"Distant Crises," a two-day conference aimed at a full discussion of the "critical issues facing international education as we approach the 21st Century," opens October 5 at the Indiana Interchurch Center. The IUPUI conference, open to public participation, will be a dialogue between experts on international affairs and members of the Indiana educational community.

In her address on October 5 at 10 a.m., education specialist Dr. Rose Lee Hayden will include the lack of efficiency and congressional support of international education programs funded by the government, foreign students in the United States and the low number (under 1 percent) of college-educated students enrolled in courses with international or cross-cultural studies.

Dr. Hayden is the director of the Division of International Educational Relations of the American Council on Education. From 1972 to 1974, she was the assistant executive director of the Midwest Universities Consortium for International Activities, Inc. which counts I.U. among its members.

Dr. Hayden's address will be followed by a panel discussion open to questions and answers from the audience. Panelists include Dr. Alan Shusterman, executive director of the Indiana Committee for the Humanities; Dr. Karl Kalp, superintendent of Indianapolis Public Schools; Rodger D. Coleman, director of Neighborhood Services for the City of Indianapolis, and John A. Harrold, director of curriculum of the Indiana State Department of Public Instruction.

The speaker for the conference banquet is Peter Bird Martin, executive director for the American Universities Field Staff. His address, "New Approaches to International-Global Education," includes a preview of the new PBS series, "Global Papers," which airs during the week of November 12.

The banquet is October 5 at 6:30 p.m. at the Union Building. Tickets may be purchased from the IUPUI Office of International Programs, University Library, Room 002. They are $6.50 each, and $3 for university students with a valid I.D. card.

Two concurrent sessions are planned for 1:30 p.m. on October 5: "Multinational Corporations and the Global Education Process" with speakers James T. Morton, Eli Lilly International Corporation; Joan Joshi, Institute of International Education, and Martin J. Shallenberger, Standard Oil Company (Indiana), and a session on "Nationalism and Global Education" with Richard Straus, director of academic programs at the International Communication Agency.
Friday's program, also at the Interchurch Center, includes two concurrent sessions at 9:30 a.m.: "International Organizations and Global Education" with Dr. Aklilu Habte, director of education with the World Bank, and Dr. Robert W. Schmeding, from the Agency for International Development with the Department of State, and "Human Rights and International Education Exchange" with Dr. Dennison Rusinow, American Universities Field Staff.

At 1:30 p.m. Robert G. Hanvey, author-educator with the Center for Global Perspectives, will speak about "The Cultural Dimensions of Global Education" and Edward L. Meador, director of the International Division of the U.S. Office of Education will speak on "Humanitarianism and Global Education." Dr. John V. Lombardi, dean of international programs at Indiana University, will speak at the concluding session at 3 p.m.

There is a registration fee of $2 for the conference which does not include any meals. Box lunches will be available for purchase at the Interchurch Center on Thursday and the International Center on Friday. Registration deadline is Friday, (September 29). Registration and reservations are being handled by the IUPUI Office of International Programs, Ext. 7294.

Sponsors, besides the IUPUI Office of International Programs, are: Indiana Department of Public Instruction, International Center of Indianapolis, IUPUI Lectures and Convocations Committee, Indiana Council for the Social Studies, IUPUI Division of Continuing Studies, Indianapolis Council on World Affairs and the Ford International Visitors Exchange. Funding for the conference was made available from the IUPUI Lectures and Convocations Committee and the Ford International Visitors Exchange.

NEWS 'N' NOTES FROM HERE 'N' THERE

Getting There (Part I) -- A new I.U. system map, which features IUPUI locations on one side and all other campuses on the other, is now available for campus units. This map replaces the IUPUI Campus Guide which circulated on this campus only. Quantities of the new map are available, free, from the Publications/Information Services Office. Call Ext. 2101.

Getting There (Part II) -- Harold Jones of Metro advises that the IUPUI Express will be rerouted through campus because of Blake Street's closing between Michigan and New York streets. The bus will maintain its current route until reaching Michigan from the north. At that point it will turn west onto Michigan, south at Agnes, and east at New York. The stop on the east side of University Library will be eliminated and replaced by a stop on the west side of Lecture Hall. Also, the bus will be running on a 20-minute schedule (approximately). The weekday service runs from 10:30 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. Fare is 10¢ a ride.

Attn: Medical Illustrations Customers -- The Medical Illustrations Department will be understaffed October 23-27, so please bring your work in ahead of schedule, or wait till October 30.
Coming Up -- The Fall Faculty/Staff meeting will be held October 12 at 3:30 p.m. in the School of Nursing auditorium. This meeting will be combined with the Faculty Council meeting and feature an address by Dr. Glenn W. Irwin, Jr., I.U. vice-president, Indianapolis.

Primary Concern -- A Primary Health Care Conference is scheduled for October 6 at the School of Nursing. Special speakers will be Huguette LaBelle, director general of the Policy, Research and Evaluation Branch, Department of Indiana and Northern Affairs, Ottawa, Canada, and Dr. Karl L. Manders, director of the Rehabilitation Center for Pain at Community Hospital. Call Ext. 2129 for information.

Honor -- A symposium on analytical chemistry honoring Dr. Frank J. Welcher, who retired from the faculty last spring after 47 years of teaching at I.U. at Indianapolis and IUPUI, has been scheduled for October 4. It will begin at 9 a.m. in Room 231 of the Krannert Science Building on the 38th Street Campus. The day will be proclaimed "Frank J. Welcher Day" by Indianapolis Mayor William H. Hudnut. The symposium has been planned to coincide with the fall meeting of the Midwest Universities Analytical Chemistry Conference (MUACC) at Bloomington October 5-7. MUACC has invited its members to participate in the Welcher event.
