RHODESIAN AUTHOR, POLITICAL-ACTIVIST TO SPEAK

Miss Judith Todd, a 29-year-old journalist and author of The Right to Say No, will discuss the racial and political policies of her native Rhodesia Friday at IUPUI.

Miss Todd, the daughter of Garfield Todd, former prime minister of Rhodesia, will meet informally at noon in the faculty cafeteria, Provincial Dining Room, at the Union Building and again at 1:30 p.m. in the faculty lounge of Cavanaugh Hall.

A political activist in her native country, she has opposed the racial separation and white-rule policies of Rhodesia and last year spent five weeks in prison for activities the Ian Smith government felt were a threat to security. Though a Caucasian, she is the first official foreign representative to the United Nations from the African National Council, an organization of black Rhodesians.

Her book is an account of her imprisonment and a report on why black Rhodesians rejected an agreement for the future of Rhodesia worked out by the British and Rhodesian governments.

Miss Todd's appearance is being sponsored by the Department of Political Science and the Student Political Science Association.

AAO NEWS

In order to respond properly to executive orders, legislative directives, and HEW guidelines, the Affirmative Action Office is taking the following action to study salary distribution and to correct any possible inequities:

1. Data has been requested from the Office of Institutional Research which will present by department the salary, rank, sex, length of service, date in rank, and other pertinent data relating to required information of minorities.
2. Six committees have been appointed to study present programs and to recommend improvements in the matters of personnel, student, academic and non-academic persons, salary equalization, monitoring procedures, and grievance hearings. These committees are composed of faculty, staff, and students, where appropriate, and will begin work on specific affirmative action programs within two weeks.
3. Departmental chairpersons have been requested by the deans of each school to evaluate the present population of each department in both academic and non-academic positions and to study salary distributions to determine any possible salary inequities. Projected vacancies and anticipated recruitment and hirings are to be tabulated. From these figures individual affirmative action projection will be made for each department and school.
4. At the last meeting of the faculty council, the Affirmative Action Officer requested permission to place on file in the public library the salaries by name of the academic staff. The matter has been referred to faculty affairs committee for recommendation.
5. Because some 5,000 employees in various fields are involved in the study for affirmative action and because figures are imprecise in many instances and not up-to-date in others from present statistical and computerized reports, the scope is such that this office may be unable to make a matching survey in precise detail at this moment. Those persons wishing to seek particular information relative to salaries or to suspected inequities should consult either with Chancellor Hine or Affirmative Action Officer Frances Dodson Rhome (264-3963).
