BLOCK PARTY ON MONDAY TO CELEBRATE BUSINESS/SPEA GROUND BREAKING

A block party with plenty of food and refreshments will lend an appropriate celebratory theme to next week's ground-breaking ceremonies for the School of Business/School of Public and Environmental Affairs Building.

About 5,000 invitations have been issued to business, government, academic and community leaders to help IUPUI and Indianapolis mark the beginnings of the $8-million, four-story building. But you do not need a formal invitation to come and enjoy the lunch-hour block party on Blake Street, between Michigan and New York streets. All IUPUI faculty, staff and students are encouraged -- urged -- to attend.

Food offerings (knockwurst and bratwurst on a stick, corn-on-the-cob, ice cream and caramel apples at 25¢ a serving) will start at 11:30 a.m. Monday (September 25) with the formal ground-breaking program at 12:15 p.m. A "little digging music" and tuneful backdrop will be provided by the Indiana Brass Quintet.

University officials predict that completion of the building (projected for the fall of 1980) will promote even more than in the past a "partnership in the public interest" between the two schools to provide education, research and service to Indianapolis and Indiana.

According to School of Business Dean Schuyler F. Otteson: "The I.U. School of Business is one school, one faculty, one curriculum with the same undergraduate and master's programs in both Indianapolis and Bloomington. Now, for the first time in the history of the Indianapolis campus, the School of Business has a home. As the School of Business gets better, it will make a bigger contribution to the community. With the new facility we will truly become a part of the city's day-to-day working life."

The I.U. School of Business at Indianapolis has grown from its downtown extension days to its present enrollment of nearly 2,000 undergraduate and graduate students. The Bloomington and Indianapolis campuses have a combined enrollment of more than 6,000 business students and a business faculty of 200 in what is one school of business with identical programs in both Indianapolis and Bloomington.

Charles F. Bonser, dean of the School of Public and Environmental Affairs, sees the new building as vital to the continued expansion of this rapidly growing school. "Construction of the new building has been of highest priority for the school. It will provide us a better opportunity to meet the needs and demands of Indiana's public sector, and especially those of the Indianapolis community, by bringing together in one facility the various programs and divisions of the school. The combination of federal, state and local government organizations makes Indianapolis the state's center for governmental activity. SPEA, therefore, has a natural mission in Indianapolis," said Dean Bonser.

The School of Public and Environmental Affairs, established in 1972, has more than 1,800 undergraduate and graduate students -- many employed in the public sector -- enrolled at I.U. campuses throughout Indiana. More than 600 are studying at IUPUI. A program of teaching, research and service is supported by some 200 SPEA faculty and staff with many commuting from one campus to another.

The School of Business/SPEA Building will connect with the existing Engineering and Technology Building and University Library at West Michigan and Blake streets. The second-level main floor will have an enclosed walkway to the existing Engineering and Technology Building, with plans to extend it to future buildings.

The lower level of the building will include SPEA laboratories and library storage. The ground floor will include a 100-student classroom, a student lounge and audio-visual storage.

The second floor will include one 100-student classroom, four 70-student classrooms, four 40-student classrooms, three seminar rooms, two typing laboratories, one word-processing laboratory, business and SPEA administrative offices, the business Division of Research, student lounge and a staff lounge.

The fourth floor will consist of an executive education suite with two classrooms and a conference room, 75 business and SPEA faculty offices, 30 part-time faculty and graduate assistant offices, a faculty lounge and conference room.

Planning funds for the 115,700-square-foot building were provided through the Indiana Commission for Higher Education by act of the 1975 Indiana General Assembly. The 1977 General Assembly appropriated $8-million for construction.

This construction continues the plan for establishing all Indianapolis-based I.U. and Purdue courses on the main IUPUI campus on West Michigan Street by the end of the 1990s. Nearly $100-million has been spent on construction in this effort in the past 10 years and nearly $40-million in projects is currently on the drawing boards.

HARVEY ACCEPTS NEW PROFESSORSHIP IN LAW SCHOOL

William F. Harvey, dean of the I.U. School of Law-Indianapolis, will resign that post to accept an invitation to become the Carl M. Gray Professor of Advocacy, effective July 1, at the school.

The I.U. board of trustees at their September 9 meeting at Bloomington, announced that a major gift had created an endowment aimed at furthering the education of law students in trial advocacy. The gift from former trustee Carl M. Gray of Petersburg established the Carl M. and Eulala M. Gray Trial Advocacy Endowment Fund within the I.U. Foundation. Income from the endowment will be divided equally between the I.U. Law School in Bloomington and Indianapolis. (The law school on the Bloomington campus is studying the exact use of the income to enhance its programs in trial advocacy.)

I.U. President John W. Ryan said it was "entirely appropriate that Dean Harvey, who has overseen unparalleled growth in the law school in Indianapolis, be the first person to accept this professorship."

Harvey, dean of the law school in Indianapolis for more than five years, will retain the title of professor of law. He is the author of 14 volumes on civil procedure and evidence, and of many articles on law and medicine, and he has written and presented a number of cases in state and federal courts.

In other personnel actions, the trustees approved the appointments of Paul J. Nagy as associate dean of the faculties at IUPUI and Dr. Robert M. Daugherty as associate dean of the I.U. School of Medicine.

Nagy has been chairman of the Department of Philosophy at IUPUI since 1971. He will continue to hold the position of project coordinator of international programs for I.U. For the past year he also has been associate director of the Center for American Studies at Warsaw University in Poland, a responsibility he will keep until the end of next semester.

Dr. Daugherty will direct the school's Division of Postgraduate and Continuing Medical Education and coordinate the school's master's and Ph.D. degree programs with the Graduate School. Dr. Daugherty, whose appointment is effective immediately, will hold the academic ranks of professor of medicine and physiology. He has been serving at the University of Wyoming as dean of the School of Medicine and assistant to the president.

NEWS 'N' NOTES FROM HERE 'N' THERE

Bring a Toy to Work -- The IUPUI Child Care Center (at the corner of West and Michigan streets) has opened but the youngsters need toys -- especially fire trucks, building sets and learning toys. If you (or your children) would like to donate, just take toys to collection sites at the Student Services Office in the Union Building, main lobby of Cavanaugh, Hideaway in University Library or the Krannert Science Building at 38th Street. The toy collection is sponsored by the Student Services Office and Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity. Friday is the last day for collection. Remember, the toys do not have to be new but they should be useable. Call Pat Hall at Ext. 2546 for more information.

Programs -- Several two-hour Career Development Programs are on the Personnel Division's agenda for next month. Among them are "Purchasing Procedures" on October 3, "Travel Procedures" on October 17 and "Statement of Accounts" on October 19. All are scheduled from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. in the School of Nursing. If you wish to attend, please call Ext. 8241. Also, the Personnel Division has set up fall classes for the clerical staff. Call Mary Jane Maxwell (Ext. 8241) for details and registration information.

Coming Up -- A weekend seminar on "Radiation Therapy Concepts in the Treatment of Head and Neck Cancer" will be presented October 7-8 in the Medical Science Building. Guest faculty will be Dr. Gilbert Fletcher from the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston and Dr. C.C. Wang from Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. The program is sponsored by the Department of Otolaryngology. For more information, call Ext. 8424.
