PREFACE

THIS second volume of "Kiwanis Activities" is a compiled summary of some of the accomplishments of Kiwanis clubs whose membership includes over 83,000 leading business and professional men in over 1100 cities of the United States and Canada as reported on the monthly attendance reports received from these clubs from July 1, 1922, to July 1, 1923.

This partial report of the activities of Kiwanis clubs is published, first, to suggest to all clubs the varied field for Kiwanis activity; secondly, to impress upon all the service which Kiwanis as an organization is rendering in building individual and community character.

In this compilation, we direct attention to several general policies which have been set forth as guides for intensified Kiwanis service. These policies arise from the development of the club's accomplishments which have grown to International proportions. Even though it was not practical to arrange the activities of the clubs according to the general policies, it will be evident—interwoven as they are—that they make up the whole fabric of Kiwanis service. These policies include:

The emphasis and intensification of service of all Kiwanis clubs in behalf of under-privileged children.

The development of better relations between the farmer and the city man.

The aggressive development of a co-operative spirit towards Chambers of Commerce and the encouragement of a co-ordination of activities.

The fostering of a fuller realization of the responsibilities of patriotic citizenship.

While work on these policies is made more intensive, activity on established policies continues vigorously. This includes constant development of better business standards and methods, music at club meetings, and conventions, community singing, and interest and action in all public affairs.

The work of the clubs on two of the aforementioned policies:—that of service to under-privileged children, and better relationship between the farmer and city man, has been classified separately. The other policies are so interwoven with the regular activities of the clubs, that separate compilation under each would have meant duplication.

All the activities of the clubs clearly indicate that the individual members understand what patriotic citizenship is, what its responsibilities are, and how they have so widely fostered practical application of such realization. Each subject is a valuable adjunct to such citizenship.

While the policy of maintaining a distinctive quality of membership and giving increased attention to Kiwanis education and standardization of clubs is an internal problem with the entire organization, the activities of the clubs, again, clearly indicate how it has been adhered to. The leadership of Kiwanis in all communities would not have been possible without quality leaders, who fully appreciate the tremendous significance of Kiwanis.

The advisability of including definite plans used by various clubs in accomplishing their works in this booklet was considered. This would have necessitated details regarding the work of almost every club. In most cases the activity itself suggests how the club accomplished the result. Any club desiring further details of any activity herein presented should write International Headquarters for the information.

Much of the work of Kiwanis clubs is continuous. The individual activities may be for a day or a month, or other period, but in most cases, they are steps in carrying out on-going policies. Thus Kiwanis becomes closely identified with certain movements in all communities.

The successful consummation of any activity by one club does not necessarily mean that it would be wise for another club to undertake that particular activity. Before engaging in community service, each Kiwanis club should carefully survey its own field and its own capabilities before making the initial step. The club should remain within its own province, and be careful not to duplicate the efforts of other organizations, or to assume community responsibilities which are properly matters for consideration by the entire community. In addition to a major program each club should adopt a minor program of smaller activities as a means of holding membership interest while producing the slower results in bringing the major program to a successful conclusion.

While the activities listed in this booklet are classifiable manifestations of the working of the Kiwanis spirit, there is that great intangible value which comes from the influence of high minded men, whose unselfish service is a lasting inspiration and an enduring stimulus in any community. In viewing the picture of this many-sided and tremendous power of utilitarian idealism, one should have in mind the individual work of Kiwanians, which makes Kiwanis a wide-spread personal influence.

Kiwanis is an organized force for community progress. It is a representative influence, organized for the advancement of public welfare in its many phases, for the stimulation of morals, charities, better sanitation, better citizenship, civic improvement, obedience to law and all the tenets of better living.

Kiwanis is a leader in the development of civic and social consciousness and in the transforming of such consciousness into the permanent building of strong individual and community personality and leadership.
