. For the television capability of 1973, coverage of the POW's return and the welcome home ceremonies were great. Transmissions via satellite was not possible then; however, the media today is more sophisticated than in the early 1970's."

"This particular situation was special one," Beckley continued. "No event captivated the attention of the Carter Administration and the public as the hostage situation did, and there were certainly economic implications with the oil."

Shirley Quale, chairman of the journalism department, did not think the media "overplayed" the hostage crisis either. "We seemed to be bombarded when actually each television station and newspaper was doing what it is supposed to do. The situation was a year of news in the making, and when the hostages returned, that was news too. The treatment of the hostages, their health, the reception from the American public — it was all news. In comparison, the Kennedy assassination was covered for weeks that led to the same complaints. We were simply exposed to more than one medium."

Quale continued, "The hostage situation allowed the media, particularly television, to experiment. Each reporter was looking for an edge in the event story approach. They were trying to get the audience closer to the individual through a local tie in to the major news event. For us, it was the two Hoosiers involved."

Both Quale and Beckley agreed the most memorable event for the hostage crisis was "the temporary rebirth of patriotism."

Bonner axes posting without permission

by Tim Barnett

Robert J. Bonner, director of libraries at 1UPUI, reports that many individuals are posting signs in the University Library without obtaining permission from the Administrative Assistant.

Bonner states that the posting of signs causes damage to painted surfaces. He asks that students abide by the following policies regarding signs:

- Nothing is to be posted on painted or glass surfaces in public service areas of the building.
- Notices may be posted by members of the university community on the bulletin board on the east wall of the library's main entrance. To post a notice on a bulletin board inside the library, permission must be granted by the Administrative Assistant located in the library in room 135 (264-4447).

Bonner wishes to encourage communications but asks that the existing policy be followed.

Remain In Light
Talking Heads 1980 Sire Records
by David Mattingly

The release of the Talking Heads fourth album Remain In Light has marked their move away from the new wave sector and into the avant-garde area almost unnoticed.

The progression of the Talking Heads is easily apparent upon listening to each album though each LP is in its own way a classic and a must for every "Active listener's" collection.

The Talking Heads are often referred to as philosophers of music and their musical approach is full of an optimistic didacticism that is very thought provoking. Remain In Light is no exception. Undaunted by skepticism within the group itself, David Byrne, the groups protagonist, along with the gifted Brian Eno have pursued their mutual interest in African musical rhythms and combined those rhythms with a kind of Parliament funk. The result was the dense, highly complex structure that characterizes Remain In Light as unique. This is the Heads most powerful and inspiring work to date.

Do not be put off or intimidated by the complex structure because if the listener participates in the music each song can be delightfully deciphered. Remain In Light also keeps in line with the Heads tradition of providing excellent music to dance to. so give it a try.

Cinema

by Bill Widina

Scanners is the latest film from one of Canada's most prolific directors: David Cronenberg. Scanners follows a theme similar to Cronenberg's other films, that of medical science gone wild. Scanners deals with artificially induced telepathy. The people who possess this power are appropriately called Scanners. They are very powerful that their thoughts can kill.

There are only 237 known Scanners in the world, but the number is decreasing daily because someone is systematically killing them.

Con Sec Company, a corporation dealing with international security, is testing Scanners as possible weapons. The testing is stifled when their top scanner is eliminated in a grisly manner: his head actually explodes.

Con Sec finds another scanner to replace the dead one. He is Cameron Vale (Stephen Lachi) and he has the greatest powers of any scanner yet. His job is to discover who is trying to kill the scanners before they eliminate him.

The plot was acceptable but proved ineffective with the average audience. The movie does not flow smoothly because of a sudden stile in the action. Even with its faults, Scanners will make money because Cronenberg has a definite following, and his die-hard fans are sure to patronize the film.

The audience response was that of mixed feelings, but Science Fiction fans are sure to be intrigued by Scanners.
Mark's marvelous munchies
by Mark Ford

It's Tuesday at 8 p.m. and you just finished taking a difficult exam. Your stomach is crying out for food, but you don't know where to eat. What is worse is that you can't make up your mind on what sounds best to your little (or big) tummy.

Not too far from IUPUI at 2621 W. 16th St., just west of Lafayette Road, is the Waffle House Family Restaurant. Once inside you will find a newly decorated restaurant thanks to manager Carl Collins. Collins, a 10 year veteran who started with the Waffle House washing dishes at age 13, is very proud of his record. He claims that business has improved every month since he took over as manager.

Monday through Friday the Waffle House offers a different dinner special from 11 a.m. until 9 p.m. There are 11 waffles to choose from and pancakes served eight delicious ways. The waffles are prepared on the soft side, and served piping hot with heaps of butter. Prices range from 85 cents for an order of pancakes to $2.25 for a complete chicken dinner. The Waffle House is open 24 hours a day seven days a week except Christmas. Happy Eating.
