Peace marchers pause in Indy

by Laura A. Barrie

"Someday, the demand for disarmament by hundreds of millions will, I hope, become so universal and so insistent that no man, no nation, can withstand it."

A group of 23 "marchers for world peace" will be in Indianapolis March 10, 11 and 12. The group left Los Angeles Oct. 24 planning to arrive in New York for the United Nations Special Session on Disarmament (SSDDU) June 7. They will leave Indianapolis Saturday, March 13, with Greenfield as their next scheduled stop.

Led by a Buddhist monk, the group includes four other Buddhist monks, a Buddhist nun, seven Japanese lay people, two West German women and 13 Americans. The goal of the march is to stir interest in world-wide active opposition to nuclear proliferation.

Upon their arrival in Indianapolis, the marchers will be the guests of the Unitarian-Universalist Church, 615 West 43rd Street. At 7 p.m. a welcoming program will feature a film on peace, brief talks by several marchers and a dance performance by a local Japanese group. The public is invited and those who wish to attend the dinner should bring a covered dish.

Members of the group will speak at IUPUI March 11 at 7 p.m. in Cavanaugh Hall 229. A march for peace will begin Friday, March 12 at 50th and Meridian Street, ending at the Michigan Street side of the War Memorial Plaza.

Requirements stated

In an effort to offer students a background of general knowledge, as well as specific skills, the IUPUI Faculty Council voted unanimously last week to adopt general education requirements for all schools and divisions.

All students seeking bachelor's degrees, whether in engineering, art, science, technology, theater, health sciences, physical education, or other areas, will be required to complete courses in humanities, such as history, philosophy or others. General requirements will also include science and math areas such as biology, chemistry, geology, zoology, physics, and students will be required to select courses from the behavioral sciences — economics, geography, psychology, political science and others.

"Life is not simply a matter of an income and a career," said Dr. Edward C. Moore, dean of the faculties and executive dean at IUPUI. "We are preparing people for life, for leadership in the state and in their professions. They will be better at whatever they decide to do if they have an intelligent grasp of the world outside of their specialization."

The official adoption of the general education requirements will cause no large-scale changes. Nearly every undergraduate program is already meeting many of the requirements. "There will be some adjustments," Moore said, when the program begins for students in the entering class in the fall of 1982.

"We simply want to make explicit our commitment to the importance of a general education for all students. This clarifies our expectations, and the new requirements will be kept in mind when students are advised in their course selections," he added.

The general education requirements for baccalaureate candidates include: a course in English composition, a course in speech, two courses in the humanities, three in science and math, two courses in the social sciences and 12 additional general credit hours in courses outside the field of the student's major.

The new program requirements will not increase the total number of hours needed to complete a degree nor will it reduce the number of hours in a student's major area.

"The new requirement is one of the most important actions the Faculty Council has taken in several years. It reaffirms our commitment to our students that they receive not only a sound education in their field of specialization, but a sound general education as well," said Dr. Glenn W. Irwin, Jr., IU vice president for Indianapolis.

Candidates speak out

Stu Keefer

"As a student senator, I have heard many complaints made by students. Next year, I plan on working at solving such problems as better communications between student organizations and the student senate, a stronger student senate and keeping students more involved and aware of activities on campus."

George T. Graves, Jr.

"I am really glad to have the opportunity to enlighten the student voters as to what I hope to accomplish during the 1982-83 school year. The paramount issues that I am concerned with are rape prevention, more equitable parking, food services and more consideration for the handicapped students. These issues were carefully determined after polling segments of the school's enrollment."

Gabriel Szoka

"The three main things that I plan to work on, if elected, are better security for students, more affirmative action taken on important issues and stronger communications between the students and organizations. I plan on instituting public files on individual senators, committee, and bills going through the senate. I plan on working for an active student body."
Four scholarships announced

In an effort to assist students in the funding of educational programs, especially noting the proposed cutbacks in student loans, the Sagamore will attempt to publish as much scholarship information as possible.

The Indiana Society for Hospital Personnel Administration sponsors personnel careers through the Cecil E. Lagle Memorial Scholarship. The scholarship program of ISHPA provides financial assistance to further the education and training of students in personnel administration.

Eligibility for the fund includes:
1. Registered at a school in Indiana;
2. Resident of the State of Indiana;
3. Major in personnel administration or related field;
4. A full time student;
5. A junior level student at time of application.

The scholarship is a one-time $250 award made available annually. Applications may be obtained at the Financial Aids Office.

Engineering
The BPW Foundation Loan Fund for Women in Engineering Studies supports women in a broad range of engineering degree programs to increase the number of women in engineering studies and to enlarge the pool of women trained for professional engineering positions.

Eligibility criteria:
1. The loan fund is designed to assist women in their final two years of any accredited engineering program, including undergraduate, refresher and conversion programs, as well as graduate studies;
2. Written acceptance for undergraduate or graduate level study, in a program accredited by the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology;
3. Study may be full or part-time, but the applicant must carry at least six semester hours or the equivalent during each semester for which a loan is requested;
4. Work experience or academic achievement indicating career motivation and the ability to complete the course of study for which the loan is requested;
5. U.S. Citizenship;
6. Financial need—No applications received after May 15 will be considered. Applications and other necessary forms may be obtained at the Financial Aids Office.

Communications
To encourage talented and qualified persons in their pursuit of a career in the field of communications, the Indianapolis chapter of Women in Communications, Inc., will continue its long tradition of presenting scholarship awards in the 1982-83 academic year. The Florence Hen Stone Scholarship Award will be presented in May to a communications, the Indianapolis chapter of Women in Communications, Inc., will continue its long tradition of presenting scholarship awards in the 1982-83 academic year. The Florence Hen Stone Scholarship Award will be presented in May to a communications major attending an Indiana college or university who has demonstrated scholastic excellence and commitment to journalistic ideals in student communications.

Application forms may be obtained at the Financial Aids Office and must be mailed to the Scholarship Chairperson, Donna Lee Holdych, Scholarship Chairperson, 1321 N. Meridian, No. 614 Indianapolis, IN 46202.

STANLEY H. KAPLAN
For over 40 years the standard of excellence in test-preparation
Last week, the Sagamore published a letter from Thomas Walsh who expressed his concern about the athletic facilities being built on this campus. This week, we have published a short response to that letter from James Jonas stating that Mr. Walsh should “check his facts before raising his issues.”

May we suggest to Mr. Jonas that he practice what he preaches. While it is a fact that student activity fee money is used to help fund the athletic facilities currently under construction, some student activity fee money is used to help fund intercollegiate sports programs at IUPUI.

A few simple questions directed to the appropriate administrators revealed this information. Depending on which administrator is actually correct, intercollegiate sports at IUPUI received $12,000-$16,000 from the student activity fee fund last year. In this case, the amount isn’t as important as the fact that intercollegiate sports are partially funded by the students. According to Dr. Golam Mannan, dean of Student Services, most of the money is used for the rental of athletic facilities such as Market Square Arena.

Evidently, in a roundabout way, IUPUI contributes to athletic facilities currently being used by intercollegiate programs.

But getting back to future athletic facilities, the natatorium and track and field stadium are being funded by $18.5 million in private gifts and grants as well as $8.9 million from Indiana University. The $8.9 million from Indiana University is money appropriated to the university by the Indiana State Legislature. This boils down to tax dollars, and students who have jobs pay taxes. No matter how small you want to perceive it, IUPUI students are helping to pay for the new athletic facilities. Besides, how fast do you think the state legislature would appropriate $8.9 million for the facilities if IUPUI wasn’t here? The only reason IUPUI is here is because there are students.

Let’s face it. We deserve the right to use the facilities and we should fight for that right.

Check facts first

Dear Editor:

In response to fellow student Thomas Walsh’s letter March 3, doesn’t he realize that no student fee money is used to support the athletic program or to build the athletic facilities? He should check his facts before raising his issues.

Retired professor will remain active at IUPUI

Dr. John A. Whitesel will be honored March 12 during a reception honoring his retirement from 22 years of service at IUPUI.

Whitesel joined IU in 1959 as director of chaplaincy programs at the IU Medical Center. He developed a professional chaplaincy program, and organized an accredited residency training program and trained many hospital chaplains over the next 20 years. During the 60s, under a grant from Eli Lilly Foundation, Whitesel devised and ran a field training program for Hoosier ministers who wanted to know more about pastoral counseling for their hospitalized parishioners.

He became counselor in Personal Counseling Services at IUPUI in 1980. He retired officially Jan. 31, but will continue his service as an associate faculty member in the IU School of Liberal Arts, teaching interpersonal communications in the Department of Communications and Theater. He will also remain on several committees.

A native of Harrison, Va., he received his A.B. degree from Randolph-Macon College, his bachelor of divinity degree from Duke University and his Ph.D. from Boston University. He was ordained in 1943 in the United Methodist Church.

Whitesel has been cited for his leadership and service by many organizations, among them the Indiana Council of Churches, Church Federation of Indianapolis, the Great Lakes Health Congress and the College of Chaplains of the American Protestant Hospital Association.
IUPUI’s Get SET program receives good grades

A program in Indianapolis that helps small numbers of poorly educated young people get on track for a job, diploma and a big dose of self-esteem was recently put under the microscope, scrutinized and found to be a rare breed — a government-funded employment program that works. The program is IUPUI’s Get SET, located on Fort Wayne Avenue. The study and the stamp of approval for Get SET (Skills for Employment and Training Program) was made by the Upjohn Institute for Employee Research. It said, among other positive things, that Get SET was “judged successful in meeting its objectives.”

Upjohn stated in a lengthy report that “Get SET is a very well designed and executed program.” What that means for its mostly black, mostly poor and uneducated “clients” is that many of them get jobs and keep them, get GED diplomas, gain enough courage and self-esteem to better themselves or they get enough basic instruction to go on to more training. In the current poor job market, Get SET at least gives these people the chance to compete.

The Upjohn study noted that Get SET’s highly qualified and educated instructors use few textbooks and that they and social workers give individual attention to each student. Director of Get SET, Rose Konare, and her staff did not go unnoticed by the Upjohn researchers. “The program is clearly staffed by dedicated and competent personnel,” the report stated.

Contrary to what researchers expected, there is a quiet industrious atmosphere at Get SET. “There are no discipline problems,” said the report which also pointed out that “the key principle is for students and staff to find out just who is an adult and who isn’t.”

The dream of this program was to teach young people ways to survive,” said Paula Schneiderman, project designer and manager and assistant director in the IUPUI Office of Learning Resources. According to the Upjohn study, that dream is coming true in Indianapolis.

Let’s Recognize the Best!

All around this University, students, faculty and administrators have been working hard to improve IUPUI, both as an academic experience and a social one. Through large and small projects, at campus-wide and departmental levels, IUPUI is growing, and becoming a better place to get an education, largely because of the efforts of these people. Each year, the Student Assembly sets aside one night to recognize the activities and achievements of these people at the Student Activities Honors Banquet. The Honors Day Committee is now searching for people who deserve this recognition. Nominees for the Lola L. Lohs and Outstanding Educator Awards for faculty, the William L. Garrett Award for students and the Outstanding Administrator Award are needed.

Nomination Information is available from the Student Assembly and Student Activities Offices. Nominations must be turned into the Honors Day Committee in Cavanaugh Hall, room 001C, before 5:00 p.m., April 9.

Benefit concert set

A concert to benefit higher education is set for Saturday, March 13, at 8 p.m. in the Anderson Auditorium at Arsenal Technical High School, 1500 East Michigan Street, and will feature the Indiana University Soul Revue.

Named "A Celebration of Education," the concert is co-sponsored by the Indianapolis Urban League and the Association for Loan Free Education (ALFE), and is supported by several members of the staff and faculty at IUPUI.

Sponsored-reserved seating tickets are $10; general admission is $5. Proceeds will help support educational counseling programs for young people in the area.

The IU Soul Revue is a 45-member ensemble that includes dancers, instrumentalists and singers, whose performances appeal to people of all ages. For more information, call 923-2547 or 639-9404.

Say it with roses

Think of someone who might respond with a blush if presented unexpectedly with a bouquet of roses. And then, keep your eyes open next Thursday and Friday for flower vendors stationed at various places around campus.

The flower sale is being sponsored jointly by the Disabled Student Organization and Delta Sigma Pi. A similar program operated by the Handicapped Student Organization at IU-Bloomington has been successful for the past four years.

During March 11 and 12 twenty students, including several in wheel chairs, will be stationed at various locations around the campus selling roses or taking orders for roses to be delivered. The cost is $1 for a single rose or $10 per dozen.

In addition to the vendors in the halls, roses can be ordered for delivery from the Student Organizations Room, CA001D, or by phone, ext. 4831.

The roses can be delivered to classrooms, offices, or anywhere on campus the same day or, for a small fee, to offices in the downtown area.

Arthur Miller’s modern tragedy, “View from the Bridge,” will be performed March 11-13 and March 18-20 by the University Theater in the Mary Cable Building on the campus of IUPUI.

In this two-act play, Miller uses the Greek chorus method to narrate the story of Eddie Carbone, a second generation Brooklyn Italian. Carbone feels his lifestyle is threatened by newly-immigrated Italians, one of whom wants to marry his niece. He is convinced that the younger man does not care about Catherine, that he wants to marry her only to become a citizen. Carbone’s deep attachment to his niece leads him to decisions which, also in the Greek style, bring him to a tragic end.

Miller defines tragedy as falling short of important desires — “Tragedy arises when we are in the presence of a man who has missed accomplishing his joy,” or “tragedy is the most accurately balanced portrayal of the human being in his struggle for happiness.”

J. Edgar Webb directs the mid-1950’s play which takes place in the Italian settlement of Red Hook, Brooklyn, in and around the department of the Carbones. IUPUI students in the cast include Gary Curto who plays Alfieri, the philosophical Brooklyn lawyer who narrates; John Sando, who plays Eddie Carbone, the longshoreman who loves his niece too much. Melissa Miller plays Catherine, Eddie’s niece who falls in love with an illegal immigrant, Rodolpho, played by Mark Thompson. Dick O’Bryan plays Marco, another immigrant and Lynn McQuain plays a neighbor, Tony, who helps the two men hide from immigration officers. Also in the play is Sandy Palmer, I.U. graduate, who plays Eddie’s wise but worried wife, Beatrice.

Other IUPUI students in the cast are Geoff Odle and Chris Doran as pals of Eddie and William Caldwell and Phillip Traicoff as immigration officers. Also, Jayson Gardner, Nancy Petersen, Ray Wolfgang, Deli Dei Morton, Deleasa Randall, Mary Foley and Tim Lyons in supportive roles.

Tickets for the play are $3 and are available at the door. With course number and professor’s name, liberal arts students may see the play for $1. Curtain time is 8 p.m. For reservations, call 264-2094.

Metros finish season, 10-15

by Ann Miller

Though they finished with a 10-15 record, the IUPUI Metros did reach their number one goal, set at the beginning of the year. They earned the school's first bid to the NAIA District 21 postseason tourney.

Angola, Indiana may be just an easy ride north on I-69, but the real road to that tournament game at Tri-State was a long, rough one.

The team started the season well, but in early January, coach Mel Garland was (and still is) hospitalized, unable to complete his coaching duties for the rest of the season. Dean of physical education Nick Kellum became temporary athletic director upon Garland's illness, and asked professor Ed Schilling to take charge of the Metros. Schilling, who had a successful tenure as mentor at Marian College several years ago, but hadn't coached since, promptly accepted.

Schilling found himself interim coach of a squad that he had hardly seen. It made for some tough times.

"It was an extremely difficult experience," he revealed. "I was used to the players and myself. I revealed Schilling recently. "I came in nearly blind; I was totally unfamiliar with them (as players). And they didn't know whether I could bounces a basketball, let alone coach it."

The players were used to Garland — his tactics, his method of coaching. It was a psychological shock to look at the bench to find Garland absent and a virtual stranger in his place. On the other hand, Schilling, who admits his personality and coaching style differs from Garland's, "(I'm a fast-break coach and he's a control coach)" had to step in and assert himself. He felt he had to alter some things to feel comfortable, yet he knew he couldn't change too much — a situation that would cause even more confusion, and maybe spawn some downright resentment, among the already distrustful and disheartened players.

"We had to trial-and-error everything," says Schilling. "Here I was trying to water mine (coaching style) down and still be me, yet I know I was telling them to do things they'd been told not to do."

It was a perplexing bind for the Metros. Schilling, who admits his personality and coaching style differs from Garland's, "(I'm a fast-break coach and he's a control coach)" had to step in and assert himself. He felt he had to alter some things to feel comfortable, yet he knew he couldn't change too much — a situation that would cause even more confusion, and maybe spawn some downright resentment, among the already distrustful and disheartened players.

Schilling, who admits his personality and coaching style differs from Garland's, "(I'm a fast-break coach and he's a control coach)" had to step in and assert himself. He felt he had to alter some things to feel comfortable, yet he knew he couldn't change too much — a situation that would cause even more confusion, and maybe spawn some downright resentment, among the already distrustful and disheartened players.

"We had to trial-and-error everything," says Schilling. "Here I was trying to water mine (coaching style) down and still be me, yet I know I was telling them to do things they'd been told not to do."

The Metros went onto the floor and destroyed the highly favored Titans, playing with newly found, or rather regained intensity. A few days later they closed the season and earned their playoff bid by trouncing another formidable team, IU-Southeast.

Fired up, the Metros went to Angola, but were bested by one point and ousted from the tournament. Nevertheless, Schilling played with the way they played, and even more satisfied with the way he and the Metros responded to each other by the end of the season.

Schilling attributes the turnaround to three factors: first, that he finally became familiar with the team and was able to relate to them; secondly, the players finally accepted the fact that Garland was not going to return this year and accepted him as the interim replacement; third, (and most important to him), he cites the togetherness and support shown by his colleagues at the school of phy ed, including Dean Nick Kellum and Mrs. Teagarden, who took over one of Schilling's classes so he would have the time to devote to coaching, and especially Garland, who helped all he could from his hospital bed.

Schilling also praised the understanding, insight, and knowledgeable help given by both assistant coach Dave Weatherford and injured team captain Reggie Butler. States Schilling, "I enjoyed athletics, and I enjoy them as a spectator now. I've been a coach and an athletic director (at Connersville High School) and I was successful at both, but now it's time to do something different."

Nursing
The St. Francis Hospital Center is offering a tuition assistance program to nursing students. The following guidelines may help in the search for financial resources.

1. All registered nursing students may apply for various amounts of assistance after completion of one full academic year (A.S. Program), two years (B.S. Program), and up to ninety days prior to graduation.

2. Acceptance of tuition assistance does not influence any other factor of employment, such as starting salary and various area assignment;

3. Interviews and educational counseling are extended to each tuition assistance applicant on an individual basis;

4. All forms of tuition assistance are granted in exchange for a work commitment. Part-time work may be arranged;

5. Tours of the facility are available upon request;

6. The assistance fund is limited. Because of this limitation, early application is encouraged;

7. L.P.N. students may apply for limited scholarships after completing the first quarter of the L.P.N. Program and before the start of the final quarter.
