National Junior Achievers Conference

Vol. X No. 3

BALLYING BEGINS AT NINE TODAY
Within the next hour NAJAC delegates will march to the polls to select their officers for the coming year. Seven candidates will compete for the presidency; nine for the office of vice-president; two for the conference secretaries job; and three for association secretary.

Delegates to Question Businessmen

Delegates this afternoon will have the chance to question some of America's top business executives at the annual Youth-Business Forum, to be held at 2 p.m. in Benton Hall. A recording will be broadcast over the NBC Radio Network Saturday afternoon.

Achievers will be able to question such businessmen as Charles R. Hook, chairman, Amco Steel Company, Middletown; Harry Stuhldreher, U.S. Steel company, Pittsburgh, former member of Notre Dame's Four Horsemen; Larry C. Hart, president of Junior Achievement, Inc.; C. Maynard Turner, Cincinnati Gas and Electric company; William H. Robinson, president, Backeye Molding company, Miamisburg; and John R. Queen, president, Columbia Machine and Engineering company, Hamilton.

Dr. William J. Reilly of the National Institute of Straight Thinking and author of Career Planning for High School Students, will be the moderator.

Delegates to Question Businessmen

Below are the names of the seven candidates and statements they submitted to the NAJAC' R to-day.

ROGER ALVEY—Though this is my first year in Junior Achievement I believe that I understand pretty near wholly what this great organization offers young people. It gives us a chance to learn about production, sales, and business records typical of democratic, free enterprise. As president, I would do all in my power to make this superb organization even better and available to more youth.

JOHN CONROY— I am a dummy. Yes, I am a political lever used for swinging votes. If so, what am I doing writing this? When I came here I was supposed to be regional representative, but due to an unforeseen political mishap, I was selected as an instrument with which to swap and barter votes. I have no campaign or publicity. But what is the true value of such lavish publicity when controlled block voting dominates sincere, intelligent and democratic voting. Vote for Junior Achievement by selecting the person you think best for it. If I have the honor of being your choice, I will do my utmost to represent Junior Achievement as you would want it to be represented.

BE SURE TO VOTE EARLY
Most of the Achievers at MAJAC this year will have an opportunity, before the conference is over, to meet one of Junior Achievement's most enthusiastic supporters. Mr. S. Bayard Colgate, Chairman of the Executive Committee of Junior Achievement, Inc., and Honorary Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Colgate, Palmolive, Peet Company.

Mr. Colgate, who arrived at the conference Wednesday morning, will be sitting in on business meetings and other activities until the conference is over.

Achievers who met Mr. and Mrs. Colgate last year will be disappointed to learn that Mrs. Colgate is ill and cannot attend MAJAC this year. Mr. Colgate, however, wanted to attend at least part of this conference.

Colgate first became interested in Junior Achievement at a dinner given in New York by Charles R. Hook who was then president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Mr. Hook was trying to expand the program, which then consisted of three full-time staff workers in two areas. Mr. Colgate was one of many prominent businessmen who were invited to attend this dinner. (continued next column)

A sixteen year old Achiever named Joe Francosano spoke to this group of businessmen and created such a good impression that the Junior Achievement program was revived, on a national scale. Mr. Colgate was asked to be the Chairman of the board of directors of the national program.

Since that time the program has expanded to include fifty-one areas and 110 full-time staff members. Mr. Colgate has, during this time, been one of the most active supporters of Junior Achievement.

"There's music in your ears." For some of the fellows in Hamilton there sure was yesterday morning. The ladies were up bright and early singing at the top of their lungs under the windows of Hamilton.

"Have a Coke." Up until yesterday Najac 'ers had 13,328 bottles of the beverage. It must be good.

In case you folks don't know it there is a campaign now on to keep the campus empty of coke cups. The first one to find out was Peggy Thompson of Pontiac, Michigan. How did she find out? Well! Her cup fell accidentally on purpose on the ground and the next thing she knew she had "volunteered" to pick up all the cups around Richard and Hamilton Halls. Who's going to be next?

Anyone ever hear of Toyko Rose? In case you didn't she was the Jap Radio broadcaster during World War II who tried to persuade U.S. troops to surrender. Rosie is now behind bars for treason against the U.S. I wonder how many of you know that a guy from the New York Office by name of Jim Keeney was directly responsible for her capture. It is quite a story. If you are interested in hearing the story you will usually find Jim in the Conference Office.

Tom Maggio looks as if he is ready for a beauty contest with those short legs. What part are the legs—wowie!

(A gal wrote this, wouldn't you know)

Shirley Appel's campaign went to the dogs when a stray dog started to pull her campaign signs down from Richard Hall.

Today is the last full day of the "53" Najac Convention. Make the most of it while you can.

That's all for now folks. Keep sending in your news. Oh! by the way gals, thanks for the present but I think Ohio needs it more than I do.

So long.

THAT'S THE WAY THE FALL BOUNCES
by Tom Siegel

Greetings delegates! Back again at the old typewriter with some more "dirt". Speaking of dirt the gals really took me literally and sent me some good old Ohio dirt. Rather thoughtful of them wasn't it?

Well! The big day has arrived. The highlight of the 10th annual Najac has arrived. Highlights of the Convention will be reached today with several activities. I guess the one that everybody is really "hepped" up about is the elections. I am sure all will agree that the "rasse-tassle" in the business meetings has certainly sparked interest in this important event. A word of advice to you new delegates. "Don't let anyone tell you how to vote. This is still a free country."

I hope you all get a chance to meet Mr. Colgate of the Colgate, Palmolive-Peet Company who is making his annual visit with us. He is one fine gentleman and would be worth your while to step up and make your self known to him. (continued next column)
