DR. ROESKE CITED BY NATIONAL AAUW

Dr. Nancy Roeske, professor of psychiatry in the School of Medicine, has received the 1979 Achievement Award of $3,000 from the American Association of University Women Educational Foundation. The presentation was made at the recent AAUW biennial national convention at the Albuquerque (N.M.) Convention Center.

Dr. Roeske was cited for her "achievements with the family-oriented approach to the mental health problems of children" as well as her "commitment to a humanistic approach to medicine, both as a psychiatrist to her patients and as an educator of health professionals." The citation also extolled her efforts to improve the status of women in the medical field. For three years she headed the American Psychiatric Association's Task Force on Women.

The Achievement Award, inaugurated in 1943, is presented annually to an American woman in recognition of distinguished scholarly or professional accomplishment. Previous recipients include the late Dr. Margaret Mead (1978) and Washington Gov. Dixie Lee Ray (1975). Dr. Roeske is the third woman physician to receive the award.

Considered one of the leading national experts in mental health problems of visually handicapped children, Dr. Roeske was director of the Riley Child Guidance Clinic from 1964 to 1973. In Indiana she introduced a family-oriented approach to children's mental health problems, now adopted by most children's mental health facilities. She has emphasized multidisciplinary teaching for mental health professionals. She now is director of undergraduate curriculum and coordinator of medical education in the Department of Psychiatry.
