Students rally for affirmative action

Proponents of change at two universities demand improved minority representation on its campuses.

BY SARAH LEWIS
THE MICHIGAN DAILY

ANN ARBOR (Mich.) — "We won't take resegregation, we want quality education!"
Dozens of students chanted this slogan as they marched across the University of Michigan's Diag as part of a Student and Youth National Day of Action Feb. 24 in defense of an affirmative action rally.

"This is a real movement," said student Jessica Curtin, a member of the Coalition to Defend Affirmative Action by Any Means Necessary. "The rally was a way to support 'complete equality and complete integration of society,'" said Curtin, a Michigan Student Assembly representative. She added that Day of Action participants fought for equality in areas including K through 12 education, employment and housing.

"That is our goal in defending affirmative action," she said.

Curtin said about 20 other colleges and universities nationwide also participated in the Day of Action, including the University of California at Berkeley and the University of Virginia. (See related story right.)

Many student group leaders on campus used the Day of Action as an opportunity to speak about other ongoing university and international issues, including the Graduate Employees Organization negotiations, sweatshop labor and the US Government sanctions on Iraq.

GEO member Cedric DeLeon said one issue currently being debated in GEO contract negotiations is the hiring of "women and people of color" for at least two terms of teaching and improving training conditions for international graduate student instructors.

"Don't believe for a second that this university is 100 percent pro-affirmative action," he said, urging participants to support a possible GEO strike. "Honoring our picket lines means honoring women and people of color at the university...defending our picket lines means defending affirmative action."

No time for nothin'

Why do we do procrastinate? = Is it because we are non-traditional students? = What are the costs of putting things off?

BY LAURA FLACK
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Don't procrastinate. Read this article now. Everyone has been guilty of procrastination at one time or another. Procrastination is often written off as laziness. While laziness is the most obvious and prevalent cause of procrastination, it is not necessarily the reason students put things off. According to some students, too many commitments have pushed them to the brink of procrastination. The old adage of not putting off until tomorrow what can be accomplished today has been replaced with a new adage: There is not enough time in one day, especially for students. Lara Aguilar, senior, is married and has a three-year-old son. While most people tell her that she is "overly organized," she admits there are some things, especially those demanding much of her time, she will put off until the last minute. Balancing family and school commitments sometimes makes her life hectic. "It does cause me stress," she said, "but I work better under stress." Many students have the same trouble balancing several priorities. For some, like Aguilar, the obstacles are school and family obligations. For others, commuting to campus and meeting work responsibilities or any combination of these factors, can lead to procrastination. These are issues which, however,

Parking services to spend $3.5 million

Department will use funds to increase, improve student lots; director not sure whether permit fees will be increased.

BY JAMIL ODUM
STAFF WRITER

The vision has become a reality — more student parking and upgrades are forthcoming.

According to Carol Pferrer, director of Parking Services, $3.5 million will be used to upgrade and increase student parking space.

The final bid will be sent this month, with an approval two to three weeks later.

There will be three main construction initiatives. The first will call for the replacement of the student lot west of the law school with a garage.

Secondly, the gravel areas surrounding the Mary Cable building will be resurfaced with asphalt.

Thirdly, the department will expand several parking sections. Lot 92, north of the Mary Gable building, will be extended to Indiana Avenue.

Lots 73 and 74 on the eastside of the same building will be stretched to Michigan Avenue. Lastly, lot 91 on the corner of Michigan Avenue and West Street will be lengthened.

Pferrer said the improvements should begin sometime in this summer months and is projected to be completed before fall classes begin. One construction company will work on the lots while another works on the garage.

Pferrer said the work will be completed before the fall semester and that, because the construction is topical, there will be no need to go beneath the ground's surface.

When faculty, students and staff pay for their permits, Parking Services, as an auxiliary unit, receives some of these funds, according to Pferrer.

■ Spirit Award nomination forms available

Nominations are now being accepted for the 1999 IUPUI Staff Council Spirit Award. This award recognizes employees who provide extraordinary service and contributions which exemplify the spirit of the university.

The "spirit" of IUPUI is demonstrated through attitude, acts of loyalty, teamwork and support of the mission, goals and strategic initiatives of the university.

Nomination forms are available by contacting the Staff Council office at 274-2215 or Yvonne Owens of the Staff Affairs Committee at 274-5063. Forms are also available on the Internet at www.bashful.it.iupui.edu/Staff/Spirit/Award.html.

■ Financial help for university employees

IUPUI's Human Resources Administration will sponsor a one-day planning event titled "Designing Your Financial Future" in University Place Conference Center at 8:30 a.m. April 24.

This program will feature sessions on a wide range of financial benefits and issues and is open to all university employees and their spouses.

In addition, representatives from each of the Tax Deferred Annuity vendors will be available to answer questions.

Call 274-8931 for more information.

■ Student organization focuses on media

IUPUI New Media is forming a student chapter of the Broadcaster Education Association, which is aligned with the National Association of Broadcasters. Membership in this new organization will provide students opportunities to gain insight and hands-on, practical experience in many areas of media and multimedia production.

An informational meeting in S1 229 at 4 p.m. March 9. For more information, contact David Donaldson at 274-4520 or ddonalds@iupui.edu.

■ Diabetes study calls for volunteers

The Clinical Studies Unit at the School of Medicine is seeking volunteers for a research study to determine the effectiveness of an investigational drug to slow down and possibly reverse damage done to nerves caused by diabetes.

Those enrolled in the study will receive free physical and nerve conduction exams and will be compensated for their participation.

Volunteers with diabetes who are interested in participating in this study must be between the ages of 18 and 70 and have diabetic neuropathy. The study will last for two years. For additional information, please contact the study coordinator at 278-1775.

■ Higher Education scholarships available for cancer survivors

College scholarships for young cancer survivors are now available for the Fall 1999 semester. A special program of the American Cancer Society Foundation, Great Lakes Division, Inc. scholarships of $1,000 will be awarded to a select and qualified group of young cancer survivors in Indiana and Michigan to help them achieve their higher education goal.

The scholarships, for undergraduate degrees at any accredited Michigan or Indiana college or university, will be awarded based on need to qualified residents who have had a diagnosis of cancer before the age of 21. Applicants must also be under 21 at the time of application.

A volunteer committee with representatives from both states will award the scholarships after review of the student's financial needs, academic performance, community service and leadership qualities. The grants are for one year, but may be renewed annually based on achievement.

Applications must be submitted by April 15 to the American Cancer Society, Great Lakes Division Office, 1205 E. Saginaw, Lansing, Mich., 48906. The application process includes submission of letters of recommendation, a 500-word essay, a copy of academic marks during the grades 9 through 12, SAT and/or ACT scores and financial information.

To request a scholarship application packet, call the American Cancer Society, Great Lakes Division at (800)723-0360.

Survey shows witnesses often don't report cheating

By ANGIE TRUNG
THE DAILY TAVIGN

NEW BRUNSWICK (N.J.) — Most students who witness cheating do not report the occurrences to professors and are uncertain about the rules of academic integrity, according to an informal survey conducted during Rutgers University's Academic Integrity Week last month.

The survey was conducted by the College and University Judicial Board members in the five student centers on the New Brunswick and Piscataway campuses.

Six hundred and forty-six students completed the survey anonymously at contact tables in the student centers.

Sixty-one percent of the students said they have seen other students cheat, said junior Ram Mani, a member of the judicial board who served as co-chairperson of the student committee for Academic Integrity Week.

He said he thinks the percentage of students who have seen other students cheating is accurate, but it is possible many saw the same student cheating repeatedly.

Donald McCabe, an associate provost for campus development at Rutgers-Newark who has done extensive research on academic integrity at various schools since 1990, said the figure of 61 percent is fairly typical.

Students who witness cheating don't report it to a professor or a teaching assistant for many reasons, Mani said.

"Fear is a large factor and it is unusual to report cheating; so students will follow the trend and don't report it," Mani added. "Also some students won't see how cheating affects them."

McCabe said students don't feel it is their responsibility — they see it as the professors' responsibility.

"They learned as children not to be tattletale," he said. "I think you have to rely on faculty in particular to remind students in class what is permissible and not permissible."

"Some students need to take greater leadership to make this more of an issue," he added.

Rutgers has a policy on academic integrity, but not an honor code. According to the policy, violations of academic integrity — including cheating and denying access to information or material — are divided into four levels of punishment. The most severe being expulsion.

"It is very difficult to have an honor code at a large institution like Rutgers," Paul Herman, assistant dean of program development at Livingston College, said.

He added that the university should consider revising the academic integrity policy.

He said incoming students should sign an agreement stating they will follow the policy. He also said discussion about academic integrity should be part of orientation.

Mani said the faculty should state rules in the syllabus and go over them in class.

"The survey was a good step toward creating a concrete policy on academic integrity," McCabe said.

"I think the survey raised awareness that there are some problems. It is the first step to addressing any problem and the situation is not as good as we would like it to be," he added.

Mani said it was a good start and "it's something we can build on. This initiative is going to lead to other things."

He added that the committee might hold a forum for students, faculty members and administration members to talk about the problem.

"Last year's Academic Integrity Week was a lecture and some advertising," Mani said.

"This year was a more visible effort and we got students' attention throughout the week," he added.

"I think we have gotten some students to think about cheating," Mani concluded. "We have given students who don't cheat something to feel good about."

Hundreds of employers to attend job fair

STAFF REPORT

More than 125 employers from across the nation are expected in Indianapolis April 2 to interview job hopefuls at the largest, one-day college employer recruiting opportunity in the state.

The ninth annual Indiana Collegiate Job Fair, organized by the IUPUI Career Center, will feature representatives from career fields ranging from social services to high technology.

The event will be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Indiana Convention Center & RCA Dome and is open to all seniors and graduates from any two- or four-year college in the U.S.

Registration by March 22 is $10, half the entry fee at the door.

Sue Ream, coordinator of the ICJF, said the popular event is an excellent opportunity both for employers and potential employees, especially since today's low unemployment figures mean company representatives are hungry to find candidates to fill positions.

Hundreds of interviews are granted at the ICJF. This year, job candidates will have the opportunity to add their resumes to a database distributed to employers at the fair.

Even those companies with whom candidates do not meet, will have easy access to resumes through the database, Ream said.

Employers expected to be on hand for the ICJF include the Central Intelligence Agency, National City Bank and Simon Property Group.

A complete list of employers attending the fair, as well as instructions on creating a searchable resume for use in the resume database, may be viewed on the Internet at www.iupui.edu/~jobfair/.

To register for the ICJF, send a resume and $10 check to Indiana Collegiate Job Fair, at ICJF Registration, 801 W. Michigan St., BS 2010, Indianapolis, Ind. 46202-5153.

Registration also is available. The date of the fair for $20. For more information, call Ream at 274-3215 or the Career Center at 274-2554.

police department, marched across campus chanting.

As protesters neared California Hall, where Chancellor Robert Berdahl's office is located, four police officers providing additional security stationed themselves in front of the entrance.

The teach-in located in Pauley Ballroom, included speeches by Alex Saragoza, professor of ethnic studies, and Anna Maria Loya, executive director for the Raza Centro Legal. Saragoza emphasized not only affirmative action issues, but also "broader issues of inequality."

Disparities between suburban and inner-city public schools limit students' access to higher education because many inner city students never even graduate, Saragoza said.

"The saddest story (is) the (col-

After the teach-in, a noontime rally was hosted in which students from both UC Berkeley and local high schools gave speeches calling for a repeal of Proposition 209, the 1996 voter-approved measure that eliminated the government's race and gender preferences.

One suggestion is to have parking surveys existing parking areas.

"At the beginning of the semester, we have a person standing atop of each garage, with binoculars, looking for empty spaces," Pferrer said. "They then radio to persons on the ground where these spots are, who in turn tell the students."

PARKING

"We (the department) also get money from Clarian Health employees and hospital and school visitors," the added.

Pferrer is unsure whether fee increases will be assessed for the 1999-2000 school year.

"I don't know if permit fees will be raised," she said. "I make a suggestion if these prices should be increased, but it is actually up to IUPUI administration to raise permit fees."

With the enlargement of student parking places, Pferrer hopes traffic congestion at the beginning of each semester will decrease.

"In lots 73 and 74, I project we will gain 300 extra parking spaces," Pferrer said. "However, we will temporarily lose 400 spaces until the law school garage is complete. But we will gain those spaces back, plus more, when the garage is erected."

"I would like to create a focus group with students, staff and faculty who would offer suggestions, not criticisms, on providing better parking signage and communication," she

Jaguars bow in front of record crowd

BY RON SMITH
STAFF WRITER

A sold out crowd of more than 2,000 people filled the IUPUI gymnasium Feb. 18 to watch the Jaguars battle Valparaiso for the second time this season.

Hoping to avenge a 15-point loss to Valparaiso earlier in the year, the Jaguars began the game with a flurry of defensive intensity.

In front of the largest crowd in school history, IUPUI forced the Crusaders into six turnovers in the first three minutes of the game which propelled them to a six-point lead.

Jaguar center Mohammed Witherspoon scored 10 points in the first half which consisted of five ties and three lead changes.

The Crusaders capped off a late seven-point run with a dunk in the closing seconds of the first half to take a 41-34 lead into the locker room.

Valparaiso continued the run as they opened the second half. Four minutes into the period of play, the Crusaders led to a 19-point lead off of 12 unanswered points.

The Jaguars never overcame the early Valparaiso run, as the Crusaders sustained a double-digit lead the remainder of the afternoon. With the 75-58 win, Valparaiso locked up a share of the Mid-Con title.

"We had a lot to play for today," said Crusader forward Ivan Vujic of his team's last regular season game. "This win was an important one for us."

Witherspoon, in his final game at home, led the Jaguars with 15 points and eight rebounds. Junior Rodney Thomas, the nation's leading three-point shooter, recorded 11 points including three goals from behind the arc. Sophomore Don Carlisle added 12 points and junior Jermaine Gardner chipped in nine.

Valparaiso out-rebounded IUPUI by 12 and also hit nine more free throws than the Jaguars attempted.

Despite his 15th loss of the year, Jaguar head coach Ron Hunter was quick to point out his team's success.

"Two years ago, people said we couldn't compete at the (NCAA) Division I level," said Hunter. "My goal this year was to make sure nobody would ever say that again — I think we accomplished that."

"This game was a measuring stick for us," Hunter said. "We now know how far we need to go."

The Jaguars, who are ineligible to compete in the Mid-Con Tournament until the 2000-01 season, faced Texas-Pan American Feb. 27. (Score unavailable at press time.)

Baseball squad drops three over weekend

The Jaguar baseball team lost three consecutive games at the University of Tennessee-Martin Feb. 20 and 21.

IUPUI was held to three hits in their 13-2 season opening loss Feb. 20. Sophomore starting pitcher Matt Williams allowed nine runs in three innings as he picked up his first loss of the year.

In the second game Feb. 20, junior pitcher Andy Dudley went the distance in the 7-3 loss. Dudley gave up six earned runs and struck out eight batters. Sophomore Ryan Geeting and freshman Mike Mitchell each collected two hits.

The Jaguars also lost the final game of the series 13-2. Junior southpaw Jake Tharp allowed seven earned runs in six and a third inning. Senior Jeff Sluraker drove in both Jaguar runs and hit his first home run of the season. Mitchell also collected two hits. The Jaguars will take a 0-3 record to Morehead State for a four-game series March 5 through 7.

Swimming and diving teams wrap up season

The men's and women's swimming and diving squads completed their seasons at the Midwest Classic Invitational Feb. 18 through 20. In the ten-team event, the women's squad finished sixth with 294 points and the men's team finished ninth with 136 points.

Sophomore Arlene Mongeau won the 200 individual medley as well as the 100 backstroke. Mongeau also finished third in the 200 backstroke. Following the competition, Mongeau was named Outstanding Female Swimmer of the Midwest Classic.

Sophomore Mandy Moran finished second in the one meter and third in the three meter diving events.

Sophomore Nicole Ellis captured second place in the 100 breast stroke.

Freshman Mark Strickland won the one meter diving event and captured second place in the three meter diving event. Strickland was named the Outstanding Male Diver of the Midwest Classic.

Women's tennis squad downs Chicago State

The women's tennis team captured a 5-2 win over Mid-Con opponent Chicago State Feb. 20. Sophomore Laura Waggoner, seniors Lisa Richards and Sarah Van Gessel, and freshman Alison Hart, all captured singles wins for the Jaguars.

Angie Watt named to Mid-Con All-Conference team

Women's basketball star Angie Watt was named to the all-conference team Feb. 24. Watt is the Jaguars leading scorer averaging 13.7 points per game. She also ranks first in the Mid-Con in three-point percentage and second in free throw percentage.

Men's tennis team wins first Mid-Con contest

The Jaguars cruised to a 6-1 win over Chicago State to notch their first Mid-Con victory of the young season. Sophomores Mike Sinush, Zach Sipes, Damon Bell and Kris Looney, as well as junior Eric Mahone, all captured singles wins for IUPUI.

Don Carlisle receives Mid-Con honors

Don Carlisle, sophomore, was named from the men's basketball squad, to the Mid-Con All-Conference Second Team and the All-Newcomer Team Feb. 24. Carlisle is the Jaguars leading scorer and rebounder, averaging 13.6 points and 7.5 boards per game.

Players of the Week

Ariane Mongeau, a sophomore from Montreal Quebec, was named Outstanding Female Swimmer of the Midwest Classic. Mongeau won the 200 individual medley, the 100 backstroke and finished third in the 200 backstroke.

Mark Strickland, a freshman from Atlanta, Ind., was named Outstanding Male Diver of the Midwest Classic. Strickland won the one meter and placed second in the three meter diving events.

Tourney bound

The women's basketball squad dropped their final regular season game of the year, 67-58, to Valparaiso Feb. 20. Sophomore Crystal Vander Plaats led the team with 14 points and junior Kelli Werling added nine.

The Jaguars will face Youngstown State Feb. 26 in IUPUI's first ever Mid-Con Tournament. (Score not available at time of press.) Youngstown State beat the Jaguars 85-59 and 76-73 earlier in the year.

The semifinals of the Mid-Con Tournament will be March 1, with the finals March 2.

The winner will receive an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

Junior Jennifer Stucker looks to lead the Jaguars in the school's first appearance in the Mid-Con Tournament.

"Rent" has been one of the most popular shows on and off Broadway for the past year.

'Rent' to hit Indy at end of month

STAFF REPORT

The Pulitzer Prize and Tony Award winning landmark American musical "Rent," written by Jonathan Larson and directed by Michael Greif, will come to Clowes Memorial Hall March 23 through March 28.

Inspired by Puccini's "La Boheme," "Rent" is about a group of friends who are young artists in New York looking for love and success and struggling to make their mark on the world.

The musical opera is considered by many to be the most exuberant and original American musical to come along in a decade. "Rent" captures the heart and spirit of a generation.

The most honored musical since "A Chorus Line" in 1976, "Rent" is only the fifth musical to receive both the Pulitzer Prize and Tony Award.

The success of "Rent" is always tempered by the death of its creator, Jonathan Larson.

Larson died unexpectedly of an aortic aneurysm Jan. 25, 1996, just hours after Rent's final dress rehearsal off-Broadway, and ten days before his 36th birthday.

The show received its world premiere off-Broadway at the New York Theatre Workshop Feb. 13, 1996 to ecstatic reviews. It rapidly became a sold-out hit. The show transferred to Broadway April 29, 1996 and continues to play to standing-room-only audiences.

Tickets may be purchased at the Clowes box office on the campus of Butler University, or charged by phone at 239-1000.

Tickets also may be purchased at the Murat Centre box office and all Ticketmaster locations.

For group information, call 231-0000, extension 206.

For more background information, visit www.siteforent.com.

Clowes to host dance performance

STAFF REPORT

Clowes Memorial Hall will present modern dance's MOMIX at 8 p.m. March 19.

Known internationally for presenting astonishing inventiveness and physical beauty, MOMIX is a company of dancer illusionists under the direction of Moses Pendleton.

For almost two decades, MOMIX has been celebrated for creative imagery, playful humor and the original use of props, light, music and the human body.

MOMIX will present a program of dance vignettes using ballet and acrobatics to conjure up surrealistic images and a feast for the eyes. This fast-paced program is sure to please all dance enthusiasts.

Tickets are on sale now from $20 to $30 for adults and $17 to $25.50 for students and seniors. Tickets are available at the Clowes box office and all Ticketmaster centers. For more information, call 940-6444 or visit www.ClowesHall.org.

There will be a pre-performance talk with Butler University Professor of Dance Larry White at 7:15 p.m. in the Krannert Room of Clowes the night of the show.

'8mm' way too short on action

By KIM MORGAN
LIFESTYLES EDITOR

"Eight Millimeter" follows Tom Welles (Nicolas Cage), a surveillance specialist, on the toughest assignment of his career.

Until now, his job has generally consisted of run-of-the-mill cases investigating spousal infidelity.

Welles is hired to investigate a snuff film found by the widow of a wealthy businessman. He is asked to uncover the identity of the eight millimeter film's creators and the authenticity of the events the film entails.

The pornographic film shows a teenage girl being abused. The widow asks Welles to search for the girl or any trace of her existence.

Almost immediately the case gets under his skin, and Welles' marriage is placed in jeopardy. He has to leave his home-based operation in Pennsylvania to get to the bottom of the case. His travels take him to Hollywood Boulevard, Cleveland and New York's meat-packing industry.

While in L.A., Welles employs Max (Joaquin Phoenix), a streetwise adult bookstore clerk, to aid him in his journey into the dark world of pornography.

"What 8MM takes on is the even more deadly underbelly of the pornography industry — the exploitation of minors," said director Joel Schumaker. "What's really tragic is how much kiddie porn is out there, how big that market is, and how determined these people are to perpetuate it."

This movie is not for children, even those accompanied by adults. Not to it for the easily offended. It embodies plenty of gore, violence and nudity in glimpses of pornographic material.

It's not a bad movie, just a little long-winded at 123 minutes. The story line is good. The acting is good.

It's not cheesy like so many other action dramas. The movie just takes a little too long to get to the action.

While the commercials may entice Cage fans, it should be viewed during a matinee — or better yet, wait until it comes out on video.

Herron to host art auction, annual Janus Ball

STAFF REPORT

The Herron School of Art will once again play host to its annual fundraiser, the Janus Ball, March 6. This year's theme is "Janus Jumps and Lives."

There will be a silent art auction preview from 5 to 7 p.m. March 3 at the Herron Gallery. Bids will be accepted that evening on various works of art.

This is an opportunity for the community to take advantage of viewing one-of-a-kind pieces of art and placing bids.

The artists will be present and refreshments will be served. Winning bidders will be notified the week of March 8.

Contributing artists include: David A. Banta, James Brooke, Paul Brown, Jack Cooney, William Crutchfield, Kate Cunningham, John Dorsett, James Wiley Faust, Gloria Fischer, David Gamble, Judy Jarrett, Tamar Kander, LuAnn Lamie, Sara Jean Love, Stephen Lee Lyons, Jim Oss, Mark Richardson, Ginny Taylor Rosner, Jan Royce, Rachel Schreiber, Constance Edwards, Scopellitis, Charlene Segs, Mary Hamilton Shaw, Jan Tenenbaum, Chris Thomas and Kevin Wolff.

The ball, an invitation-only event, was established in 1989 by the Friends of Herron and will feature cocktails, a costume parade, dining, dancing and the silent art auction.

Guests have the option to come in black tie or costumes appropriate to the theme. Attendees will include a diverse group of the city's art patrons, businesses, Herron staff, faculty and students and IUPUI administrators.

The ball takes its name from Janus, the Roman god whose two faces look to the past and the future.

Funds raised from the event provide resources for several important areas of the school, indirectly benefiting the cultural development of the entire community.

Even the Teletubbies are controversial now

■ Many speculate children's TV character Tinky Winky is gay.

After a year of seedy accusations and steamy rumors, the American people breathe a deep, clean — cigar smoke-free — breath of fresh air.

No more sex scandal. No more accusations from unnamed sources. No more self-righteous behavior from the right-wing that could be countered with the left-wing's conspiracy theories.

We should've known better. This month the absurdity has taken on a whole new dimension with the Tinky Winky debate. Is the purple-toting purple Teletubby gay?

The Rev. Jerry Falwell thinks so, and so does the City Council of Berkeley, Calif.

In his National Liberty Journal Falwell issued a "parents alert" that Tinky Winky indeed be a homosexual.

"The character, whose voice is obviously that of a boy, has been found carrying a red purse in many episodes, and has become the favorite character among gay groups worldwide," the warning read. "Now, further evidence that the creators of the series intend for Tinky Winky to be a gay role model have [sic.] surfaced. He is purple — the gay-pride color; and his antenna is shaped like a triangle — the gay-pride symbol."

So, how come nobody ever tried to out Barney? He's purple.

The insanity wasn't confined to the right. The left decided Falwell's slow-pitch down the middle of the plate was too good a target and took a swing.

Berkeley's city council, usually known for taking stances on weightier issues, voted on a resolution Feb. 22 that chided Falwell and supported Tinky Winky.

"We take umbrage at the threat to personal style and choices implicit in Mr. Falwell's designation of Tinky Winky as an inappropriate role model," the resolution said. "Long live Tinky Winky and long live freedom from self-righteousness."

Has our country gone completely mad? This is a cartoon character for Pete's sake. If it wanted to, it could be a male one show and a female the next. Would any toddler know the difference?

Falwell and the rest of the power-brokers — liberal and conservative — in this country have done a great job of screwing up the adult world, and now they've decided to see if they can ruin what little bit of childhood innocence remains.

Children's television is no place for political agendas, whether they're real or a figment of someone's imagination.

Leave the kids alone. All they see is a chubby purple guy with a TV in his tummy, and that's all they should see.

Death is not an arbitrary thing for physicians to decide

■ Patient-assisted suicide mocks the Hippocratic Oath, could wreak havoc on traditional standards of medical practice.

The average life lasts longer today than ever before. But with the aid of technology and incredible medical advances, the process of dying has also been extended dramatically for many people with terminal illnesses.

Even for those who prefer not to contemplate their end, it's been difficult to escape the subject of death and dying, particularly in the wake of Dr. Jack Kevorkian's appearance on "60 Minutes" last November. Kevorkian played a tape of the death of 52-year-old Thomas Youk who suffered from Lou Gehrig's disease. This death differed from the more than 100 others Kevorkian has provided over in the past decade in that Kevorkian himself administered the lethal shot of potassium chloride.

The eerie image of Kevorkian looming over Youk and asking, "Sleepy, Tom?" is probably not what advocates of assisted suicide want as the billboard of their cause. However, it is precisely this specter witnessed by millions that demonstrates why such acts should not be legalized.

Kevorkian's actions shown on 60 Minutes would probably be considered euthanasia, which is illegal in every state. However in 1997, Oregon voters approved a referendum legalizing assisted suicide.

While some would distinguish the two, they both fall under the label "physician-assisted death," described by Barbara Dority, founding president of Compassion in Dying, in "The Ultimate Civil Liberty," which appeared in The Humanist.

Supporters of physician-assisted death argue that autonomy requires individuals to have the right to determine their quality of life and death. Many would restrict that right to terminally ill patients. Advocates of assisted suicide see little moral, legal or ethical difference between allowing a person to refuse medical treatment, knowing death is imminent, and a doctor prescribing and/or administering a lethal drug that will kill.

In 1997, the Supreme Court ruled on this issue. The court rejected in two cases the notion that there is a fundamental liberty interest in assisted suicide. This means that no one has a constitutionally guaranteed right to have a doctor help him or her commit suicide.

Proponents of physician-assisted death disagree. Dority wrote, "The obscenity of the state denying its citizens the ultimate human and civil right to own and control their own lives and bodies is intolerable. Surely our intrinsic right of self-determination must include the next breath we draw."

Society believes otherwise. In many situations such as prostitution, drug use and even certain circumstances surrounding abortion, the state regulates and even denies its citizens certain aspects of autonomy.

Even when the Supreme Court recognized a constitutional right to refuse unwanted medical treatment, it did not base its decision on the notion that patients have a general and abstract right to die but rather on more traditional rights to bodily integrity and freedom from unwanted touching.

There is a critical difference between a patient refusing to accept treatment and a doctor providing the deadly means. It's a simple matter of cause and effect: A patient who refuses medical treatment and then dies has expired as a result of his or her illness.

A patient who is provided with lethal drugs by a physician dies as a result of the drugs, not the illness. It is also a question of intent. In the first instance, the physician's intent is to follow the patient's orders. In the second, it is the physician's intent to administer death to the patient. Even if the patient asked the physician to provide the lethal means, the physician, in order to end the patient's life as requested, must intend to kill.

It is important to consider the implications physician-assisted death would have on medicine. When doctors take the Hippocratic Oath, they pledge, "To please no one will I prescribe a deadly drug, nor give advice which may cause death." Intentionally causing, directly or indirectly, the death of a patient mocks this solemn vow. These conflicting notions could wreak havoc on traditional standards of medical practice.

And how should physicians determine who is qualified to make the right-to-die decision? In Oregon, the right belongs only to a person over the age of 18 who has been found to be suffering from a terminal disease, which encompasses only an incurable and irreversible disease that will take the person's life within six months.

If the right to die is a fundamental one, then it should not be limited. So, what about a patient who has only eight months to live? Or one who is not terminally ill but believes that his or her quality of life is not worth living for? If the right is so fundamental, shouldn't it be a right enjoyed by everyone who chooses to invoke it?

There are no easy answers to these difficult questions. Ultimately, we must consider the age-old balancing test: Do the benefits outweigh the consequences? There are too many unknowns and potentially devastating problems surrounding the legalization of physician-assisted death. Rather, physicians should focus on respecting the wishes of those who refuse treatment and making the final moments of each patient's life as comfortable and peaceful as possible instead of actively participating in death.

We're all animals in the rush hour jungle

■ Rush-hour on the city's highways brings out the animalistic, instinctual level of drivers, whether they be gazelles or lemmings.

It is common knowledge that nothing alters a personality more drastically than rush hour traffic — it's a jungle out there. Why? Maybe it's the day, maybe it's the hour, but at any rate, it's like the full moon above the wolfman. It's just a fact. Drivers metamorphose. Instinctually, restlessness peaks and pack-mentality rises.

So with this premise in mind and tongue-in-cheek, let's identify the major sources of rush hour aggression and some viable solutions.

Generally, the first major problem is cops. The vigilant officer, who pledged to serve and protect, may believe he is tending to his sworn duties, but his prey feel otherwise.

The cop sits, perched under the overpass, radar-gun in hand. What he appears to be oblivious to is the motorist, whose acute sense of observation warns of trouble from the crest of the hill.

Now assume most drivers tool down the interstate a good 10 to 20 miles over posted limits. Sounds credible from personal experience. As quickly as gazelles dart left avoiding lions to the right, the motorist slams on brakes, instinctively, to avoid becoming the hunter's meal-ticket.

Normally, braking at 70 miles per hour is not a threat, but the herd reacts in kind. Immediately, the morning dusk illuminates with tail lights. A red glow hovers over the expanse of highway. The glow swells, like a swarm of insects descending upon the concrete and asphalt river into the city, as far as the eye can see. And the cop's radar is rendered useless because the swarm now expands back to the last interchange on the highway, and traffic is bottlenecking.

There is another rush hour hunting method, which is less passive and yet still creates the same rush hour result. That is the cop who rides with the pack. The glow from the swarm is modest since the pack now moves at a steady but ever-slowing pace. Instinctively, the pack drops back and again, the bottleneck now reaches two interchanges back.

Enough of cops creating traffic jams. Drivers also have methods for making everyone, from any given side of town, late for class and work. And if cops are the hunters anyway, then the rush-hour driver is surely operating at an animalistic, instinctual level.

There is a group out there, though, which refuses to ride in the rush hour pack. They drive 50 mph in the fast lane. Not only do they produce the same result as a cop-in-the-pack, they create additional hazards. The motorist who is driving at maximum speed, wishing to lead the pack, barrels down upon the pack-dissident. There is not much time to react. The alpha wamba is suddenly leap frogs, light left again, leaving a stream of illuminating tail lights around his vehicle. He thinks it's just his aura.

There is still another natural hazard to survive in the rush hour jungle chain reaction accidents. The cause is driving at maximum speeds while attempting to defy properties of space. Naturally, these drivers can expect to collide. And if any of the three previous scenarios exists, havoc is guaranteed.

Chain reaction is an understatement. Maybe eight or ten drivers are involved, but traffic is backed up beyond the county lines. Other motorists creep past the scene. If the highway had been a cliff, the linked vehicles would have been lemmings. News helicopters circle like vultures while the rush hour world comes to a screeching halt. To top it off, the cops are on the way, so back up could conceivably stretch beyond the bordering county.

There should really be some sort of recompense for the inequities caused by chain-reaction accidents. A few drivers cause them and everyone else is punished. For equity's sake, leave the chain in the middle of the highway until rush hour is over. Skilled drivers would be able to maneuver past the mess, and no one would be late.

Essentially, if lemmings and vultures, alpha wamba's and pack-dissidents, as well as hunters, passive and aggressive, would stay off the road during the rush hour jungle, other drivers wouldn't have any problems.

Dear Editor,

Is The Sagamore or IUPUI in general paying attention? Or is it just that no one cares?

For weeks it has been slightly debated whether or not gays should be able to adopt in Indiana. And no one seems to care. I have been dismayed at The Sagamore's inability to cover more important and pertinent topics, such as the assault on Matthew Shepard or the violence inflicted on James Bird. No one seems to care about these things. You find more "interesting" things to report on, like daylight savings. This is college — a time when students are supposed to (and I stress that phrase) expand their horizons, open their mind and so on. The opposite seems to be happening on the IUPUI campus. Everyone stays in comfortable little sheltered homes and dismisses anything not related to prying on the weekend.

Dear Reader,

In response to the above letter, The Sagamore appreciates comments and concerns about the paper's coverage and lack thereof on any given topic. We always encourage input from students, faculty, staff and community members on what stories or ideas are important to them. This is evidenced by our new reader response e-mail system, which we have advertised on a weekly basis since the beginning of the semester. I do take issue, however, with two points addressed in the letter. With all you respect, it would appear it is you who has not been paying attention. I challenge the use of the word "inability" when describing The Sagamore's attempt to cover topics which transcend the boundaries of campus. We have covered a wide range of stories, including pieces about drug checkpoints, the KKK rally and the treatment of minorities in a state prison. More specifically, I would refer you to

Why is it that no one cares if their rights are being taken away? No one cares that friends, ants, uncles, neighbors, classmates, professors and acquaintances may not have the right to have children of their own. Who is writing to their representatives, their senators, to tell them that this is wrong?

Who is going to the state house to oppose this legislation? In a pathetic turnout of about 50 people who showed up at the state house to oppose this bill, less than five of them were students. Are we telling our legislators we don't care one way or the other? Why don't we have a voice? The bill has not yet been voted on, for anyone who does care and did not know about this (because of the lack of proper coverage). So, please write your senators. Go to the state house. Let your voice be heard. Otherwise, it will be taken from you.

—Meghan Doyle, Junior, School of Nursing

HOW TO LAND YOUR DREAM INTERNSHIP

(Even the one you didn't know existed)

If you're starting to think about your career, even just an inkling, it may be time to focus on finding a summer internship. Following are some "insider" insights about how to land your dream internship in some of today's fast-forward industries like media, entertainment, fashion and high-tech, that likely don't recruit on campus.

WHAT TURNS YOU ON?

Not the typical first question you might think of when plotting your first career experience, but you really should think about it. The best places to work are often the places that make or do things that already interest you. And who wrote the rule that work shouldn't be fun? "It helps to start by thinking about which classroom topics interest you the most and what hobbies get you excited," says Samer Hamadeh, President of Vaultreports.com and the co-author of "America's Top Internships" and "The Internship Bible," two of the most useful books on the subject. Take his advice and ask yourself some questions. Do you spend a lot of time listening to music and going to concerts? Maybe you should check out working for a local radio station, a record label or a music publishing company. Are you a devoted athlete? Try contacting a fun sporting goods company, a fitness magazine, or a sports talent agency.

CREATE YOUR OWN JOB

After you've asked yourself what you like, and thought of some of your favorite products and activities, you may find that many of your choices lead to smaller or less structured companies that likely don't recruit on campus, or that don't have a formal internship program. Don't get discouraged!! In fact, think of it as a huge opportunity because you can potentially create your own job! There's nothing wrong with calling or writing a company out of the blue and letting them know who you are and what you're interested in. Many of the smaller companies will be thrilled to have been approached and more than likely can use the extra hands for the summer. One of Hamadeh's favorite stories is about a college student who was interested in sports law. The guy figured that Michael Jordan's lawyer must be pretty good at it, so he read a bunch of newspaper articles until he found the guy's name, then he wrote him a letter explaining why he wanted to work for him. The lawyer had never received a letter like that from anyone before. Hamadeh says, "So he brought him in for an interview and was so impressed that he hired him for the summer."

SELL YOURSELF, NOT YOUR NUMBERS

Just because you may not graduate cum laude doesn't mean you won't qualify for some of the most selective internship programs. "You have to make yourself sound interesting," says Price Hicks, who hooks students up with summer jobs at places like Warner Brothers as part of her work with the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. "The guy who wrote about growing up on a dairy farm is the one we remember best." The people, who may have the best grades, but drone on and on about why they want to be television directors all tend to blend together, she says.

SCIENTISTS CAN BE JOURNALISTS

Remember that the purpose of an internship is to gain experience. The idea is to "test drive" career options that you think might interest you for your future. And what interests you to do with a career may have nothing to do with what interests you in school. (How many psych majors actually become psychologists? How many history majors become historians? Who get the point.) You never really know what someone might be looking for, so don't feel intimidated by Internships that aren't directly in your field of study. Case in point, a biology major beat out a slew of journalism majors for one of three highly coveted internships at the Center for Investigative Reporting. Out of approximately 90 applicants, she was among those with the least direct experience. "It just so happened we were working on a project about chemicals in the environment, so her skills came in handy and she ended up playing a big role in the reporting," said Maryann Sargent, who is the internship coordinator at the Center.

REMEMBER THAT SMALL CAN BE BIG

Sometimes, you really may be better off going to work for a company where the duties of an intern aren't well defined. In small but super fast-growing internet companies, for instance, there's always a lot going on, so interns can often show up on day one and pick the things that interest them the most. "Our interns will always be working on several different projects," says Jeff Daniels, who runs a cool new service called CollegeHire.com that helps match up undergrads with high-tech and internet-related internships and entry-level jobs. "We look for people who can adapt well to the culture of fast-moving companies and can excel in an environment that's changing rapidly." Big change means new opportunities, and that's where a hungry intern can step into new, exciting areas and make a big contribution.
