THIS MONTH AT ISC: TENNIS & BALLET

The much heralded "Taj Mahal of tennis," the brand-new Indianapolis Sports Center, will make its athletic debut this week with the U.S. Open Clay Court Championships and its cultural debut later this month with two "pops concerts" by the Indianapolis Ballet Theater.

Tennis stars like Evonne Goolagong-Cawley and Chris Evert-Lloyd, Jimmy Connors and Manuel Orantes will be competing in matches Monday through Sunday at the new stadium. Built on I.U.-owned land which has been leased to the city for 20 years, the stadium, which can seat up to 10,000 persons, lies just south of the School of Law. For ticket information about the tournament, call 639-8888.

The new International Boy's 18 Junior Tennis Championships, sponsored by the U.S. Clay Court Championships, will follow August 13-19 with 32 U.S. players and 32 foreign players.

Then the Indianapolis Ballet Theater will take over center court August 25-26 with two 8:30 p.m. pops concerts featuring Elaine Bauer and David Brown, principal dancers of the Boston Ballet. Admission will be $3 per adult and $1 for children under 16. For these two pioneering concerts, however, blocks of 50 adult tickets are available for $100 per block. For information, call 923-3937.

COLLEGE NOT A SCARY PLACE, TEENS LEARN

Life on a big-city college campus is not a fearsome thing, say a dozen Indianapolis-area teen-agers who sampled college-level courses at IUPUI this summer. The 12 students participated in the IUPUI pilot program, "Summer Sampler," which offers high school seniors a chance to earn up to four hours of credit.

Avon High School senior Julie Laycock said, "Attending this class has made college more realistic for me. Before, I didn't know what to expect in college courses. Now I realize they are something I can handle and look forward to."

Participants in the program must have completed their junior year in high school, rank in the top 20 percent of their class, and be highly recommended by the high school principal or guidance director. "Summer Sampler" started July 5 and ended Thursday (August 2).

Five of the students were enrolled in an elementary engineering design course, which exposes the students to the different engineering disciplines and has three components: lectures, laboratories, and a design project.

Instructor of the course and chairman of the Division of Engineering Kenneth R. Dunipace commented, "This is the first time in 12 years of teaching engineering that I have had an all-female class."

Only one male student enrolled in the IUPUI summer program. Richmond (Ind.) native Charles Ignacio took the English course in elementary composition. The course is the standard expository writing class for college freshmen and emphasizes sentence structure, diction, and the organization and development of the paragraph and the 500-word essay.

Ignacio, a Roncalli High School senior, explained, "I enjoy English and wanted to experience a college-level course. I also wanted to keep busy this summer."

Charlotte Sargeant, instructor of the English composition course, and Dunipace are impressed with the students' performance. Mrs. Sargeant said, "These students were sharp-minded and they were fun to teach because they were eager to learn."

"I didn't realize how much I don't know," said Pam Pinner, a senior from John Marshall High School. "I learned something new every day."

Not only did "Summer Sampler 1979" provide these students with transferable college credit, the program also showed the students firsthand that college is not the formidable venture they believed it to be.
