Danny Simon to teach Continuing Studies workshop

Danny Simon, brother of playwright Neil Simon, and mentor to Woody Allen, will be in Indianapolis on two weekends in October to teach a non-credit workshop. "The Craft of Comedy Writing," for IUPUI Continuing Studies. Mr. Simon has been a writer, head writer, script consultant and director for many of the top shows on television including "The Kraft Music Hall," "The Danny Thomas Show," "The Carol Burnett Show," and "Facts of Life."

Woody Allen has said, "I've learned a few things on my own and modified a few things he taught me, but everything, unequivocally, that I learned about comedy writing, I learned from Danny Simon."

Danny's brother Neil said, "I don't think it's possible for someone to teach anyone else how to write funny — No, wrong. I think perhaps there is ONE person who can, my brother Danny. He taught Woody Allen and he taught me." Neil has based several of the characters in his plays on his brother Danny, including Felix Unger in "The Odd Couple."

Mr. Simon states that in order to benefit most from his class on comedy writing, a person "must have some basic talent and inherent sense of humor and an ability to tell a story." He believes that his workshop has value for aspiring directors, actors and producers.

The workshop will be held October 9-11 and 16-18. Times on Friday evenings are 7-10 p.m.; Saturdays and Sundays are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. The location will be Room 110 of the Nursing Building, 1200 W. Michigan on the IUPUI Campus. The registration deadline is September 18 and the fee is $275. For more information or to enroll, call IUPUI Continuing Studies, 264-4501.

Observations

Congratulations

Sorry folks. No complaining or griping this week. We figured it was about time for some positive reinforcement.

In spite of some early-morning bad weather that threatened to cancel the festivities, the first annual First of Fall Festival was a success. The clouds eventually became sparse, the sun peeked through, and the crowd of one thousand or more spectators and participants seemed to really enjoy themselves.

Many student groups and organizations were on hand to promote their respective affiliations and there was loads of entertainment.

The main attraction had to be Faith Band, as they turned the wandering crowd into one solid audience. It was nice to see the mass of students, faculty, and yes, a few administrators enjoying the music and strolling among all the tables set up by the various student groups.

Other attractions included a banana split eating contest, a magician's presentation, and a mime performance. But enough has been said about what was there. If you were there, you saw it and you probably had a good time. If you weren't there...well, tough. You really missed out on a nice day.

We really think the IUPUI Student Assembly did a fine job in putting the festival together. We noticed SA President Dave Craig and his crew running around, trying to keep everything on schedule and they should be commended for their work. Also, the student groups who took the time to display their material should be commended. Clearly, the university as a whole benefited.

We took the time and space to tell all those involved that they are appreciated and that we hope to see more of the same in months and years to come.

Drop lines by adding days

To the Editor:

There is one thing that really bothers me at the beginning of each semester here at IUPUI, it would have to be all the time I spend waiting in lines. First it's registration, which really does not bother me (I suppose I've gotten used to it over the years). Then comes the time to go to the bookstore where you again get to stand for an hour to spend what little money you have left from the summer.

Just when I thought it was all over with for awhile, I was informed that I needed to go through drop-add (it figures). After my 1:00 class Thursday I journeyed up to the 3rd floor of Cavanaugh to find a line of about a thousand students moving at the rate of approximately 50 feet an hour. What fun, I thought. I mean this line was wrapped around the entire floor! Why does this university try to accommodate so many students in such a short amount of time? Can't they offer drop-add fee payment more than one day?

After waiting for 3 hours in line I finally got through. After paying my fees I decided to go back upstairs to see what the line looked like. It hadn't changed much. The faces were different but the expressions were definitely the same. As much as I hated all that I went through last Thursday, I feel that it was a real learning experience. I learned that I will never go through with it again.

The tunnels

A bright spot on campus? Not literally perhaps, since the IUPUI tunnel system exists under the campus. Originally however it was mostly above ground connecting Long and Coleman Hospitals, the Med School and other buildings with the newly-built Riley Hospital. Faculty, staff and students used the submerged paths frequently, especially at night and in bad weather. Construction of the tunnels aggravated an already poor drainage situation by creating a lake behind Long Hospital. Successive administrators who seemed unable to fill the lake found it named for them by medical students who called it variously Lake Nett, Thompson's Bayou and Roland's Pond.

Traffic seems light in the tunnels these days but they remain in use and are a bright reminder of the ambitious planning which has built our IUPUI community.

First of Fall Festival offered full day of activities

by Chris Brown

A normal year's activities in the past occurred on one day during the first annual First of Fall festival held at IUPUI yesterday.

The Student Assembly put together a day of activities that featured a concert with the Faith Band, a pinball competition, a banana split eating contest, DJ's from WTLC and KISS 99, a roving magician, and street mime. It all started a little late, but the skies cleared up and no one seemed bothered by the delay.

Crowds were on hand for the concert with the Faith Band and the First of Fall festival began. The Faith Band played for two, fifty-minute periods. Most of the songs played were their own with a few standards like "Louie, Louie" and "Twist and Shout".

The crowd was very receptive towards the band. But they didn't dance until the end despite coaxing from the band.

During the band's break, the banana split eating contest was held. The winner was Dave Heffernan, a freshman, who took home the $50 prize. Many thanks should go to Dairy Queen for providing the ice cream.

The roving magician Carl Andrews, also did his act during the interval showing us the art of prestidigitation, and the pinball competition was held with the help of Nightwatch Amusements. The winner was Paul Ragan, with Harold Wagner second, and Bill Miller third.

Following the last half of the Faith Band's concert, KISS 99, with Lee Michaels and Nancy Nester, gave away Sunkist T-shirts and albums featuring Raydio, Mickey Gilley, and Joe Walsh.

WTLC, FM 105, was also present with Ray Cooper broadcasting from the Commons.

The Festival ended with the mime troupe—street mime—from Indianapolis, who performed several routines.

Throughout the day, over a thousand people were present and Student Assembly President, David Craig, said more events will be coming through the year.

Cooperative exhibit opens at Herron

The Herron Gallery, Herron School of Art/IUPUI fall exhibition schedule opens Friday, September 11 with "3 X 3", a series of shows coordinated by the three artists spaces in Indiana: Artlink in Fort Wayne, New Harmony Gallery of Contemporary Art in New Harmony and Herron Gallery in Indianapolis. This innovative effort resulted from discussions the director and artists at the three spaces had about cooperating on a project and about sharing exhibitions. The directors were free to develop exhibition themes of their choosing as long as those themes reflected the nature of works exhibited at each space.

Herron Gallery's contribution to the series, "Quick and Dirty", will be on exhibit September 11 to September 18. The Show includes 31 works by 11 artists, all of whom work with rapid movement. The energetic drawings, pastels, paintings, collages and sculpture are very subjective.

The works, which do not fit into prescribed styles, are for the most part figurative. They share a graphic expression and a narrative intensity unlike works created in Indiana.

Former Herron Gallery Director Carol Adney selected the artists' works. The exhibition, resulting partly from Adney's NEA Critics fellowship in 1979-80, places these artists together in a group show for the first time. Included in the exhibition are works by New

"Quick and Dirty" will open at the New Harmony Gallery of Contemporary Art on September 25 and then will travel to Artlink in mid-October.

The three artists spaces in Indiana emerged from a need in each community to exhibit the most current contemporary visual art, including work by local and regional artists. Artists spaces provide a structure and atmosphere conducive to dialogue and artistic experimentation.

Herron Gallery hours are Monday-Thursday, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Friday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Gallery is located at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets, Indianapolis. Admission is free.

Participants needed

The Oral Health Research Institute is looking for approximately 120 participants for a study to identify factors which are associated with the formation of stains on the teeth (such as coffee, tea, smoking) in both the presence and absence of the use of an antimicrobial mouthwash.

Participants will have their teeth cleaned at no charge and will receive all toothbrushes and toothpaste necessary for home use. The study will last for about 10 months. In the first nine weeks approximately 30 adults will be identified who normally form stains on their teeth and an equal number will be selected who do not form these stains. These 60 participants will proceed to the next phase of the study which will compare stain formation in both the presence and absence of the use of an antimicrobial mouthwash.

Those interested in participating or who wish further information should call ext. 8822 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. and ask for Cathy Drook.

Union Building will host Voluntarism conference

The IUPUI Union Building and a tent on its front lawn will be the site of the first conference on voluntarism for senior high school students and their faculty advisors to be sponsored by Sen. Dan Quayle and the United Way of Indiana all day Saturday (Sept. 12).

Approximately 500 outstanding Hoosier senior high school students are expected to attend.

Two students and one faculty advisor have been invited from each high school in the state to attend the program, keynoted by Sen. Quayle and conducted by voluntarism experts. It will include sessions dealing with leadership and organizational motivational skills. Representatives recommended by local United Way Boards from the various human service organizations in each county will participate as discussion leaders for the workshop segment of the conference.

It is expected that the student representatives will return home to tell their fellow students about voluntarism. They will form a committee within their school that will, in cooperation with local volunteer organizations, develop a volunteer project tailored both to local needs and student interests. Emphasis throughout the program will be placed on the practical experience that can be gained through voluntarism, the importance of active participation in community affairs and the benefits of concerted action in achieving a particular end.

Newsletters describing the more successful programs will be published, and an award recognizing exceptional volunteer service will be presented by Sen. Quayle when an individual school reaches a certain level of achievement. A year-end banquet honoring student volunteers will also be held.

Registration will start at 9 a.m. Saturday in the lobby of the Union Building. The program will start at 10 a.m. with a welcome to the visiting students and their advisors from I.U. President John W. Ryan and Vice President Glenn W. Irwin, Jr., M.D. The program will close at 3:30 p.m. with a reception for the conference representatives given by Sen. Quayle.

Reinhardt appointed to '82 Sports Festival post

by Michael W. Meiring

Marilyn Reinhardt, assistant professor of physical education at IUPUI, was recently appointed by the Indiana Sports Corporation to work on the staff of the National Sports Festival that will be held in Indianapolis July 23-31, 1982.

Reinhardt will have the job of searching out and assigning over 3,000 jobs to volunteers, a task she readily admits is going to be a tough one. "The job needs to be defined before I can seek people," she explains. She also said that many of the sporting events will provide their own officials and that she won't have to provide volunteer help in those areas. She is said to be looking especially for people to be "Sneakers", the mascot for the week-long event, or people to accompany the mascot on its excursions.

Since the university was so involved in the National Sports Festival, she thought she would try to get some sort of job there for the summer. As it turned out, her boss, Dean P. Nicholas Kellum, helped arrange her schedule so she could accept the position she was offered. Her position will exist until the completion of the event next year.

Because of a tight budget, and the fact that she wasn't appointed to her position yet, she didn't spend any time in Philadelphia for the 1981 National Sports Festival. "It probably would have been good for me," she adds.

Reinhardt sees the National Sports Festival as bringing about some national exposure for the city of Indianapolis as well as the IUPUI community. She says it will make people aware of the world-class facilities that are here.

Reinhardt is a 1969 graduate of Howe High School and a 1973 graduate of Normal College, Indianapolis. She received her master's degree in guidance and counseling from Butler University. And she is currently doing her doctoral work at Indiana University in higher education administration.

For more information about the National Sports Festival or to volunteer write: National Sports Festival, Merchants Plaza, 155 W. Washington St., Suite 108, Indianapolis, IN 46204 or call 317-632-1982.

Report shows Hoosier postsecondary education enrollment low

West Lafayette, Ind. — Hoosier high schools and colleges should step up their efforts to direct more students into postsecondary education, according to a Purdue University report.

The study is based on a survey of high school seniors and other data gathered by Purdue's Office of Manpower Studies, Lilly Endowment Inc. funded the study, which was sponsored by the Indiana Conference of Higher Education with the cooperation of the Indiana Department of Public Instruction.

The Indiana population includes a higher percentage of high school graduates than does the population of most other states. But Indiana lags behind the Midwestern and national averages in percentage of citizens who have education beyond high school.

Some 46 percent of Indiana high school graduates get further education. This is about 4 percent lower than the national average and about 2 percent lower than the midwest average, reports Professor J.P. Lisack, director of the Office of Manpower Studies and author of the report.

In the report, Lisack urges both high schools and postsecondary institutions to step up the flow of information to high school students and adults who have finished high school to inform them of educational opportunities beyond high school. He emphasizes the importance of higher education to career development, higher salaries, job security and personal satisfaction.

Lisack asserts that "A well-educated population and work force and a responsible educational system will serve to hold and even to attract industry to this state and enhance its economy."

The report, "Postsecondary Education in Indiana," is based on a survey of a stratified random sample of Indiana high school students who graduated in 1980, an analysis of data on last year's incoming college freshmen and other data.

Copies of the 66-page report are available for $2.50 plus postage from the Office of Manpower Studies, Purdue University, West Lafayette, Indiana 47907.
