A.A. DEGREE NURSING PROGRAM CLOSED; ALL UNDERGRAD REGISTRATION UP 28%

4 Registrations have been closed for the associate degree nursing program at IUPUI, but new students are still being accepted for most other IUPUI programs for the fall semester, which begins in August.

Although the two-year degree program in nursing is accepting about 50 per cent more students than were accepted last fall, IUPUI admissions officers said large numbers of qualified applicants already have filled all available openings in the program.

Nearly 150 new students were accepted in the associate degree nursing program, compared with about 100 last year. IUPUI admissions officers have notified high school guidance counselors and advised them to recommend other programs for students interested in health care.

Registrations for all IUPUI undergraduate programs for the fall semester currently are running about 28 per cent ahead of last year, according to John Krivacs, IUPUI admissions director. He is projecting an IUPUI enrollment reaching toward 20,000 for the opening of the 1972-73 academic year in August.

The projection is based on current admissions to undergraduate programs. Nearly 2,100 new students already have been accepted, compared with approximately 1,600 at this time last year.

The 2,059 students admitted so far include 1,051 women, 958 men, 127 veterans -- 13 of them are women, 219 married, 416 transfers from other colleges and universities (this does not include transfers from Purdue and Indiana University campuses).

Krivacs also reports many sections of undergraduate courses already are filled. His statistics do not include enrollments for Medicine, Dentistry, Law, Social Service, Graduate School, and most of the four-year nursing students.

LOOKING FOR A CAMP?

4 Parents seeking a summer camp for their children or an inexpensive and relaxing vacation spot for the family are reminded of the university's facility in Wisconsin, Camp Brosius.

As part of the program offered by the Normal College of the American Gymnastic Union, a division of IUPUI, Indiana University operates a children's camp on Elkhart Lake, Wisconsin. Located about 20 miles west of Sheboygan in a partially wooded area, the camp site lends itself agreeably to the program of supervised sports and group activity planned for the 1972 season, starting June 25.

The university also maintains rustic hotel, cottage and cabin facilities, accommodating approximately 70 guests, next to the children's camp. The informality of Camp Brosius makes it a restful and attractive place for family vacations. To those who enjoy swimming, diving, skiing, sailing, rowing, canoeing, fishing, sunning, or merely watching these sports, Camp Brosius offers full opportunity with its frontage on the clear blue, spring-fed waters of Elkhart Lake.

Two golf courses, a riding stable, and a go-kart track are within a few minutes' drive from Brosius, and in the area nearby are many antique and curio shops as well as geological phenomena and historical restorations of interest. The entertainment offered by a town theater, local resort hotels, and recreational attractions in villages close by assures a variety of appeal for teenage and young adult family members.

The daily rate per person, which includes meals except on Sunday evening, is $13 or $14, according to the accommodations, and the corresponding weekly rate is $85 or $90. For children under 10, the rate is one-half of the regular rates.

The manager of Camp Brosius, Jerad Yeagley of the HPER faculty, can furnish additional information concerning either the children's camp or the Brosius resort. Call AC 812 337-4538 or, after 6 p.m., AC 812 339-8974.

The News Bureau regrets that the list of faculty promotions published last week in the Green Sheet inadvertently omitted titles for Dr. Lee D. Fuller and Dr. LaForrest Garner. The error occurred because the promotion list was checked against the Indiana University Register, which fails to list the appropriate degrees for Drs. Fuller and Garner. Because such heavy use is made of the Register in the News Bureau, other units of the University, and by many off-campus agencies, the News Bureau rather urgently recommends that the listing be closely checked for accuracy and completeness. In the meantime, the News Bureau regrets the error and any embarrassment which may have been caused.

The News Bureau also regrets the omission (in transmission from the promotion list) of Mrs. Grace Penrod, School of Nursing, who was promoted to professor.

MONEY NEWS

IUPUI is cooperating with the U.S. Treasury Department in encouraging purchase of U.S. Savings Bonds through use of the Payroll Savings Plan. A message from Chancellor Maynard K. Hine about this service and opportunity will be sent to faculty and staff members this week. His message will be accompanied by explanatory leaflets and payroll-deduction authorization cards. Those interested in joining the plan are asked to complete the card and to return it to the Controller's Office in the Allied Health Building at the Medical Center. Please consider taking part in this regular, automatic, and convenient means of saving for future needs.

GOOD-BYE TO BANANA SPLITS AND THE EIGHT-MEAL DAY

For any IUPUI personnel who think it's time to weigh in to weigh less, Weight Watchers of Central Indiana will open a class at 4:45 p.m. Tuesday, June 6 in Room 122 of the Dental School. The class will meet each Tuesday at that time.

Jackie Scofield, a Noblesville member of Weight Watchers and a dental student, will be the lecturer.

TITLE CHANGES

Title changes for three administrators in the Indiana University Records and Admissions Office have been approved by the Board of Trustees.

M.D. Scherer, formerly university registrar, retains the title but also becomes system-wide director of admissions.

James R. Schellhammer, formerly director of admissions, now is director of admissions for the Bloomington campus.

Bruce T. Shutt, formerly associate university registrar, now is associate university registrar and associate director of admissions.

The title changes were needed "to further clarify functions at the university level and at regional campuses," Scherer explained.

Scherer and Shutt will be concerned with the planning of procedures and policies in registration and admissions for the entire university system, while Schellhammer's duties will be only at the Bloomington campus. Scherer pointed out that each I.U. regional campus has its own registrar and a director of admissions.

SICK SOCIETY?

A poll conducted by Daniel Yankelovich, Inc., indicates that 45 per cent of U.S. college students believe that we live in a "sick society," and 30 per cent would prefer to live somewhere other than the United States. Although the poll indicated a trend toward personal---as opposed to political---concerns, the attitudes revealed will give no comfort to believers in the status quo: students are more worried, not less, over the conduct of the war in Southeast Asia, and only 10 per cent of the students believe that political power in America rests with the people. Almost 60 per cent believe that corporations and other vested interests control U.S. political power. Other opinions which would have been considered radical a couple of years ago are now apparently established among students, even though activism has declined---a finding which leads to the interpretation that radical styles of thought are more easily established than radical political activity.

TRAVEL TIP

The Office of Academic Affairs in Bloomington has received from the National Association of Educational Buyers a list of hotels extending special hotel rates to college and university faculty and staff. Information on rates, addresses, and telephone numbers of hotels that extend special rates can be obtained by calling this office. The phone number is 812-337-4413.

Usually these hotels require that reservations be made in advance on institutional letterhead. Mentioning that Indiana University is a member of the National Association of Educational Buyers also is a good idea. When checking in at the hotel, you must provide identification showing position and institutional affiliation.

The list obtained from the National Association of Educational Buyers does not include all hotels. Whenever making reservations or traveling, asking about special rates because of your institutional affiliation is recommended.
