395,000 and Counting -- The A.B.C. Club of Brandywine Township is going into the final stretch in its mission to collect 600,000 Betty Crocker coupons to buy a kidney dialysis machine for the Medical Center. Mrs. Richard Low, project chairman, reports a count of 395,000 last week, with possibly 20,000 they didn't get counted exactly. Also, the News Bureau last week received more than 2,000 coupons. B. Harold Chetkow, associate professor in the Graduate School of Social Service, and his wife will be moving to Israel early this summer and would like to sell their home on the near northeast side. It will be available in early June. For information, call Dr. Chetkow at 264-7978 (office) or 283-2820 (home). Dr. Chetkow expects to be involved in community service work in Israel, either in Haifa or Ramat Gan, near Tel Aviv. Dr. Chetkow is no stranger to the Middle Eastern land: He spent four childhood years there, from 1936 to 1940 when Palestine was under the British mandate. He and his wife also visited Israel during the last Christmas vacation period. He does report a "dearth of social science literature" there and hints that he'd be willing to squeeze any donated volumes into luggage when they go.

REVENUE SHARING ANALYZED

Education could benefit greatly from President Nixon's general revenue sharing proposals as state and local governments find themselves in a revenue-expenditure squeeze.

According to Dr. Monte Juillerat, associate professor of agricultural economics at IUPUI, who attended the Conference on Revenue Sharing here last month and analyzed the Federal Revenue Sharing Proposal, revenue sharing is one alternative to relieve the pressure on state and local governments.

In effect, it proposes that Federal funds be distributed to and used by state and local governments essentially as they choose, which means that higher education has a chance to benefit.

Major features of the revenue sharing proposal are:

1. Funds will be distributed to the states according to population adjusted for revenue effort;
2. Roughly one-third of the funds represent net additions to total aid to states and local governments and may be used without restrictions. Remaining funds are from curtailment of special programs and must be used in the areas of community development, education, manpower training, transportation and law enforcement;
3. No governmental unit will receive less than it is now receiving from special programs to be curtailed;
4. Every city, county and township will be included according to its share of locally raised general revenues, but each state will have 10 per cent withheld if it fails to devise its own plan to supersede the Federal formula for intra-state distribution;
5. Indiana's share for the first year would be about $120 million in additional funds (about $9 million of this for Indianapolis);
6. There are no matching-fund requirements.

In summary, Dr. Juillerat says the plan would increase substantially the revenues available to the governments of Indiana. The funds may be used as each wishes, from more expenditures on education to a reduction in local taxation. If the plan doesn't pass, the Federal funds will, in all likelihood, be used for new or expanded Federal programs.
