EIGHT STUDENTS NEAR COMPLETION OF NEW NURSING PROGRAM

Next month eight students will complete their studies for a new degree in nursing, the clinical nursing degree in primary health care. The students were recognized as candidates for the degree at commencement exercises for IUPUI in May.

The Indiana University School of Nursing received a grant last year of nearly $300,000 from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation to be used over a three-year period to establish the degree program, according to Miss Magdalene Z. Fuller, assistant dean of nursing and acting director of the program.

The only course of its scope in the country, the program provides a degree halfway between the master's and the doctorate and has been developed to expand health care services for the general public. Administrators hope that the nurse with this training may be the patient's first contact with the health care system and that the nurse will be able to accept responsibility for the continuance of care -- advising the patient on how to stay healthy, evaluating and managing his symptoms, and providing proper referrals when necessary.

Persons in the program must be registered nurses holding at least the bachelor of science in nursing degree. They must also have completed 30 credit hours of graduate-level work. Some or all of the prerequisites earned the first year may be applied toward a master's degree, and thus the master's and specialist degrees may be combined. Three members of this first class have this combination.

Those receiving both the master of science and specialist degrees are Shirley Friedman, Carol Anderson and Kathryn Lewis.

The others qualifying for the specialist degree are Suzanne Druffner, Carlene Grimm, Marchusa Huff, K. Lorena McConnell and Marlene Tully. They all had received master's degrees before beginning the new program.

WIAN COMING IN LOUD AND CLEAR

A new transmitting antenna for WIAN radio means that its listeners can expect vast improvement in their reception of its programming. The antenna is now mounted at the 534-foot level of the transmitter of Public Television Station WFYI. The height above average terrain of this new antenna is 560 feet, compared to the 35 feet of the previous location at Shortridge High School.

The new antenna is also both horizontally and vertically polarized, thus increasing the "pick-up" on line-cord, "rabbit ears," and automobile receiving antennas.

All this means that you can now tune in to the station's varied programming, including the IUPUI Magazine. On Monday's (July 19) edition, Dr. James R. East, associate dean of the School of Liberal Arts, will discuss the Weekend College program at 3:30 p.m. That's 90.1 on your FM dial.

FOUNDATION FACTS

The Indianapolis-Marion County Public Library has been designated a regional depository of the Foundation Center, a repository of information on philanthropic foundations headquartered in New York City.

The local collection of the Foundation Center's reference materials, the only such collection in Indiana, is in the Social Sciences Division at IMCPL's

Central Library. A microfiche reader is available for reading the annual reports of more than 350 foundations whose primary purpose is the awarding of grants. (If you go, take your own notepaper because the reader does not make print-outs.)

Besides the microfiche reports, IMCPL has The Foundation Directory, which lists foundations by state; The Foundation Grant Index, which lists recipients and, in some instances, the size of their grants; and a collection of annual reports of 500 Indiana foundations on aperture cards.

NEWS 'N' NOTES FROM HERE 'N' THERE

Exhibit -- Pharmacy display this week in University Hospital will be Smith, Kline & French Laboratories on Wednesday from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Looking -- A new graduate program in perinatal nursing, funded by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, will be offered by the School of Nursing which needs two faculty members and one media producer-director for the program. For the faculty, a master's degree in nursing is a minimum requirement, plus experience and preparation in neonatology and/or maternity nursing. Call Dr. Frances Cleary, Ext. 7158. The media producer-director should have a master's degree in instructional design and experience in program evaluation and media production. Call Dr. Winston Long, Ext. 4567.

Go West? -- The Oregon College of Education is looking for a new president. One of eight campus units administered by the Oregon State Board of Higher Education, it is a liberal arts college of about 3,500 students and specializes in the preparation of teachers and research in teacher education on the undergraduate and graduate levels. September 1 is the deadline for receiving nominations. Address inquiries to Edgar H. Smith, Chairman, Presidential Nominating Committee, Oregon College of Education, Monmouth, Oregon 97361.

The Word Spreads -- Word of the work of the Office of Hospital Education here has spread to Waco, Texas, where the continuing education department of the Baylor University School of Medicine has requested information on a course called "Organizing Training Programs." Currently in progress here, the course was developed under the supervision of Jane Kleinhans and probably will be offered again in the fall for personnel in I.U. Hospitals. For more information, call Ext. 8110.
